FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

We just learned that ex-Mayor, and who knows, possibly our next-Mayor, C. Fenn Jones, has been ill at his home for the past two weeks. Mr. Jones is one of our favorite citizen, and our sincere wish is that he be up and out again soon. Reports are that he is improving. Mr. Jones served Clanton as its Mayor for four years and served her well.

In case you didn't know, there will be five Tuesdays in February. A letter comes to our desk stating that if we would send them a certain amount of money for a magazine that we would learn what the weekly news editor thought of big business—same amount, we'll tell them ink of big business.

We received last week a "Certificate of Merit" from the Pulp Wood Industries. It is very pretty to look at. About 12x18 inches in size and was given us by the Pulp Wood Industries.

Guess we must have the flu this week. We have that don't give a d— feeling.

The Bonnie Hands were up for the holidays, from LaFayette. Bonnie and Pearl and us and our'n, have been together on Christmas now for the sixth straight year. We spent Christmas night pop calling and going over old times and old places together.

R. C. Williams is batting around 100 now. In fact he is batting 100. On two trips to the forest this year to hunt deer he has bagged one both times. The week after Christmas R. C. and several others made another trip south to the deer country with the above results. The third time is the charm. Do it again, R. C., and the unbelievers will be forced to admit that it isn't luck at all—it's skill.

We're sorry to hear of the illness of R. W. Williamson. He underwent heart operation recently and has voice. He has scores of friends in Clanton County who are wishing for him the best, and hoping that he will regain his voice and be back at home and at work soon.

New Year's Day in Clanton passed without ceremony or fanfare. No celebrations of any kind marked the event nor, so far as we know, did any bell ringing or horn blowing take place at midnight. It was just another night and another day. Folks are so serious these days to take their celebrating very lightly. Their one aim is in getting a war won and peace restored.

Young wife: "Now, Bill, I want you to see the minister right away and get him to christen the baby." Bill, who was a shipyard worker: "What? Do you mean that you are going to let some one hit that little thing over the head with a bottle?"

Ran into Alex Hayes down town Monday. He's looking fine and was getting ready to return to Camp Tuesday morning. However, Reba and the baby are staying a while with her mother. Alex had a new class starting training on the ninth of January and had to get back on the job. He's still at Arcadia, Fla.

We will never get done marveling at the power of the Press. It accomplishes so much, in so many ways. The day before Christmas, Calvin Robinson's wife lost two $5 bills in town. According to Mrs. Robinson they were lost somewhere between Jess Motes house and the Ideal Cafe. Last week he advertised in the News for the money. Monday morning a man walked up to him on the street and handed him the two $5 bills, told him where he had picked them up

Years 1942-43 Are Compared By Welfare Department Head

In order to analyze the County Department of Public Welfare Program, a study has been made of the expenditures for December, 1942, and December, 1943. The comparison shows that in December, 1943, all public assistance average grants were increased, while the percentage of administration was decreased.

The Old Age Assistance average grants in December, 1943, were increased 10.06 over the December, 1942, average grants. The aid to the blind showed an average increase of $1.00, and the aid to dependent children an increase of $12.55, and the aid to the handicapped $7.32. The reason for this increase in the average grants in December, 1943, is because the county's appropriation has been increased because of ear-marked money and also because the incorporated towns in Clanton County appropriated ear-marked money in December, 1943, and none was appropriated from towns in December, 1942. The local appropriations are matched by State and Federal money.

The cost of administration, which includes salary, travel and office expenses, in December, 1942, was 8.35 percent of the total expenditures. In December, 1943, the total administration was 6.72 percent, a decrease of 23 percent in the cost of administration. The decrease in administration is because more money is being expended with practically the same staff with little increase in administration.

and told him that he was glad to have helped him out. That, my friends, is an honest man. Once and for all, that should put a stop to the old joke about the plumber forgetting his tools and charging for the time it takes to go back after them—You see, the funder was Gene Gore, our local plumber, and as you have probably surmised, a very honest man.

Young Mr. W. Y. Keel was in to see us Tuesday morning. Mr. Keel is 82 years young and in pretty good health for one of his years. He has been a constant subscriber to the News since the first one was "off the press," some twenty odd years ago. He says he's never missed an issue. We think it's time for Mr. Keel to be placed on our "Honorary" list. For so loyal and long-standing a friend, we are henceforth sending to Mr. Keel the Clanton County News complimentary, for the rest of his life.

County Quota In 4th War Loan $465,000

Chilton County's quota for the Fourth War Loan which opens January 18, 1944, will be $465,000, according to the announcement of Ed Leigh McMillan, Chairman of the War Finance Committee for Alabama.

Of this quota, $279,000 must be sold in E Bonds, Mr. McMillan said, pointing out that more and greater emphasis is being placed on selling Bonds to small buyers.

"In order to increase Bond buying among small investors," Mr. McMillan said, "we are placing greater emphasis than ever before on personal solicitation."

The national slogan for the Fourth War Loan will be, "Let's All Back the Attack" and the state slogan will be "Plant Alabama's Colors on the Fighting Fronts."

The quota for this district is $3,102,000. Quotas for the counties composing the district are as follows:

Chilton, $465,000; Dallas, $1,650,000; Marengo, $466,000; Perry, $262,000; Wilcox, $259,000.

Big Increase Shown At Thorsby Milk Plant

O. R. Coppage, vice president in charge of Foremost Dairies, visited Chilton County last Thursday on an inspection tour. He was accompanied by Mr. Barber, who is vice president of the Birmingham Branch.

According to Mr. Coppage and Mr. Barber, Thorsby's Plant is the fastest growing plant in the territory and within a four months period, surpassed all other plants in production, with the exception of the Montgomery Plant.

Thorsby's Plant is receiving 5,000 pounds daily now and with the cooperation of Chilton County, will reach 20,000 pounds within a few months, Mr. Coppage said. This brings to our county a $1,000 per week payroll, and with the increase would mean $5,000 per week going into the pockets of the farmers in this section.

Mr. Barber stated that there were now 180 ships taking advantage of the convenience of the Thorsby Plant to market their milk.

FOOD WASTED IN HOMES OF THIS COUNTY WOULD SUPPLY MANY SOLDIERS

Chilton County's 6,655 housewives could feed 1,924 soldiers for a year with the food wasted annually in the homes of the county, an official of the county's leading food distributor estimated today.

This amazing figure is based on accurate government statistics which indicate that at least 3,686,870 pounds of food are wasted annually in Chilton County homes, according to Harvey A. Baum, head of A & P Tea Company's produce-buying operations. Citizens eat about 1,514 pounds of food each year, he concluded, while the average soldier "puts away" 1,916 pounds annually.

GRADUATED FROM AIR GUNNERY SCHOOL

Cpl. William E. Bell son of Mrs. G. H. Bell, Clanton, Ala., was graduated Monday from the Army Air Forces Flexible Gunnery School at Fort Myers, Fla.

Now qualified as an aerial gunner, he will become a member of one of the thousands of bomber crews. He will receive his crew training at an operational training field in the United States.

Hundreds of gunners are graduated each week from the school located near Fort Myers. The course lasts only six weeks and covers everything from the power-operated turret of a large twin-engine bomber on special missions over the Gulf of Mexico.

Cpl. Bell was born on May 17, 1910, and has been in the Army Air Forces nine months. He was creditman for Sinclair Refining Co. before he enlisted. He has graduated from the Radio School, Scott Field, Ill.

Tax Assessor Asks All To Assess Taxes On Property By Jan. 17

Chilton County Tax Assessor, N. L. (Buck) Roberts, is urging all real and personal property owners in Chilton County to be sure and make their Tax assessments before January 17th. That is the last day that you can claim Homestead exemption and it is to your interest that you do this before that time. According to Mr. Roberts, after that time you can claim no exemptions whatever, and it will be his duty to add a 10 percent penalty. The Assessor has no recourse but to follow the law in this matter and you are the one who will bear the extra burden. Be sure to assess your property before this penalty has to be added.

ROBINSON - BENNETT

Miss Doris Marie Bennett and Mr. James Melvin Robinson, of Birmingham, were quietly married December 26th, at the home of T. W. Bryan. Mrs. Robinson is the niece of Miss Ada Bennett.

PROPER CARE INCREASES WINTER EGG PRODUCTION

Auburn, Ala. — There are several practices to follow in order to keep egg production at a high rate during 1944 reports John E. Ivey, extension poultryman. Here are practices suggested for the winter months.

Give the birds plenty of warm water on cold days. Feed mash several times daily instead of filling hoppers once a week. Feed a most crumbly mash once daily. Maintain good body weight by grain feeding. Check birds for body lice. Keep 6 to 10 inches of dry litter in the house.

Extending the bread enrichment program designed to help maintain an adequate nutritional wartime diet for the American people, the WFA requires that beginning January 16, 1944, all types of yeast-raised commercial bakery products—to the extent that white flour is used—must contain specified minimum food values.

Starting about March 1, 1944, supplemental B and C gasoline coupons and E and R coupons—for non-highway use—will be issued in strips rather than in book form and the coupons will be serially numbered, the OPA says.

Mr and Mrs Jimmie Hodges of Birmingham were the week end guests of Mr and Mrs T. C. McSwain and Mrs Ed Nunn.

Great Lumber And Pulpwood Shortage Is Expected

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the lumber industry. From the best information available Project Forester Seaborn Johnson tells us that the shortage of timber products now constitutes our most critical raw materials problem. The lumber production deficit in 1944 is expected to reach at least four billion board feet, or about the same as it was in 1943, but with one great difference. In 1943 the nation still had a reserve stockpile of lumber to draw on while in 1944 this stockpile is not going to be available. The Canadian-American shortage of pulpwood is expected to be about six and a half million cords, which would be an awfully big pile of wood. The newspapers are among the paper users who are going to feel this shortage.

Both the lumber and pulpwood industries face these tremendous shortages principally because of a labor shortage, both in the number of men available and in the rate of production of the woods workers. Strange as it may seem, the yearly production of the average woods worker was less in 1943 than in the pre-war years. Absenteeism has been a major factor in this reduced rate of production. Forester Johnson explains that over 75 percent of the lumber in Alabama is cut on small mills and that if a part of a mill crew fails to turn out for work, the other part can't work and so the production of the mill is lost for the day.

At present, there is not acute shortage of standing timber but the current rate and methods of cutting are bound to bring up future problems of this kind. Economists look for a continued strong demand for forest products and the landowner who puts his forest in the most productive condition will be in the best position to profit from this demand. The present high value of standing timber presents an opportunity to the landowner to help his country by putting timber on the market and to help himself and the country in the future by having the timber cut so as to provide for future growth.

Most landowners need the advice of a Forester in planning to have their timber cut properly. Anyone who wants this kind of advice can get it from a state or federal forester by applying either through the county agent or directly to the Project Forester of the Timber Production War Project. In addition to helping landowners, these Project Foresters are interested in helping pulpwood and sawmill operators with their varied production problems, and they certainly have their problems.

Small Amount of Chicken Makes a Loaf
(See Recipes Below)

Little Makes Lots!

There were several requisites for recipes which made today's column and I think you'll appreciate all of them. First, they must be easy on the budget; second, they must be easy on ration points; and third, they must be leftovers, but inco-nito!

All three are particularly timely because you have probably splurged during the holidays and want to take it easy on points and the budget now; and third, you may have a few leftovers that want things done with them but still won't taste like leftovers because you know how the family sniffs at them. So, here we go, first of all with leftover pieces from that holiday loaf:

Chicken Noodle Loaf.
(Serves 8)

- 1/2 to 1 cup diced cooked chicken
- 3 eggs, well beaten
- 1/2 pound noodles
- 3 tablespoons butter or substitute
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups milk
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup soft bread crumbs
- 1 teaspoon chopped parsley
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper

Cook noodles in boiling, salted water until tender (2 quarts water, 1 teaspoon salt). Drain. Meanwhile, prepare white sauce of butter, flour and milk. Combine chicken, eggs, noodles, white sauce, crumbs and seasonings. Pour into a well-greased loaf pan 9 by 5 by 3 inches. Bake in a moderately slow (325-degrees) oven until firm in center, about 1 hour. Let stand for about 8 minutes after removal from oven, then loosen around edges. Invert on hot platter. Slice to serve. If desired, serve with cheese, mushroom or vegetable sauce. Garnish with pickled pears and spiced pears.

Are there remainders of a veal roast still standing in the refrigerator? You can make a perfectly delicious chop suey from a few cupfuls of the roast meat.

Veal Chop Suey.
(Serves 6)

- 2 cups roast veal, cut in strips
- 2 sliced onions
- 1 cup green pepper, cut in strips
- 4 tablespoons melted shortening
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 2 cups celery, cut in strips
- 2 cups sliced radishes
- 3 tablespoons cold water
- 2 tablespoons flour

Hot cooked rice

Cook veal, green pepper and onions in shortening, in a large skillet for about 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Add seasonings and celery. Cover and cook slowly for 5 minutes.

Point Pointers: When you run low on staples for processed foods, be sure to find fresh ones to substitute. To extend a processed food, use it with a fresh, seasonal food.

Using foods that are grown near your own community helps the transportation problem, as well as your near-by grower.

For children or invalids who use canned, pureed foods, extend by mixing with milk and cream. Use with purees of other vegetables and fruits.

Leftovers can be combined with other foods to use them up; for example, leftover beets can be mixed with onion, vinegar and spices for relish or salad; leftover corn may be combined with lima beans, carrots or peas.

then stir in flour and water which have been stirred to a smooth paste. Cook, covered, 5 minutes longer. Add radishes. Heat thoroughly, and serve on hot, cooked rice.

Frankfurters are sometimes left over, too, and the problem of what to do with them after they've lost moisture and shriveled a bit can be easily solved if you do this with them:

Resy Rounds.
(Serves 4 to 6)

- 2 tablespoons fat
- 1/4 cup minced onion
- 5 to 6 frankfurters, ground
- 1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- Salt and pepper
- Biscuit dough
- 1 cup medium white sauce
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard

Melt fat; add onion and frankfurters. Cook until lightly browned, stirring often. Add Worcestershire sauce; season with salt and pepper.

Prepare biscuit dough as follows: Sift together 2 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1/4 teaspoon salt; cut in 1/4 cup shortening; add 1/4 cup milk, mixing to a soft dough. Roll dough into rectangle 1/4 inch thick. Cover with meat mixture; roll up in jelly-roll fashion. Cut into 1 1/2 - inch slices; place in baking pan. Bake in a very hot oven (450 degrees) 15 minutes. Combine white sauce and mustard; serve on hot biscuit rings.

Both leftover meat and vegetables get used in this meat roll with chili seasoning:

Chili Vegetable Meat Roll.
(Serves 4 to 6)

- 1 cup ground cooked meat
- 1 cup chopped cooked peas, carrots or green beans
- 1/4 teaspoon chili powder
- 1 teaspoon minced onion
- 1 teaspoon minced green pepper
- 2 cups meat gravy
- Salt and pepper

Combine meat, vegetables, chili powder, onion, green pepper and 1 cup gravy. Season with salt and pepper. Prepare biscuit dough. Roll in rectangle about 1/4 inch thick. Spread with meat mixture; roll up in jelly-roll fashion. Place on baking sheet and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) 30 minutes or until well browned. Slice 1 1/2 inches thick. Serve with remaining hot gravy.

Tastiness plus describes this lima bean and leftover meat casserole to perfection. Serve it with a cabbage and apple salad, hot rolls, beverage and jelly roll and you have a well-balanced, economical meal!

Lima-Meat Casserole.
(Serves 6 to 8)

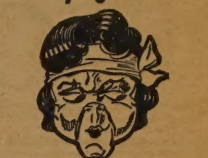

- 2 slices bacon or salt pork, diced
- 2 1/4 cups leftover beef, ground
- 1 onion, diced
- 3 cups cooked tomatoes
- 1/2 cup chili powder
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 4 cups cooked lima beans (fresh or dried)

Fry out bacon or salt pork. Add meat and onions. Brown slowly, stirring frequently. Add remaining ingredients. Pour into a well-greased casserole. Cover. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 minutes.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Crude, or natural, rubber has been defined as a substance found as liquid latex in many types of trees and plants and being characterized by the physical qualities of stretch, bounce, and impermeability to water.

In 1939 crude rubber was the most important single commodity imported into the United States on a dollar basis. Gross imports then were $99,616,100 long tons, valued at $178,489,142.

A small test plot of land in a Pacific Coast experimental garden last year produced at the rate of 50 pounds of rubber per acre from Russian dandelion.

TO YOUR Good Health

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

BUSY PHYSICIANS
Every civilian physician is and has been very busy for many months, and with hospital laboratories also busy he often has to wait some time for reports.

In an endeavor to help his fellow physicians, many of whom are carrying a killing load, Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, Mayo Clinic, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, has some "diagnostic time-savers for over-worked physicians."

Among these "time-savers" are hints on recognizing functional illnesses. "Good signs of a neurosis are the inability of the patient to say what the main complaint is, a tendency to answer the physician's questions with statements that have nothing to do with these questions, to complain of little things, to break in and not let the physician finish a sentence, to keep consulting a long written list of symptoms, to tremble and weep as the story is told or tell the physician how to diagnose and treat the disease."

There are certain symptoms that practically always mean a neurosis. Symptoms such as jitteriness, the fear of not being able to get a deep breath, fluttering or burning in the abdomen, oft repeated belching, distress and bloating after eating or especially after drinking cold water or "pop," attacks of pain and soreness in lower abdomen, and constipation with passage of mucus, distresses that come before breakfast, bloating that comes up during the day and disappears during the night without the passage of flatus (gas), and pains that persist even after several operations.

Dr. Alvarez points out that there are some of us who almost from childhood have had one illness after another without any cause that can be found. These illnesses are headache, weak eyes, indigestion, constipation, back-ache, sleeplessness and aches and pains all over.

"For nervous headache, as being caused by lack of nervous balance are nervous breakdown, extreme fatigue, food allergy, migraine, stomach and intestinal ulcer.

Scabies Parasite May Attack Anyone

One of the ideas we had as boys at high school was that any boy with blackheads or pimples could not be as clean as his body as his should be. If he would wash his skin with soap and water, and perhaps use a skin brush, he would remove the blackheads from his "pores" and the pimples would come out on the surface of the skin. To day we know that having pimples and blackheads is not a matter of cleanliness, but is caused by gland changes in the body which interfere with the proper use of certain kinds of foods, usually fats and starches. Fortunately, acne was not thought due to any lack of intelligence in these students with acne because their class standing was at least equal to that of the class average.

In the army, in schools or other institutions, patients suffering with scabies (the itch) have usually been considered of low intelligence despite the fact that there were so many exceptions.

In the British Lancer, Drs. C. Mellanby, A. L. Northedge and C. Johnson report the results of their investigations as to the intelligence of several hundred patients suffering with scabies. The results of this investigation showed that men with scabies were mentally a normal sample from the army. There was nothing to suggest that the group suffering with scabies had a larger percentage with low intelligence than those not afflicted with scabies.

There was no significant difference in intelligence between men who reported themselves sick, those who were discovered during the regular or routine physical inspections, those with a few parasites or those with or without infection following an attack of scabies.

From the above we learn that the parasite, the itch mite, the female of which buries itself under the skin, gives the appearance of scratches, makes no special choice as to its victims. The itching is due to substances given off by the parasites and their eggs.

Picture for Paper

By BARBARA BENEDICT
Associated Newspapers.

"THAT Adelaide Evans," said Irene Grant, "has her picture in the paper at least once a week. It does seem as though she'd be afraid of leading folks to think she was deliberately seeking publicity!" Irene's voice sounded wholly non-committal, even vague and absent, but Allan, her husband, glancing over the top of the Sunday paper's sporting section, detected a gleam in her eyes.

"Jealous?" he asked, ducking out of sight.

"Why, Allan, what a thing to say! Even in fun. Me? Jealous? Why, that's absurd! Who cares about having their old picture in the paper?"

"Every woman on earth," said Allan, still hiding behind the newspaper.

Irene bounded to her feet, thoroughly aroused. "Allan Grant, what a positively stupid thing to say! Every woman! My goodness, I don't care a snap of your fingers about having my picture in the paper!"

"Well, I've seen it there. All decked out in your best bib and tucker, too."

"That," said Irene, trying to act indifferent, "is only because I happened to be president of our club and they asked for a photograph."

Allan yawned. "Well, why begrudge Adelaide a little publicity if she wants it?" he said, thinking to dismiss the subject.

"Because," Irene replied heatedly, "she doesn't deserve it. She deliberately calls up the newspapers and says she's been doing this and that and the other thing, so they'll publish her picture. They must have a dozen on file."

Allan looked at his wife in amazement. "Say, I thought Adelaide was one of your best friends?"

"She is."

"She is," Irene repeated. "We've been friends for years and years. But that doesn't alter my opinion of her. I'm at least honest about it."

"And that's all," said Allan sarcastically. He shook his head sadly. He had never been able to understand women, despite his fifteen years of married life. He checked the remark that had come to his lips, because just then the telephone rang and Irene bounded across the room to answer it.

"Hello!" said Irene, and paused.

"Oh, hello, Adelaide, darling! How are you? And I were just talking about your picture in today's paper. My dear, I think it's a perfect likeness, and it doesn't flatter you a bit. However, do you keep so young looking?"

"What? My dear, no. Really, I couldn't bear the thoughts of it. I haven't had a photo taken for years, and the last one is really so drab looking. . . . You? Why, my dear, it was charming. It's a pity they can't publish it more often. It gives a touch of prestige to the club, you know."

Irene returned to her chair and sat down. The society page lay on the table at her elbow; Adelaide Evans' picture stared back at her. She studied it for a long time, reading over the caption and brief story accompanying it.

Irene stopped reading and bit her lip. She glanced up at Allan. But Allan's face was invisible behind the paper. She wanted to say something, but she didn't know exactly how to put it in words. Allan had accused her of wanting her own picture published. What an absurd idea! As if she cared! As if such a thing would affect her one way or another!

Five minutes later Allan finished the article he had been reading, and looked around the edge of his paper. The room he discovered, was empty. He stood up, grinning to himself, remembering Irene's indignation and remembering, too, her telephone conversation with Adelaide Evans.

En route to the kitchen Allan passed by the bedroom door, glanced inside and saw Irene sitting at her desk there. Something about her attitude arrested his attention. He paused and stepped inside.

Irene, oblivious to the fact she was being watched, was bent over her desk, studying some papers. Allan came up from behind and glanced over her shoulder. The papers, he discovered, were newspaper clippings. Published photographs of Irene herself, carefully clipped and carefully preserved. There were nine in all. She had laid them out beside each other on the desk, and was comparing them with the photograph of Adelaide Evans, which had appeared that day.

Watching, he saw a slow smile, a smile of satisfaction appear on her lips, and he knew that one of the nine clippings had compared favorably with that of Adelaide Evans. Irene had separated it from the rest and was holding it up for a minute inspection. After a moment she folded it and tucked it in the pocket of her dress.

Allan retreated as noiselessly as he had entered. He didn't understand but he didn't intend to try. The thing was beyond him. And even when the next morning Irene gave him a letter to mail, and he saw that it was addressed to the society editor of the local newspaper, he made no comment.

Women, he thought, were strange, mysterious people.

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
By VIRGINIA VAIL
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

GAIL RUSSELL hasn't seen her brother George for two and one-half years; he's a bugler in the army, stationed in Alaska. As she's been a movie actress less than a year, he's never seen her on the screen, though her third picture, "The Uninvited," is now in the editing stage. So she's sending him all the glamour art of herself that she can lay her hands on, to prove to him that the spindly-legged junior in Santa Monica high whom he left behind him is really a movie actress now.

Dinah Shore's getting a new daddy—Charles Winninger of "Show Boat" fame, who'll be her father in the new picture, "Belle of the Yukon." Dinah will sing, Winninger will play a trombone, and Gypsy Rose Lee will—well, she'll be Gypsy Rose Lee.

DINAH SHORE

All of the casualties on "Suspense," the CBS thriller, aren't confined to the script. When Orson Welles guest-starred recently, he broke his ankle as he entered the echo chamber, a box-like compartment used to give voices a ghostly quality.

Dame May Whitty stepped right out of her role as Pierre Curie's mother in "Madame Curie" to testify on juvenile delinquency before Senator Pepper's U. S. senate subcommittee on wartime health and education. They say she was just as delighted there as she is in the picture, especially when (telling of her prewar experiences in arranging country vacations for London's underprivileged children.

Sammy Kaye was the second Hollywood celebrity to back the "Dance With a WAC" program, which originated with film producer Charles R. Rogers. When Rogers was in Palm Springs on location for "Song of the Open Road" he arranged for the male members of his cast and crew to spend an evening dancing with the air WACs stationed at the army's desert training command base.

Mischa Auer's collection of pets is becoming a problem. He had 30 cats and a rooster, and recently received two dogs, a Newfoundland and a Yorkshire terrier. Wally Ford gave him the Newfoundland, which weighs about 200, and he named it Reddy. The terrier was Mary Astor's gift. It weighs a scant 2 1/2 pounds, and he calls it Tallulah. "Up in Mabel's Room" is his current picture.

Jean Davis and Jack Haley of the air waves are dashing from one picture studio to another these days. After Joan's appearance in "Around the World" RKO signed her for two pictures a year, and she's also under contract to Paramount for two. Jack Haley was originally all set for RKO's "Up in Mabel's Room," but had to drop out because of other picture assignments.

As chairman of the Malibu rationing board, Warner Baxter took over in the days of sugar distribution; he stuck through coffee and gasoline, but wanted to resign when he returned to the screen to star in "Landy of the Dark." He was persuaded to stay, merely appointing a temporary vice chairman, and completed his picture work in time to come back and face the canned goods situation.

It's the way things happen—to some people. The other night "Big Town" Director Jerry McGill went over to see his friend Frank Butler, the "Here's to Romance" director, on broadcast night. He was much impressed with the looks and voice of Marcia Neal—and the result of that chance meeting was that Marcia has a part in McGill's new Broadway play, "Compromise."

ODDS AND ENDS—A national comic book publisher is trying to interest Fikber McGee and Maly in a monthly feature strip based on their amusing experiences. . . . Cass Daley, who introduces the song, "He Loves Me, He Loves Me Not," in her new picture, "Riding High," has received requests to sing it in five different languages for overseas broadcasts. . . . They're giving Marlene Dietrich legs for a scene in "Kismet." Basil Rathbone brings a bottle of milk to the Mutual station studio in Hollywood and gives everybody in the cast a sip just before "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" starts—wants 'em to get their vitamins!

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

It was bitter cold on the outside and for an hour I had to work with my hands exposed. They became so numb that I had to go in to warm them at the fire. Before the blazing embers I held my hands until they were warm. The fire had what I needed and all I had to do was to hold my hands in position to receive. In a few moments they were as comfortable as I could desire. Often do we wonder what it is to pray. What is prayer? Prayer is to feel the need of God, as my hands felt the need of the fire. Feeling that need we station ourselves before Him so that He can impart to us the comfort that we are calling for. Prayer is just holding our hearts up to God so that He can supply our needs. God has all that we need and if we will only come before Him He will supply all of our needs.

I stood beside Grant's tomb on Riverside Drive in upper New York. To me it was an expression of beauty and skill. Shortly after being there I saw in the papers that the magnificent Mausoleum was in danger of collapse. There were cracks in the pavement, pieces of broken cement were falling from the steps and there was a getting of the entire structure. It is a well-known fact that the monument is built on a sand mound. All agree that a structure of that quality should be built on a rock foundation. When we start out to build for ourselves a character, be careful not to build on the sand. Seek for the rock—Christ Jesus—and build on His ideals and foundation. To build a character on the ways of this world, is to have it to totter and fall. Christ is the Solid Rock.

I was the guest speaker at a gathering of all denominations. My words for the occasion were high above sectarian ideas. Freely I spoke of a Christian fellowship like unto the Apostolic church. No reference was made to modern denominationalism. When I had taken my seat a good brother arose and said, "Tonight we have heard about a Christian fellowship that is far above denominational lines and for the first time in my life I wish that we were not divided into so many denominations." There was loud cheering as that man took his seat. Should not the Christian world blush in shame as we think of our divisions and subdivisions as we have them today? Be it known everywhere that Christianity is the same, regardless of denominational affiliation. We are all one in Christ Jesus.

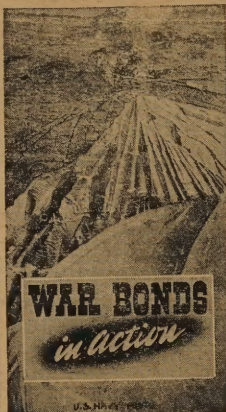

Horace Greeley, the great editor, was met one day by an enraged subscriber to his paper, who said to him, "Mr. Greeley, I have stopped your paper." "Have you," answered the editor, "That is too bad." He then hurried back to his printing plant and found the presses running at full speed, the clerks were all busy, and there was no change that he could see. He then hunted up the man and told him that there must be some mistake, as he found that his plant was running as usual. The embarrassed man then replied, "I didn't mean that I had stopped your paper; I just meant that I had stopped my copy, as I do not like your editorials." "Oh, is that all," replied Mr. Greeley, "In that case you should not have taken my time to tell me that." Well, brother, you may think that you are somewhat in your own estimate, but let me inform you, when you decide to withdraw from the church or stop your loyalty to God's Kingdom, you need not expect that God's Kingdom will close down. To be sure you can stop your own little bit, but remember that God's great program moves on without you. No man has ever yet been so worthwhile, as that God could not get along without him.

P. O. Davis, Director Extension Service, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, has accepted appointment as director of Birmingham Branch of Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta. Mr. Davis will represent agriculture on the board.

In 1943 there were 141,000 colonies of bees in Alabama which produced about 1,692,000 pounds of honey and 59,000 pounds of bees wax. These estimates are based upon returns to the Alabama Cooperative Crop Reporting Service.

The World's Best Laboratory

By Rufus T. Strohm

Dean, International Correspondence Schools

SCHOOLS and colleges spend millions of dollars on laboratories. Students pay hundreds of thousands every year in laboratory fees. Yet men and women who have never gone to college study every day in laboratory that no college in the country can match—and get paid for doing it. Campus laboratories can at best offer more or less current imitations of equipment and problems the student will have to face in a real-life job after graduation. No college has a steel mill or a shipyard set up within its Gothic walls. For technical training, no laboratory in the world gives opportunities equal to those offered by your own job.

Every experienced teacher will tell you that the only knowledge a pupil thoroughly absorbs and retains is material which he has put to use. That is the reason for drills and exercises and tests in the classroom. It is the reason why "learning by doing" has become a watchword of modern education even in the elementary grades. And it is the reason why thousands of spare-time students write me that they learn easiest when what they grasp under the study lamp tonight helps them solve problems on the job tomorrow.

In your own job you have the world's best laboratory—but only if you make it so. If you merely "hold down a job," you get nothing out of it but a pay check, and you won't get even that if you are laid off. Times come or when the progress of industry leaves your job behind. But if by spare-time study you make use of this laboratory that is now at your disposal, then your job becomes a career.

When peace comes, war industry will be changed to new kinds of production and new industries will be born and thousands of men with newly acquired technical training, released from service from war production, will be seeking places for themselves. Those who find the best places, those most needed, will be those who have learned how to learn on the job.

The world's best laboratory! Are you using it?

How American Farmers Are Meeting the Pulpwood Challenge

EARLY in 1943 when the country was faced with a disastrous pulpwood shortage, the Secretary of Agriculture said, "The only place we can look for additional supplies is from the farm woodlot."

And the farmers of America did not let him down. Their patriotic response helped a lot to supply much needed pulpwood for war industries.

Now, as we enter 1944

It is clear that a serious pulpwood shortage will continue. But farmers have learned that pulpwood cutting is good business as well as sound patriotism. Now is the best time to thin woodlots when pulpwood prices are at their peak. And recent rulings of the War Manpower Commission encourage farmers to cut pulpwood in off seasons by counting it as war unit credits toward deferment.

And so the farmers of America are asked to make pulpwood cutting an important part of their 1944 work program. It is off-season work; profitable work; patriotic work. Do all you can. Your country needs every cord you can cut. Keep in touch with your local pulpwood committee.

If you want to know how it feels to be at home after spending eight months under fire, at Salerno, ask B. H. He saw service at both Salerno and African Ports. During

Friday night after study hall all the girls and boys of the boarding department and town boys and girls who work for the school went over to the dining hall and much to everyone's surprise there was a beautiful Christmas tree beautifully decorated. Many gifts were around the tree. Every one joined in singing Christmas carols. Mrs. Matthews gave a reading, "Everywhere, It's Christmas Tonight." Clarice Collins told about the fourth wise man, after which the door bell rang and Miss Jenkins went to see who was coming at this exciting hour and one could never guess who it was—it was old Santa himself. Well, we gave him a hearty welcome and then he started giving out the gifts. There were so many until he asked for a little help. Each one went up to the tree and took off two gifts. By this time everybody was delighted with Santa's remembrance. Candy was served. A benediction was given by Rev. Dailey, pastor of the Baptist Church. School will open at 9 o'clock, January 5th.

We had a very interesting chapel program Wednesday morning. Eddie Lakeman told about the celebration of Christmas by the people of Ireland. Emogene Lowery played a piano solo, "Silent Night," after which Margie Ray gave a reading, "The Penny You Mean To Give." Willodean Minor sang a Christmas carol to the tune of, "Away In A Manger."

SEES PRESIDENT AND STAFF WHILE IN TEHRAN

Serving our country overseas for one year, Cpl. Owens is now stationed in Teheran, the capitol city of Iran.

Since serving in that area, he writes home of seeing many interesting things. He reports of going on a picnic of which Captain Eddie Rickenbacker was one of the members. Recently he has written home of seeing President Roosevelt, Marshall Stalin, Prime Minister Churchill, General George Marshall, and other members of the conference recently held in Teheran. He was among the group of soldiers that paraded with, and was received by our president.

He has sent back a number of interesting snapshots made of scenes and natives of that country. One particular picture of interest is that of the king and queen that he snapped. He states that the Russians say the soldiers of Iran had a big part in winning the battle of Stalingrad.

Cpl. Owen has been serving the country in the Quartermaster company since June 1941. He was stationed in the west until November, 1942, when he sailed for the Middle East. The voyage across took forty-two days. He crossed the equator twice and sailed across two oceans.

Cpl. Owens enjoys reading the News and looks forward to its arrival.

One hundred and seventy two producers shipped 6,076 gallons of "B" grade whole milk to the Thorsby Milk Plant during the first two weeks in December.

Producers received $1,696.00 net above hauling expenses for this milk. The five highest producers shipped 709.2 gallons and received $210.14 above hauling expenses during this same period.

Chilton County's Jersey cattle are producing a high grade of milk. All milk being received is now testing an average of well above five percent butterfat. This means that producers are receiving a high rate of pay for their milk.

Only five milk routes have been completely established to date. Work is being continued on the organization of other routes. The present plans are to organize in all Chilton County communities having enough milk to sell to economically operate a truck route.

Any Chilton County farmer having milk to sell that hasn't already contacted a representative of Foremost Dairies may get in contact with those organizing routes by writing Mr. W. J. Roberts, Foremost Dairies, Thorsby, Alabama, or write your County Agent's Office.

LABOR:

U. S. Runs Rails

Railroads fell into government hands as President Roosevelt moved quickly to avert strikes which threatened to tie U. S. freight and passenger transportation into a knot, and return to private ownership was promised after passage of the emergency act.

FDR acted when the brotherhoods of conductors, switchmen and firemen and engineers refused his offer to arbitrate their dispute even though two other brotherhoods, the trainmen and engineers, accepted the proposal and were awarded a nine cents an hour wage increase and a one-week vacation with pay.

Also accepting FDR's arbitration offer at the zero hour were 15 non-operating unions representing 1,100,000 workers, who agreed to the government's recent wage increase from 10 cents an hour to the lowest paid to 4 cents an hour. The highest paid, but also asked for overtime beyond 40 hours.

In appealing to the CIO's United Steel Workers of America, FDR did so on the understanding that any new pay boosts would date back to the time the old contracts expired.

The steel workers demanded a 17 cents an hour raise over the present 78 cents an hour rate. If granted, the increase would crack the War Labor board's so-called "Little Steel" formula, limiting pay boosts to 15 per cent above the January, 1941, levels.

AGRICULTURE: CCC Spends More

Fulfilling commitments to farmers to support higher prices of crops and livestock products, the Commodity Credit Corporation increased its loans and purchases to $45 billion dollars for the fiscal year 1943.

In addition to stimulating production, CCC said its expenditures assisted OPA in maintaining price ceilings, particularly for vegetable oils, dairy products, poultry products and meats.

Prices farmers were supported by loans to farmers on commodities stored against civilian and military requirements, and by lend-lease purchases. Of 2 billion, 700 million dollars worth of commodities CCC bought, about 1 1/2 billion dollars were for lend-lease account.

Beans and Peas

Despite record production of beans and peas in 1943, U. S. civilians will receive a per capita supply in 1944 equal to the average for 1935-39. Of the 23,000,000 bags of beans and 6,800,000 bags of peas which will be available in 1944, U. S. military services will get 3,441,000 bags of beans and 300,000 bags of peas.

U. S. Allies, liberated areas and U. S. territories will receive 7,085,000 bags of beans and 3,512,000 bags of peas, with Russia's share approximating 3,024,000 bags of beans and 723,000 bags of peas, and Great Britain's 872,000 bags of beans and 509,700 bags of peas.

RUSSIA:

One-Two

Delivering a stiff one-two punch, Russian armies struck at the Germans in the north and south, knocking them off balance in both sectors.

Greatest surprise came in the south, where Gen. Nicholas Vatutin's first Ukrainian army struck below the main battle line about the rail junction of Zvenyhor, driving a deep dent in the enemy's positions before the Nazis could rush up reserves.

To the north, the Reds continued their pressure around Vitebsk, former anchor for the Germans. Baltic lines running up to Leningrad.

WAR PRODUCTION:

Pattern Changes

Principally because Allied armies have swung from the defensive to the offensive, the pattern of war production in the U. S. has changed, with emphasis on ships, planes, heavy construction material and signal equipment, and demobilization on tanks, small arms and anti-aircraft artillery.

Ships of all kinds are needed for landing operations and supply; more planes are required for covering expanding fronts; heavy construction material is a must for building operational bases in occupied territories, and signal equipment has to be furnished to round out the services' growth.

On the other hand, shipbuilders' demands for steel and the effectiveness of anti-tank guns has led to a cut in tank output. Peak production has resulted in an overabundance of small arms and munitions. Improbability of enemy air raids over the U. S. and the increasing defensive strength of our air force have resulted in a reduction in the anti-aircraft artillery program.

WHISKY:

Control New Brands

The saddened lot of U. S. whisky drinkers was made lighter with OPA's decision to slap price ceilings on new brands making their debut in the market, estimated at 80 new brands in 1942, when controls were set over the old brands.

OPA set flat dollars and cents ceilings plus federal taxes at processors' levels for all bottled in bond, straight whisky and blends of straight whiskies estimated at 80 proof. Wholesalers and retailers were allowed markups, plus state taxes.

Similar ceilings have been scheduled for new brands of rum, brandy, cordials and liqueurs, OPA said.

CIO:

Political Action

Seeking to mobilize 14 million labor votes, the CIO has organized a political action committee, headed by Walter Reuther, president of the union's chief, Sidney Hillman.

Declaring the object of the committee is to organize labor for obtaining effective representation in government, the committee said its immediate aim "is to wrest control of the congress from . . . die-hard Republicans and Anti-New Deal Democrats who have defaulted in their duties as labor to labor but to the whole nation on home-front issues."

Already engaged in joint or similar action with the AFL in many states, the CIO committee is seeking support of the railroad brotherhoods and such farm groups as the National Grange. Funds totaling $700,000 already have been raised.

News Oddities

When frightened thoroughbreds could not be budged from their stalls during a fire in Atlanta, Ga., recently, the caretaker remembered the old adage that a white mule can lead horses from a burning building.

Haltering a white mule from a nearby stable, the caretaker led the animal into the burning building, and, sure enough, the panicked, neighing horses quieted down and followed the white mule out.

Skidding on a hill during a sleet storm near Methuen, Mass., a sanding truck ripped through the side of a house and came to a stop, with its hood over the bed of a startled young couple. No one was hurt.

HOGS:

New Floor Temporary

The government's extension of the "floor" price for hogs from 200 to 300 pounds is a temporary measure designed to provide farmers with an equitable market during the present high tide of shipments.

When the glut is cleared, WFA said, the government will again go back to the 200 to 270 pound range, but farmers will be notified of the change.

Because of congestion, WFA said, some farmers have been unable to obtain permits for shipping hogs, and they have hesitated to take the animals to more distant markets because of shrinkage losses and higher transportation costs.

GOODS DISTRIBUTION

Communities that have been finding difficulty in getting their share of such scarce items as flashlights, bobby pins, cooking utensils and electric appliances can expect a larger supply soon. The War Production Administration has authorized manufacturers and wholesalers to make voluntary changes in their allotment schedules.

Shortages are particularly acute in cities that have expanded in the last year or two because of an influx of war workers.

Young Peter Would told he was Not 'As Soon Be a steady job Beggar as King' and he is resentful at Partisan Chief Tito for making himself head of a home government, even a temporary government.

Tito boasts himself the more easily because young Peter quit crowded in. Rather, he was urged out, an 18-year-old boy, by his generals. He had turned on Prince Paul, Nazi-loving regent, and made Peter king at a midnight crowning, but they felt themselves and the king too weak to buck Hitler.

Peter is 20 now, bony and a bit bow-legged as riding breeches made plain when he visited the United States last year. He is a long-faced, long-necked, homely kid, not too prepossessing, but reportedly in dead earnest. When he quit the midnight crown he quit breaking speed limits and general fooling around.

These days he is in Cairo, a nice jumping-off place for a fast trip home when that seems sensible. He could easily take a wife with him, at least a fiancée. She would be pretty Princess Alexandra of Greece. They finally reported their engagement this summer after a set-to with Peter's advisers. Those cautious graybeards doubted the happy even while Peter's subjects were so unhappy.

THE last time a Yankee migrated into British parts and tried to make everybody happy he killed off all the knights of the Round table and had his Twain he might have done even worse. It was a job to discourage all Yankees, but here comes a Down-easter with a program for making another batch of Britons "the happiest people on God's green earth."

The program is C. D. Howe's, Canada's wartime munitions minister, and before that the world's biggest builder of grain elevators, and before that the Dominion cabinet minister, M. P. and professor, but before that a good steady No. 2 on the crew of the Waltham, Mass., high school.

After high school and Massachusetts Tech, Howe got a teaching job over the border. He returned home for a wife. But then he went back for keeps. He was naturalized, built his elevators, got rich. He didn't rise quite as high as the Commodore, but he was elected to parliament, was hiked up into the cabinet and there ran the railroads, the canals and the Canadian Broadcasting system. And when his string of look over the job of providing powder and shot and related items.

Now, stocky, cheerful and 57 years old, he looks ahead. He would build in postwar Canada a nine-point utopia on "the broad basis of agriculture, mines, fisheries and," believe it or not, "private enterprise." That makes it a Yankee utopia. That might make it work.

LORD HAILEY, baron of Shapur, Punjab and Newport Pagnell, Bucks, aims to prove Twain wrong by fixing up the weather. At any rate, he will try. He Somebody's Going To Do Something About the Weather committee which proposes a series of strings throughout the empire to tell the postwar world, postwar airman in particular, when to look for rain, hail, snow, heat, clouds and what have you.

The baron is just the fellow to take after some of the old, moreover, to do it up brown. He was for years a singularly competent civil in the singularly competent Indian Civil Service machine. He entered the service right after coming down from Oxford, Corpus Christi, with honors. In his heyday he made multitudes of Indian peasants prosperous by building the Jhelum irrigation project.

He turned Delhi from a mere provincial town into the country's capital; he rose to be governor of the Punjab and then of Agra and Oudh where he kept civil disobedience a la Mahatma Gandhi under a firm thumb.

These successes he is now handsomely decorated with the seven-rayed star of St. Michael and St. George, the lion of India and the order of the British Empire. Only six decades of the Indian Empire. And at the age of 71 he is still full of bounce.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JESUS BUSY WITH HIS MINISTRY OF LOVE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 1:34-45. GOLDEN TEXT—I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day; the night comes, when no man can work.—John 9:4.

Jesus said that He "must work the works of him that sent him" (John 9:4). And so we find Him going straightaway about His Father's business. It is a good example He has set for us.

That He did and how He did it will give us many lessons which we may apply to our service. We cannot do exactly what He did, but His power may be mighty works.

We find our Lord doing four important things—

I. Healing (vv. 32-34). We will do well to include verses 29-31 in our thinking, for there we find our Lord tenderly sharing the sorrows of the home.

Many of us have gone through that dark valley. All at once there was new hope, and soon there was joy. Jesus had come and had been healing.

Christianity is not a selfish faith, if it follows its Lord. We see in verses 32 to 34 that the Holy Spirit moved upon the hearts of men, non-possessed, and healed them all.

The account of the kindly and intelligent care of the sick is written large on the pages of the history of the Christian church. We do not have His divine touch of immediate healing, but we may have His compassion which served the multitude with tenderness and kindness.

II. Praying (vv. 35-37). Jesus did pray for His disciples and a time for prayer communion with His Father. How often we who profess to follow Him fail to pray at all. Certainly we need the grace and power that prayer can bring far more than Jesus did. But, we say, we are so busy. So was He. We are tired. So was He. People will not let us alone. They excuse us. We have no real reasons for our unfortunate delinquency.

All men were seeking Him (v. 37), but still He took the needed time to pray. "If you can't be too busy to pray, you are busier than God ever intended you to be."

When His disciples wanted Him, they had to look for Him in the place of prayer. Christian workers and pastors, do people find us there?

III. Preaching (vv. 38, 39). Jesus said, "Let us go . . . that I may preach . . . for therefore came I forth." He bears testimony that while Jesus did many miracles (and not for a moment would we detract from their worth and glory), yet He repeatedly, by word and act, emphasized the importance of preaching.

He said, "The kingdom of God is at hand" (Mk. 1:15), preaching the gospel in the power of the Holy Spirit is now, as it has been through the centuries, God's chosen means of accomplishing His purpose. What a pity that churches and pastors are forsaking it for book reviews, dramas, social hours, forums, and what not.

God give us a revival of great, humble, and fearless preaching of the Word!

IV. Cleansing (vv. 40-45). There is a sense in which the cleansing of the leper was another act of healing, but leprosy is a striking type of sin that the incident calls for special consideration. Leprosy is like sin in that it is a destructive malady that pursues its insidious way without revealing its true nature until it is far advanced. It renders a man unclean, loathsome to himself and dangerous to others. At least such it was in the days of our Lord.

Was there then no hope for the leper? Yes, Jesus had come. The smitten man cried out, "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." And Jesus said, "I will . . . and he was cleansed."

So we who have sinned be cleansed, whoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Rom. 10:13). He will not turn away from us, for He came to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10).

There is another important lesson here. The man who was cleansed disobeyed the instructions of Jesus (v. 44), with the result that the Lord's ministry in that place was greatly limited.

We should obey the commands of God, and not without God's will. Disobedience, even though it be by reason of great joy and enthusiasm, results in confusion. Our Lord knows exactly what should be done in particular cases at a certain time. When guides, we should conform to our own good and His glory.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY OHARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin, gives an opportunity to choose any yearling on his family's Wyoming ranch, picks the filly of a "fancy" mare named Flicka. His choice merely adds to his father's wrath, which is already aroused by the fact that Ken has failed his school work and has shown no sense of responsibility. Flicka, the filly, is badly hurt trying to jump the corral fence, but even Captain McLaughlin has to admit that she may not be lost after all. While Ken is in the hospital, the picture he bears cries of pain and finds a neighbor's cow caught in a wire fence. He hurries back to the house to get his wire cutters.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XIII

Ken could hear the sound of the transcontinental traffic. A horn tooting, a car changing gears. The light changed. The shadows fell lengthwise on the grass. . . he had the feeling of going off into a day-dream and his somersault in the corral but he pulled himself back. Flicka . . . and the cow . . . he was caught into the mesh of things. . . he couldn't leave them. Way off on the hillside was a little black speck—Gus! plodding along, his arms swinging from his wide, bowed shoulders, walking as if his shoes hurt him.

Ken leaped off his rock and shot down the road to meet him. He couldn't stand the lonely waiting another minute.

Ken wanted Gus to examine Flicka immediately, but nothing could deter the Swede from getting back to the bunk house and examining himself from his city clothes without a moment's delay.

As they walked up the road together Ken told of his day—the terrible things that had happened, Flicka's death and how some of the cowboys' cow with her udder torn to pieces, and how he thought at first the wildcat had attacked her. As he talked he kept looking up at the face of the big foreman. Gus' pale blue eyes, with pupils as small as pin points, were always full of light.

Ken got supper in the bunk house, and when Gus returned, they ate it together up there; cold beefsteak, boiled potatoes, apple sauce with thick yellow cream.

Gus washed the dishes and Ken wiped them and then they away. Then Gus took out his pipe, and it, put his old, torn felt hat on his head, and they walked down through the pasture to see Flicka.

Ken carried a can of oats with him, and, halfway down the path, began to call the filly's name and whistle to her.

Ken carried the clutch of Gus' arm and stopped walking. He called again—there was an answering nicker!

"Oh, Gus—she's calling to me!" "Yee whiz!" said the Swede, his lips turning up in a smile. "She sure is, Kenmie."

Ken ran ahead, plodding down the path and calling, "Flicka, Flicka, Flicka—" and an eager whinny came again from the little mare.

When Gus reached the nursery, the filly was sitting up, eating the oats which Ken had poured into her feed box.

"Dot's funny ting," said the man slowly, standing over her. "She's got good appetite. Don't seem sick or hurt."

Ken sat down on the bank, comfortable again, and glad to be there and drew peace into his soul with long quiet puffs of his pipe.

"What do you think it is, Gus?" asked Ken anxiously. "Should we try to make her stay up?"

Gus shook his head. "Better wait your fadder come home. It might be her back, but sittin up like dot—eatin her oats—I don't know."

Ken brought a bucket of water and Flicka put her nose in and drank.

"Ay tink dot smart little filly," said the Swede.

The family did not get home until after ten. Gus had the gone to bed long since, but Ken was waiting for the car on the hill behind the house—and the two dogs watching the empty road. The sky was crowded with stars, and the Milky Way so brilliant that it shed a soft light over woods and fields and streams.

When Ken saw the headlights of the car, a happy glow went through him. Chaps began to bark, and both dogs got up and moved around restlessly, wagging their tails and nipping at each other.

The car roared up the hill, circled around, came to a stop, and Ken jumped on the running board and stuck his head in the front window.

His mother's face was right there, smiling at him from under her green urban, and everyone spoke at once. She said, "Hello, darling, how are you—were you lonesome?" while Howard yelled from the back seat, "Gee, you missed it! You oughta seen the wild horse race—three Indians fell off." And his father was looking over the seat, handing Tim the keys of the car, and telling him to open up the back and unload the sacks of potatoes and onions.

"Howard, you help Tim unload and put away the provisions," he added; then turned to Ken. "Ken I want to see you."

"Dad, Flicka—" It was the third time Ken had said it.

"Come on," said his father's hand fell on his shoulder and pushed him down around the end of the house. "Dad, Flicka—" "Ken, I'm proud of you." They were standing on the terrace, and Ken, looking up with his mouth open in surprise, saw his father's face, tired, but showing his big white teeth in a smile of pride.

Ken stared.

"Crosby's how," said McLaughlin. "We stopped at Tie Siding on the way home for the mail. Crosby was there getting his mail. He told me how you had cut his cow loose from the wire when her udder was caught, and that Gus rode over and told him."

Ken was getting ready to say, "Flicka," again, when his father lifted one of the boy's hands and held the small, helpless, softness in his own hard fist. "I used to think these hands of yours would never be good for anything. They had as much strength to them as wet spaghetti; but today they manipulated a pair of wire cutters on a cow that was crazy with pain. You never did anything like that before in your life. What made you do it?"

Ken, wondering himself, said, "Well, she bellered so, you could hear something was the matter. I thought it might be the wildcat after her; and I remembered you said it

What made you do it?"

Ken, wondering himself, said, "Well, she bellered so, you could hear something was the matter. I thought it might be the wildcat after her; and I remembered you said it

Ken was getting ready to say, "Flicka," again, when his father lifted one of the boy's hands and held the small, helpless, softness in his own hard fist. "I used to think these hands of yours would never be good for anything. They had as much strength to them as wet spaghetti; but today they manipulated a pair of wire cutters on a cow that was crazy with pain. You never did anything like that before in your life. What made you do it?"

Flicka stood calmly in the center of the group, and when Ken went to her head he put his hands on either side of her face, she remained quiet.

"Nothing wrong with her back," said McLaughlin. "It's her leg. That right hind leg. She couldn't use it to push with, and, lying on the left side, she couldn't get up without it."

"But she's been using it, Dad," said Ken anxiously.

"Yes. It was all healed up, but look at it now. It's swollen. That means infection, and it hurts her worse than it did at first. Look, she's not bearing any weight on it!"

Ken's face was distraught when he noticed the swelling above the joint. Everyone knew that the worst danger of wire cuts was the infection that so often followed. "What do you do in an infection, when it's a horse?" he faltered.

Nell answered cheerfully, "Just what you'd do if it was a person. Wet dressings; poultices; so that it will open and drain."

Flicka showed no sign of fear or nervousness. When Ken petted her and smoothed her neck, she looked at him with trust and gratitude.

"Now that she'll let us get close to her," continued Nell, automatically stroking her cat, "there won't be any trouble about it."

"Why does she let us, Dad?" asked Ken.

"Well," said McLaughlin grimly, "she's only got three legs—she can't run, can she?"

He walked off, Howard after him. Ken knew that his father couldn't bear to look at a sick animal. But his mother said, "I used to think these hands of yours would never be good for anything. They had as much strength to them as wet spaghetti; but today they manipulated a pair of wire cutters on a cow that was crazy with pain. You never did anything like that before in your life. 'Realistic Attitude Marks Change in Allied Diplomacy

New Journey Into International Cooperation Combines Idealism and Realism; Step Away From Old Style Power Alliances.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

What kind of a man is Stalin?

That question was put to President Roosevelt at the White House press and radio conference on the day of his return to Washington from Europe. He was tanned, alert, cheerful, still pulsing with the consciousness of achievement. His answer, which came without a second's hesitation, I thought, was significant.

Stalin, he said, was a realist, just like himself.

I am not particularly interested in the accuracy of that answer, either as an analysis of Stalin or self-analysis of the President. But to me the fact that the President chose realism as the outstanding and common characteristic of himself and the man whose word and deed so much of the future depends, was, I think, significant.

On the whole, in the light of later pronouncements, use of that term seems a good omen rather than a bad one.

Mr. Roosevelt is committed to a plan for the post-war world which leans toward the ideal, rather than toward the old style diplomatic "realism" which is nothing but tooth-and-claw tactics behind a lauded facade of protocol. I think the American people have shown plainly that they are more interested in stopping—or at least postponing—wars than they are in the slogans of the isolationists or the imperialists. Granted that the fact that Roosevelt emphasizes the "realist" side when he speaks, gives one a feeling that he and Stalin and Churchill have been able to reach some rough agreements that are practical enough to work, and yet are a little less early than the old power alliances, which always end in wars and always will.

The Conference

I recall very clearly that crowded news conference for which friend and foe alike turned out to see what the President looked like after his trip. He was a little more tired, but he was a little less early than the old power alliances, which always end in wars and always will.

But the two remarks of the President stood out in my mind—the one I mentioned (realism) and another, made almost as soon as the last of his remarks, which I do not intend to repeat here, but which I believe most revealing as far as our future foreign policy goes.

Those in the first row had time to take in the President's cheerful and informal appearance—the colored tie, the white shirt, the sweater, which he had worn on his trip—and which, because of one meeting following another from the moment he arrived at the White House, he still wore.

He had been on the job since 9:30 a. m. It was then after four, as soon as the signal that the last reporter was in the room was given, the President began to speak of the success of the trip, and he said that those who shared with him in the hopes of a durable peace (he referred to Russia, Britain, China) were motivated by the determination that there would not be another war while this generation lives.

I must admit that the words at first struck me a little coldly—while this generation lives." Not much long-range optimism there, I thought. But afterward and since his later pronouncements, general though they have been, I feel a little better about it. It seems to me that perhaps we are at last embarked upon an adventure in international cooperation with enough idealism to keep our eyes on the heavens and enough realism to keep our feet on the ground. That is my New Year's hope and wish.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

Best seller in Britain today is a booklet on how to stretch a dollar coupon. Called "Make Do and Mend," the booklet offers the British housewife a wealth of information on how to utilize her old clothes and long-range optimism in their last thread-by thread which would have made her shudder in peace-time. The booklet is one of the most popular publications.

Analysis of a Reporter's Job

As I sit down to my typewriter, I sometimes try to visualize the people who will read what I write—just as I try to visualize the little groups gathered about the loud-speaker when I talk to them.

Sometimes I shudder lest they exaggerate the importance of the things we reporters report.

I am not a bit different from the anxious anonymous reporter who, after the last war, still clad in his khaki shirt, wearing the OD (it's "GI" now) tie and trench coat, who came down to work and stumbled around the various offices and meetings getting his stories and writing them under the eagle eye of the copy desk.

The reason I am worried now is because I hear so many people talk about the thing "the Washington correspondent" writes or says on the radio—as gospel. Well, most of us try to report what we see and hear. We don't always know whether it is true or false. We just try to tell you about it. Most of us label what we know and what we think. Some do not.

Sometimes when we talk with people we think really ought to know, we report what they say with a little more confidence. If we can't quote the "Brass Hat" or the cabinet officer or the senator who told us this or that we say "authoritative sources." We are not sure, but we hear is sound fact or just wishful thinking.

The longer we live, the better we are able to judge between the real people and the phonies. Most old-timers in the government don't try to fool reporters because they know they can only do so once. Maybe twice.

You know the old Scotch proverb: "If he cheats you once, shame on him; if he cheats you twice, shame on you."

Many people think that unless we attack the party in power, we must be favoring it. That isn't true. We know, as the old bull said, "One cow is much as another." We know that despite the different party regalia politicians display, they are really pretty much alike once they get into office—not as good as they might be for the most part, seldom as bad as the opposition paints them.

Henley Wins First Prize In Essay Contest

Marvorne Henley, Reporter of the Mt Nebo 4-H Club, received a $200 War Bond and a $300 cash prize for writing the best Essay in the 4-H Dairy Essay contest sponsored by Foremost Dairies Thorsby Milk Plant. Prizes were awarded to all winners at a 4-H Club meeting at the Thorsby Plant, Friday, Dec.

While visiting the Thorsby Milk Plant, all 4-H Club members had an opportunity to inspect the equipment used to process the large volume of milk being received. Mr. W. J. Harts, Field Representative for Foremost Dairies, conducted the inspection trip through the plant and explained the methods used in receiving, pasteurizing, and processing milk. The 4-H Club boys and girls attending the meeting now have a clearer conception of a whole milk industry and can see for themselves the volume of milk that can be produced by a group of farmers working together and marketing their products.

Mr. Roberts awarded prizes to the winning 4-H Club members: First Prize—$250 War Bond to Marvorne Henley. Second Prize—$300 each were awarded to:

to the People This Community THINK IT OVER

How about doing a little cold turkey thinking after you lay aside the newspaper and think about it? You've got a good job. The chances are there is someone else in your family, perhaps two or three, working. Your son or your brother may be away at war.

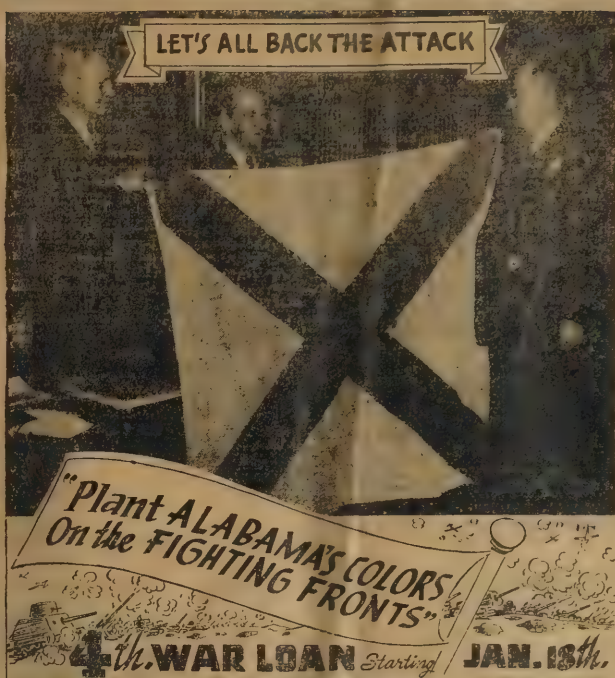

This war must end sometime. Your whole family is praying it ends soon and the fighting boys of yours will be home safely.

But will you be ready for what happens when peace comes? If you have something laid away, it's all hopping there'll be jobs every, jobs which mean making something for somebody's happiness and not for somebody's sorrow. That's where your War Bonds are in the picture. Sure, America's own billions of dollars of War Bonds are now, and before this 4th War Loan ends they will have put away millions more. But how about you?

That's the one that counts. Think of the pile of War Bonds you have when peace comes, the big chance you'll have to slip right to the rest-war world you're dreaming about tonight.

GOVERNOR CHALLENGES STATE—Shown above (at the right) is Governor Chauncey Sparks presenting the state's colors to State War Finance Chairman Ed Leigh McMillan (left), of Brewton, and State War Finance Vice Chairman Frank Samford (center), of Birmingham, with a challenge to "Plant Alabama's Colors on the Fighting Fronts." McMillan and Samford will lead thousands of Alabama War Bond workers in the Fourth War Loan drive which opens Jan. 18.

State Challenged To Buy Bonds, Plant Colors On Battle Fronts

Drive for $93,000,000 To Be Launched Jan. 18th Over State-Wide Radio Hookup

Alabamians were challenged this week to plant their colors on the fighting fronts of the world by buying extra war bonds during the Fourth War Loan Drive which opens Jan. 18.

Governor Chauncey Sparks in a formal ceremony at the state capital in Montgomery, called on Ed Leigh McMillan, of Brewton, State War Finance Chairman and Frank Samford, of Birmingham, State War Finance Vice Chairman, to lead the thousands of workers of their committee in an all-out "Let's All Back The Attack" effort.

"Tell your committees to ask the people of Alabama to plant Alabama's Colors on the Fighting Fronts by buying extra war bonds during the Fourth War Loan," the governor told the committee leaders.

"We are proud of the record that Alabama has made in all the wars that our country has been forced to fight. We are proud of our sons and daughters who fight today around the world. We are proud of our record here at home in producing the sinews of war. We are proud of our bond-buying record of the past. Let us be as proud of our record in this new war effort as the Fourth War Loan.

"Let us plant our colors with all our might, no flatter how great the sacrifice, on every fighting front. Our dollars are as necessary as our men and women who offer their lives. They cannot fight without the equipment that our money must buy."

The Fourth War Loan will be launched in the state Jan. 18 with a "Dawn Attack" state-wide radio network program that will present wounded veterans fresh from the fighting fronts who will tell of the job that is yet to be done.

The state has been given a quota of $93,000,000.

Message From Ch'm Pattillo To The People Of Chilton County

You have, no doubt, learned already that we are to have the 4th War Loan drive during the months of January and February. The quota for our County is $465,000.00. Of this we are asked to buy $279,000.00 of the E Bond series. That is the Bond issued in the $25.00 to $100.00 denominations. We may well be proud of the record we have made in the previous drives and I am fully confident we will maintain our high standard of patriotism in this campaign. The war is now in its critical stage. The steady flow of munitions and supplies must be maintained or the war will be longer and our soldiers will suffer more, more of them will lose their lives, the cost of the war greatly increased and our chances of complete victory greatly diminished.

The raising of this quota is a duty and a privilege that devolves upon every one of us in the County. There are very few who can not buy a $25.00 Bond $18.75 is all it will cost. It will be worth $25.00 in ten years. Now, let's all of us put the utmost dollar we can possibly spare into these bonds and do it at once and have it over with. Every bond bought during the months of January and February will count on our quota, so let's start right now and keep buying until we have gone over the top.

LET'S GET ON FIRE FOR QUICK VICTORY

Work on the building and plant will begin within a few days said Mr. Williams. The location is near Watt Willis's barn in North Clanton.

While enjoying refreshments those present told their experiences in the old year also their plans for the new year, all hoping that it will be a better and brighter one for all of us.

CHILTON COUNTY BOARD OF REGISTRARS MEET

The Chilton County Board of Registrars will meet at the Court House on January 17th and for ten days thereafter.

Woman's Division Ready In Fourth War Loan Drive

The Women's Division of the Chilton County War Finance Committee under the direction of Mrs. Hugh Jones, chairman, is going after the attractively planned Fourth War Loan in earnest. The foundation plea of the drive is Buy An Extra Bond.

The Fourth War Loan is essentially a drive for the Peoples Bond, Series E. The members of the committee are instructed not to give the emblems of the Fourth War Loan except to those who buy the EXTRA bond. We expect it to be the seal of faith in the homes of sixty million American workers; digging to the quick to buy more bonds will be the highest form of patriotism.

What will you do Mr. and Mrs. Chilton County Citizen, to budge the men and women who believe they cannot afford to buy bonds, or extra bonds, for the Fourth War Loan? That excuse was offered above all others by the American who failed to support the Third War Loan, and that was 50 per cent of the people. To believe the trust is to betray the men in our armed Services.

Our boys at the front know that you are doing the job back home for them. They're stopping bullets intended for you.

Watch next weeks Chilton County News for details of the Women's Blue Star Brigade, an honorary organization to which every woman in the county is extended an invitation to become a member. Qualifications are: Some loved one in the service. To become a member you must first buy a bond, and sell a bond. To the People of this Community

YOU ARE IMPORTANT

There is no such thing as a "little" investment in the Fourth War Loan.

Your $25 or $50 or $100 Extra War Bond may not have great importance in your mind in making up a $4 billion dollar total for individuals.

But multiply yourself by 100,000,000 and then you see in real perspective how truly great each citizen becomes in making national strength against the Nazis and the Japs.

Capt. Maurice Witherspoon, Navy chaplain aboard the Carrier Wasp when she sank, tells of a rescued wounded sailor, who, as he regained consciousness, asked: "Did I do my best?"

That's the only question you, too, have to ask yourself when you decide the extent of your personal participation in the Fourth War Loan.

There undoubtedly will be large single purchases of War Bonds in this community, but yours—if it is "your best" will deserve equally the red, white and blue shield you are privileged to display in the window of your home.

So "Let's All Back the Attack."

JESUS ANSWERS HIS CRITICS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 2:13-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.—Matthew 5:11.

Criticism and opposition was the constant lot of our Lord as He gave Himself in His labor of love for mankind. It follows His disciples to this day, for men seem to have not only ingratitude, but an evil spirit which rewards kindness with hard words and unjust accusations.

The scribes and Pharisees had already found ground for their complaint, for He had eaten "with publicans and sinners" (2:16). The fact that He went there to win Matthew and to heal the sick (2:17) made no difference. Then they wanted to know why His disciples did not observe a fast (2:18) in the solemn way they should. How could they, when the Lord was in their midst? They were joyful.

In our lesson we find these hating, watching enemies of our Lord's showing their bitterness in two ways.

1. Open Accusation (2:23-25). They got at Him this time through His beloved disciples. It was the indirect approach so often used by cowardly people who want to hurt someone, but who dare not face him squarely. They spread evil reports or unkind criticism about a loved one, and thus wound the one they hate.

Their accusation was, however, in a sense a direct one. They claimed that He was the one who had permitted His disciples to violate the Sabbath law by plucking and rubbing the ears of corn to prepare them to be eaten. In other words, they had allowed them to do a secular thing on a sacred day and thus to violate the holiness of the Sabbath. What they did was not wrong, but they did it on the wrong day, said these critics.

Jesus met the charge by reaffirming the high viewpoint of God concerning man. We have lowered our conception of man's position, while at the same time exalting his undependable judgment.

Everything that concerns man is seen in the sight of God. Hunger is natural, God made man that way. He gets hungry on the Sabbath day, so he must have food on that day. The Sabbath was made to serve him, and he must not be harmed or hindered by his servant.

Now, someone will say: "That means I can do what I like on the Sabbath—or the Lord's Day." No, it does not. What you need is right. What you desire may not be. You are more than an animal, so you must have more than physical rest and recreation on Sunday. You are more than a mental being, hence you need more than culture—reading, music or friendship on that day. You are a spiritual being and must have fellowship with God.

See how nicely it all balances up when we go God's way. Then nothing that concerns us is common or secular. It is all sacred.

II. Silent Hatred (3:1-6). Open criticism is bad, but it becomes worse when it is silent. It is in the heart of a watching man (v. 2), one who looks for his opportunity to strike.

The scene is a most dramatic one. Jesus came into the synagogue on the Sabbath day as was His custom. (By the way, is it your custom to go to church on Sunday?) "In that synagogue was a man with a withered hand. Here occurs one of those incidents on which the Bible is full of beauty in these narratives. Seeking to find accusation against Him, His enemies nevertheless all unconsciously paid Him a supreme compliment. They associated Him immediately with the chief scribe of the synagogue, but with the most needy man in the crowd."

"They watched Him" (v. 2). The air was full of silent, malicious, cunning hatred. Jesus faced them with an alternative so high, so holy, and so exacting that they dared not speak. He pointed out that we either do good or harm, heal or kill, by our response to a human need. It cannot be ignored. What would they do with it? Keep their strict man-made regulations, or honor God by helping a needy one on the Sabbath? They dared not answer.

Then He healed the man. He did not touch him. He did not do any work, except a miraculous healing. But it was enough. The Herodians and the Pharisees, who hated each other, now became friends because they both hated Jesus.

What an awful picture of what may be in the human heart, even in the Lord's house on the day of worship. What was in your heart when you last went into the church? Love and a desire for the good of your neighbor, or hatred and malice? Here again our Lord declared the dignity of man in the plan of God, and placed his need above the keeping of a day. We are too little interested in the help we can give, and too fearful of the criticism of others.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Low costs prevailing, post-war world consumption of natural and synthetic rubber may total 2,000,000 tons a year, is the prediction made recently by John L. Collier, president of the B. F. Goodrich Co. This would be nearly twice as much as ever consumed in a record year to date.

Some 32 million pounds of rubber will be needed by the Army Signal Corps this year for insulating W-10's wire used in maintaining direct communications. An additional 4 million pounds will be required for friction and springing tape. Just two of the many rubber-using items of this Army branch.

Found Gen. 'ke' Pinch Hitting at Switchboard

This revealing story was relayed from North Africa.

An important midnight telephone conference was being held at General Eisenhower's headquarters. The young soldier at the switchboard was working his head off with calls all over North Africa. The G.I. had a slight fever but he didn't want to tell anybody about it. Finally, though, a lull came in the conference and his captain ordered him to lie down for a while.

About an hour later, he awoke from his doze and heard the switchboard going full-blast. Wondering who could have possibly replaced him at 2 a. m., he went back to his board. Found Eisenhower running the switchboard for his own conference.

Even a Friend Might Not Appreciate Such Greeting

Several years ago George Ade was visiting London and, feeling lonesome, suddenly spotted a man he thought he knew back home. He rushed up eagerly and gave the fellow a resounding whack on the back, causing his glasses to fly off, his hat to sail into the air and his armload of bundles to fall into the street.

Then he discovered his mistake and apologized profusely to the stranger, explaining that he thought the man to be an old friend.

"Oh, that's quite all right, old chap," said the Englishman, "but—er—tell me, does your friend care for this sort of thing?"

A unique phonograph record is that of the bugle call which attended the Charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava, Russia, on October 25, 1854, during the Crimean war. Using the original bugle, the English soldier who sounded the call on the battlefield made the recording in London 53 years ago.

One of the few copies of it is owned by Yale university.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN By BEN

Members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club are still talking about the enjoyable meeting they had last Thursday night at the Home Ec Room at the High School. R. C. Williams made the Club a present of the hind quarter of a deer, to be served at the weekly meeting. Donald Blacketter, Pat Smith and Hollis Jackson went down to the school about six o'clock and proceeded to cook the deer meat. As the members arrived, each was put to work, setting table, etc. Everyone had a job and when all was ready they started their meeting—after having served themselves. When the business was through and incidentally the deer too, Rev O. C. Lloyd was appointed chairman of the dish washing committee. He immediately appointed the whole Club as his assistants and all got up and washed and dried the dishes. Last Thursday night's meeting was a big success and one that will live a long time in the memory of the members.

We are anxiously awaiting the opening of the new Hardware Store here by Robert and Julian Evans. We understand it will be in the building recently vacated by the Sanitary Barber Shop. The Sanitary has moved to the building between the Dixie Cafe and the Goodyear Service Store. Lots of remodeling and the like has to be done before the Evans Brothers are ready for their opening. But when they do, we'll try to give you the details.

Vernon Sansom, son of Mr and Mrs George Sansom, had his picture in the Sunday issue of the Birmingham News. Vernon is somewhere in Italy, and the photographer had caught him and one of his buddies, brewing a cup of coffee while his outfit rested on the road to San Pietro.

Again, thanks to our friend Bro. A. T. Davis of Route Two, for some mighty good sausage and syrup brought to us this week. Each winter for several years, now, Elder Davis has favored us with this little gift of appreciation. We know of no better way than saying it with fresh country sausage, despite the highly advertised line about saying it with flowers.

Ed Bowden celebrated his Sixth Anniversary in business here this week. He has been at the same location all this time but his business has grown wonderfully. We think Ed, and Mrs Bowden who helps out in the store when Eds away, deserve a lot of credit for the fine business they have built from so humble a beginning. Ed celebrated the occasion by setting his home on fire. Saturday afternoon he had a bad cold and couldn't get warm so he proceeded to get his stove so red hot that it caught the wall afire. For about 15 minutes he forgot all about being cold or having one either. Only slight damage was done, Ed keeping a water hose handy for just such emergencies.

We must apologize to Mr Jones for the error in the paragraph last week referring to him. We stated that he had served Clanton four years as our Mayor, when actually he has served six years, which just makes him a third better Mayor than we said he was.

Milton Posey asks us to mention the fact this week that his City Grill was open and doing business as usual. Due to circumstances over which he had no control the Grill was closed last Saturday and Sunday. Though it may have inconvenienced some of his good customers, he wants you to know that a hearty welcome awaits you at the Grill, always.

THESE BEST COTTON VARIETIES FOR 1944

Alabama growers would do well to center their attention on producing cotton of 1-to 1-16 inch staple in 1944 says H B Tisdale of the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station, in releasing experimental results on the best cotton to plant in Alabama.

It is reasonable to believe, he says, that the greatest returns from the 1944 Alabama cotton crop will be obtained from varieties that produce a staple of 1 to 1 1/16 inches.

In announcing the results of three years of cotton variety testing on the experiment stations and experiment fields in the state, Tisdale recommends Stoneville 2B, Coker 100, White Gold Carolina Big Boll, Deltapine 14, and Miller 610 as satisfactory varieties of adequate staple length for any section of Alabama if grown on land that is not infested with cotton wilt disease. Usually the greatest returns will be obtained from any of these varieties.

Such wilt-resistant varieties as Coker 100 Wilt, Coker 4 n 1, S and C Big Boll, Delta Dixie, Stonewilt, and Cook 144 are recommended for planting on wilt-infested areas common in central and southern Alabama.

Flour pounded into meat will help retain the juices, and improve the quality of a tough cut of meat.

A Rose By Any Other Name—

The old saying that "A Rose By Any Other Name Would Smell as Sweet" means, of course, that the name of a thing may be changed without changing the thing itself in any way.

Due to the difficulty some people have in pronouncing and spelling the name "Luquire" as well as remembering its correct pronunciation, we have considered for some time changing the name of the Company. While the name Luquire is synonymous with fine old Alabama families, it is a family name (being the family name of the Company's founder) and is not descriptive of an insurance company. We have, therefore, changed the name as follows.

FAMILY RESERVE INSURANCE COMPANY

Same Personnel—Same Policies
Same Company But New Name

This name is selected from many others because it is distinctively significant . . . premiums are being deposited with this Company by more than 210,000 policyholders for the sole purpose of building up in each policyholder's FAMILY a RESERVE for unforeseen misfortunes that will inevitably occur.

There is to be no change in the corporate structure of the Company. FAMILY RESERVE INSURANCE COMPANY will continue its forward march of progress with the same personnel, same policies and will be the same Company but with a new name.

FAMILY RESERVE INSURANCE COMPANY (formerly Luquire Insurance Company) has been in business for the past sixteen years, having been organized in August of 1927. The enduring principle which has been the Company's creed through-almost a quarter of a century of constant service to the people of Alabama will be rigidly followed in the future the same as in the past . . . one standard, the highest in service and financial responsibility.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Nazis Reel Under Combined Pressure Of Heavy Air Attacks and Sea Losses; New Air Blows Strike Japs in Pacific; Fifth Army Steps Up Assaults in Italy

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

New Britain—Map shows points of U. S. landings on New Britain island at Arawe on south and Cape Gloucester on north. (See: Southwest Pacific.)

INVASION:

Eisenhower Commands

Hittler's high command shuttled troops in western Europe as America's four-star Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower assumed command of Allied forces and the stage was set for the big second front.

Britain's Air Chief Marshal Arthur Tedder stood at General Eisenhower's side as deputy commander, with Britain's Adm. Bertram Ramsay as the leader of naval forces, and Britain's Air Marshal Trafford Leigh-Mallory in charge of all air forces.

As the Allies' supreme command buried itself in the mass of invasion detail, the tensed Germans reported heavy aerial bombardment of their channel fortifications and Commando attacks along the French coast to test their defense. As the Germans awaited the grand assault, said Nazi Marshal Erwin Rommel: Our defenses are technically correct.

FORTRESS EUROPE:

Step Up Action

Bringing heavy artillery into play, Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth Army blasted the Nazis from strong points blocking the 75-mile road to Rome, while farther to the east, the British clambered past the enemy's Adriatic bastion of Ortona, won more than a week of vicious street-to-street fighting.

As U. S. and British troops punched their way through the Nazis' stiff mountain defenses in southern Italy, aerial and naval warfare in Europe stepped up.

Fleets of Allied bombers winged their way over the English channel to pound Nazi fortifications along the French coast, and the RAF rained another 2,244 tons of explosives on battered, hapless Berlin.

Following the British home fleet's sinking of the 26,000-ton Nazi battleship Scharnhorst off North Cape, Norway, light Allied and German naval units tangled in the Atlantic off the French coast, with airplanes being called into play to help sink three enemy destroyers and a speedy blockade runner.

RUSSIA:

Reds Advance

Delivering trip-hammer blows all along the 800-mile Russian front, Red armies surged forward again in the south as Germany's harassed high command shifted forces to check the big push.

The Reds' heavy blows in the south fell as German units in the east and the north around Vitebsk. Quickly shifting the gravity of their attack, the Russ struck on a 110-mile front in the south, first punching hard at Zhitomir, then punching still harder above that railway hub at Korosten.

This winter's Russian offensive was a real slugging match, with each side in the south primarily concerned with exhausting the other.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

INSURANCE: British maritime insurance companies have reduced the war risk rates on cargoes to about half the former rate, reflecting the greater security of the seas.

RESTAURANTS: The nation's restaurants and difficulties in keeping employees, are serving 25 million persons daily.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:

Bombings Jar Japs

Japan's great air and shipping base of Rabaul on New Britain Island was hit by U. S. bombing planes with the marines' capture of two air strips on Cape Gloucester on the western end of the island.

Following up heavy bombing which helped crumple the enemy's strong line of pill-boxes, the marines stormed remaining Jap positions with flame throwers.

As the marines advanced on Cape Gloucester, elements of Lieut. Gen. Walter Krueger's Sixth Army encountered heavy resistance at Arawe to the south.

The Allies made increasing use of air power to jar the Japs loose on the wide Pacific front, dropping gasoline tanks on enemy strong points on Bougainville and sending fleets of bombers to pound installations on the Marshall Islands.

AGRICULTURE:

Meat Production

Farmers received an all-time high of four billion dollars for livestock slaughtered under federal inspection in 1943 as meat production also reached an all-time high of more than 24 billion pounds.

Fifty per cent more meat was produced than during the 10-year pre-war average, but after allocations to the government, civilian consumption was held to the prewar rate of 132 pounds per person. Because of rationing, however, supplies were more evenly distributed than formerly.

Meat output for 1944 was estimated at 25 billion, 600 million pounds, of which 8 billion, 500 million pounds will be required for military and lend-lease purposes.

CCC Program

To help stimulate production and fulfill commitments to support crop and livestock prices, the Commodity Credit Corporation spent 3½ billion dollars during the 1943 fiscal year.

As of December 18, CCC possessed 32,899,338 bushels of wheat under contract, while 96,101,516 bushels were redeemed. CCC wheat stocks at that date totaled 86,928,000 bushels.

Principal objective of the CCC's 1943 program was to increase the production of vegetable oils, dairy products and livestock. During 1943 the navy trained twice as many pilots as in 1942, and three times as many combat planes were sent to the front.

U. S. NAVY:

42 Carriers

The U. S. finds itself well equipped as naval operations throughout the world quicken, with Uncle Sam's navy boasting of 42 aircraft carriers, including sleek destroyer-escorts for protecting convoys. The U. S. started the war with seven.

Corsair and Hellcat fighter planes taking off from the carriers' decks have increased their striking power, and a deadly new dive bomber has been put in service. During 1943 the navy trained twice as many pilots as in 1942, and three times as many combat planes were sent to the front.

During 1943, arming of merchant ships was speeded, 4,000 now being outfitted with weapons.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

PRESSURE COOKERS: The government has taken pressure cookers off the ration list, but all purchasers will be required to specify that they intend to use the cookers for preserving food. During 1943 the navy trained twice as many pilots as in 1942, and three times as many combat planes were sent to the front.

FOOD:

Chickens, Points

As the War Food Administration requisitioned 170 million pounds of dressed chicken and fowl for the government, OPA slashed point values on canned vegetables and ordered frozen vegetables point-free. WFA's action was prompted by the government's inability to obtain more than 20 per cent of the fowl they required in recent months, and the army was said to be particularly anxious to get the poultry for Sunday dinners at camps and hospitals. Civilians may be little affected by WFA's order, however, since it does not apply to stock stored after December 30, 1943.

Because of considerable stocks of canned green and wax beans, zero point values were established for them. A 10 per cent reduction in consumer demands for canned peas and tomatoes during the last two months led OPA to chop their point values for No. 2 and 2½ cans to 15. In an attempt to move frozen vegetables from storage to make room for record pork stocks, all point values were removed.

RAILROADS:

Strike Off

Seeking to avert a threatened strike after the switchmen, conductors and firemen and engineers had refused his offer to arbitrate their wage demands against the carriers, President Roosevelt quickly seized the nation's railroads for the government.

Representing about 150,000 men, the three unions had balked at presidential intervention even after the trainmen and engineers accepted FDR's proposal, as a result of which they received an overall pay increase of 9 cents an hour.

Also accepting FFA's offer at the last minute were the 15 non-operating railroad unions representing 1,500,000 employees, who suddenly agreed to a former government proposal of pay increases ranging from 10 cents an hour for the lowest paid to 4 cents an hour for the highest paid, but also insisted on overtime compensation past 40 hours.

Biggest Year

Nineteen hundred and forty-three was the greatest year in the history of American railroads.

(1) 728 billion ton-miles of freight were hauled, a ton-mile equivalent of 100 million tons hauled one mile.

(2) Passenger traffic totaled 85 billion passenger miles.

(3) Gross earnings exceeded 9 billion dollars, although net operating income amounted to 1 billion, 385 million dollars.

LEND-LEASE:

Aid to Russia:

With many of its great industrial cities razed and natural resources overrun, 3½ billion dollars of lend-lease assistance bolstered Soviet Russia in its critical hours.

To the Russ, the U. S. has sent nearly 7,000 planes, 3,500 tanks, 130,000 sub-machine guns, 150,000 trucks, 25,000 jeeps, 225,000 field telephones, and 750,000 miles of field telephone wire.

In addition, the U. S. has sent 1,000,000 tons of steel, 350,000 tons of non-ferrous metals, 600,000 tons of petroleum products, and more than 18,000 metal cutting tools.

Besides sending wheat, flour, meats, fats and oils, the U. S. also has supplied 10,000 tons of seeds to Russ farmers.

Traffic Toll Drops

On the basis of reports for 11 months, the National Safety Council estimated that America's traffic death toll for 1943 would reach 23,060, 13,000 below the prewar year 1941.

The north central region of the U. S. showed the sharpest decrease for the 11 month period, with 29 per cent less fatalities than in the similar period last year.

The mountain region recorded a drop of 28 per cent, the south central 24 per cent, the north Atlantic 22 per cent, and the Pacific 6 per cent.

Minneapolis, Minn., was the largest city in the country without a fatality in the first 11 months of 1943, while among cities of 250,000 population or more, St. Louis reported the biggest drop of 32 per cent.

Philadelphia the smallest with 1 per cent.

This was a fatal accident.

Out of 4,991 cases to the end of September, the courts have rendered decisions favorable to the OPA in all but 291 actions, officials said. They also denied that OPA regulations have caused "widespread business failures."

OPA UPHELD

Officials of the Office of Price Administration in replying to a house committee charge that the OPA was guilty of "usurpation and abuse of its powers" pointed out that the courts have upheld the OPA orders in nearly all tests.

Consolidated Feature—WNU Release.

NEW YORK—For this new year of pell-mell war traffic the Interstate Commerce commission has elected to its chairmanship William J. Patterson, who knows the nation's transportation system and its problems in war or peace from the ground up. He began studying them nearly half a century ago as a call boy.

Patterson became an ICC member in 1939, but he has been on its payroll for 30 years. He was hired as an inspector of appliances in 1914 when there was a considerable stir about safety. The job expanded until a score of years later it turned into the assistant directorship of the commission's bureau of safety.

Next Patterson went onto the mechanical advisory committee of the federal coordinator of transportation. Finally membership on the commission itself came from President Roosevelt.

Patterson made his first connection with a railroad in Neenah, Wis. He was born there, where the Fox Indians used to hunt and do a lot of fighting, only seven years after the town was founded. A little while as a call boy made him want a better job. Correspondence courses were new then, and well recommended for kids who couldn't get much schooling, so he studied air brake and train operation by mail. That started him up the railroad ladder and finally he became a conductor.

At the peak of his rise he married, fathered a son, a daughter. Later he switched to the ICC. He is 63 now.

HITLER'S legions fall back and the little things which little countries he just beyond the smoke of battle turn more boldly toward Hitler's enemies.

Gen. Royce Talks Of Oil, Transport Rights, Weather

Royce and his Allied military commission sit down to 10 sheep served on heaped up rice by shrewd warwise Ibn Saud, master of the best of Arabia. The talk, after chins are wiped, is of oil and transport privileges. But once, at least, the general certainly asked about the weather on an airplane pilot who has flown his own ships more than a million miles, he is always a little worried about wind and clouds and rain.

Royce is American command in the Middle East, big, wide-jawed, with his military cap usually cocked at a Beattie angle.

He gets on with kings. A while back Egypt's Farouk piloted his heavy warship on a sightseeing trip, though Royce could have piloted Farouk even more skillfully. He was one of the first 30 army officers to qual as a pilot. The war has led a squadron of fighting planes in France.

In this war he began by fighting the Japs in the Philippines and won a DSC and the DFC there to add to the Croix de Guerre he earned a quarter of a century ago. Convinced that Germany can be beaten from the air, he has commanded in the Middle East since September. Most of the army's top men he went to West Point.

A THIN, tireless Englishman helps make the filers of the Eighth air force. Farther than Hitler's "heimed cherubims" in seven seen glimmers.

Of a Long Line Of Tailors, This Son Makes Steel Vests

He covers more than the Americans' heads with steel. They fly cap-a-pie. Well, nearly! If they aren't armed from head to foot they wear, besides an armored vest, an helmet.

It turned blues like Lancelot's shield. This war makes less and less sense. It uses every invention of history's most mechanized age, but the best protection for its bare backs is copied from the days of old when knights were bold.

A dozen years ago Leonard Barratt of the classic Wilkinson Sword company tinkered up an armored vest.

His father, grand and great grandfathers were tailors. Some were sold, in the Battle of Britain, to wives and sweethearts wanting extra protection for their airmen.

Nearly two years ago Brig. Gen. Malcolm Grow, Eighth air force surgeon, heard of the dandy device. Scotland Yard helped him borrow the maker and shortly Barratt was working until all hours.

The latest vests include a thigh-protector. Their flexibility is the result of overlapping plates, one, two and three ply. One ply stops light flak. Three ply stops bullets close up. Each small plate is sewn into an individual pocket on the canvas back. The whole yields to every blow, then readjusts itself as links adjust themselves in a chain.

Helmets are a development later than the vests—steel slats over leather modeled on a block to fit any need. They close down over the eyebrows, around the ears.

Humphrey Bogart was just well on his way to entertain servicemen in that area when the company announced that as soon as he returned he'd start work on "To Have and to Have Not."

That nation-wide search for the voice which most nearly approximates that of the famous Nellie Melba wound up with the selection of 22-year-old Jean Forster, who'll sing in Rene Clair's "It Happened Tomorrow." She moved to Los Angeles two years ago, and before that had sung leading roles with the Golden West Opera company, the Southern California Opera company, and the American Opera company.

Her voice was selected from hundreds by Robert Stolz, who's serving as musical director for the production.

When Janet Wilde was in Hollywood she appeared in a mere handful of pictures, mostly Westerns.

She switched to radio, and was chosen to portray Corlie Archer in the new comedy series—and now the film folk want her back. "That's not for me," says Janet.

Tom Coats is a stunt double whose services are hired for extraordinary feats of horsemanship. He worked in "Riding High," and one chore was to impersonate Cass Daley driving a heavy wagon at full tilt over a desert road. He had to wear a wig with a pompadour, so that in long shots he'd look like Cass—and that wig above his rugged face practically ruined the members of the crew!

His outstanding work in films and in radio guest appearances has won William Bendix a starring air show of his own, the Blue Network's Sunday afternoon comedy-drama "The Life of Riley." It was those guest appearances that attracted the radio moguls' interest.

To present a broad, inclusive picture of American youth in wartime and to show how youth itself is meeting the challenge of increased juvenile delinquency, the National Broadcasting company has announced a 13-week series of programs, "Here's to Youth," which will be heard Saturdays from one to one-thirty, Eastern War Time, beginning January 15.

The broadcast will be presented in cooperation with 10 major voluntary youth organizations with a total youth membership of 31 million.

At 66, Charles Coburn, veteran of stage and screen, not only sings for the first time in films but also engages in his first screen romance. The girl is blonde Constance Dowling, who, with Coburn and Nelson Eddy, is costarring in "Knickerbocker Holiday." As Governor Peter Stuyvesant, Coburn not only wears a peg leg, but does a dance as well.

Ella Raines was considered typically American when she played the girl in "The Uninvited"—Gail Russell got the role. Ella was thought too sophisticated for "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay"—Gail got the part. But—Ella's act as leading woman in "Hail the Conquering Hero," in which she'll play opposite Eddie Bracken—and it's a Preston Sturges picture!

ODDS and ENDS—With that lucky alarm clock back on the Fox Pop show, Parks Johnson and Warren Hall are wondering again what will happen if it ever goes during commercial spots. The sponsor put the $10, or would it go to the announcer, they ask. Clifford Goldsmith, author of "The Aldrich Family," has been asked to re-write some of his especially popular scripts—an innovation in radio if he does it. . . . Renee Tracy of CBS "Bright Horizon" has been awarded service stripes as a nurse's aide. . . . There's been an avalanche of suggestions that Fred Allen and Laurie Melrose do that now-famous stunt of theirs in pictures.

States Change Methods

Of Capital Punishment

Since 1928, the states that impose a life sentence for murder have decreased from 8 to 6, while those that execute by hanging have decreased from 19 to 17, says Collier's. Those inflicting the penalty by electrocution have increased from 20 to 24, while those using hydrocyanic gas have increased from 1 to 5.

Incidentally, Utah still gives the condemned man a choice of being hanged or shot.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

CHAPTER XIV

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Mary O'Hara gives an opportunity to those yearning on the hills of a Wyoming ranch, picks the filly of a "fool" named Rocket. His father, a retired army officer, is disappointed in Ken's choice and by his son's failure in school. But he is pleased at the change in Ken since he has had a colt of his own. When Flicka, the filly, is badly hurt trying to jump the corral fence, Ken takes the opportunity to be for her and to make friends with her. Flicka, however, is still convinced the filly is no good and refuses to have anything to do with what he considers Ken's bad bargain.

Now continue with the story.

The filly's physical condition was improving. She ran all over the hill pasture and her legs. She was up on the hillside near the three oaks in the early morning, broadside to the sun, getting what Nell said was her radiant treatment; and as a first thing in the morning, he looked out of his window and saw her there, standing profile, motionless as a statue, her head hanging low and relaxed. The achievement which Ken had seen in her, that hint of the great something delicious but far away tickling the nostrils of a hound, was more than a hint now. It was a reality. A victory that filled his eyes and shone from his eyes and gave strength to his hands. Flicka was his. Flicka had recovered. Flicka loved him. There was only one more thing . . .

"Dad," he said at supper that night, "Flicka's my friend now. She likes me."

"I'm glad of that, son," said McLaughlin. "It's a fine thing to have a horse for a friend."

Ken's face was strained. "And my leg's better," he said. "It doesn't hurt her. So—"

"Well—what?"

"Well—we've got to find out, don't we?"

"Find out what?"

"Well, Oh," McLaughlin grunted. "She's not good."

"But you said we wouldn't know until we began her training."

"Have you had that in your head this time? That little filly's got nice disposition as any horse ever knew."

"But Dad, how do we know? She might be crazy—like Rocket—like he was herself up in the stables, if he tried to put a rope on her—and she's got to be a horse."

McLaughlin looked at his small son with a quizzical grin on his face. "Oh, that's what you want, it? Some help in breaking that woman."

Ken nodded. Rob's eyes sought him and then he pushed back his chair, took out his pipe and looked at the window grapple.

"I think we might do that tomorrow," he said finally. "Yes, I think we have time. Right after breakfast."

When supper was over, Ken fed Flicka from the table and ran to take her out to the pasture. He told her all about it. He stood motionless for a moment, he begged her to be good. He assured her there was nothing to be afraid of in being halter-broken.

He told her how he and Howard had liked it; they had all had fun together. He begged her—he begged her! Oh, Flicka—

He began to think of what would happen if she wasn't good. He thought of Rocket, and then he thought of her and then he laid his face against Flicka's mane, and stopped talking for a moment, he couldn't tell her about those things—she just wouldn't understand.

Nell came looking for him. She tried to pay a little visit every day. Flicka. They walked up through the pasture together. The air was sweet with the perfume of wild flowers. In the distance were long horizontal bands of deep blue and green, pink with dark blue sky in between. There was a mass of blue and violet cloud above. A little moon rode in the midst of the stars with one star drawn close.

Nell seized Ken by the shoulder and whirled him around before he saw it. "There's a new moon in the sky, Ken—look at it over your left shoulder—and that's good."

Ken obediently looked. He didn't turn to stop looking. If it was good luck—Oh, if it was good luck—

When Gus leaned in at the door next morning and said "What's to-day, Boss?" McLaughlin began to think a full day's work.

It was, planning the hay. The mid-summer hay was deep and ripe. They could cut it early this year. The weather had been so fine that all the ranches in the neighborhood were getting the moving machines were already laying swathes of fragrant hay flat. The air smelled different.

It was said that when hay was cut in the wind, the perfume of it was the wind for hundreds of miles.

The moving machines were their small, razor-sharp blades must go on over, bolts tightened, worn parts replaced; harness mended; worn prongs put in the rakes; some new made up on the stackers.

Ken sat in an anguish of suspense while his father gave Gus directions that, surely, meant a full day's work.

"And Gus—" added McLaughlin, "right now, before we begin with the halter, Ken is going to halter-break his filly—I want you and Tim on hand."

Gus' eyes opened in astonishment. He glanced at Ken's scarlet, down-cast face. "Ja, Boss—Vere will we do it?"

"In the calf pasture. Call Tim. McLaughlin rose from the table. We'll do it right now, and get it over with."

Tim and Gus came down from the stable carrying lariats, halters, and a lead rope.

They stood in a group just inside the fence, and McLaughlin walked forward a short distance with Ken, and told him to call the filly.

Ken obeyed. Presently Flicka appeared coming around the shoulder of the hill. She trotted up to Ken.

McLaughlin undid the red bandanna from Ken's neck, handed it to him and said, "Just stick that around her neck and tie it in a loose knot."

Fuzzled by these strange directions, Ken obeyed, and Flicka returned what, apparently, she thought was a caress, nuzzling his neck with her nose.

"Well, she's all right," said McLaughlin. "She's not good."

"But you said we wouldn't know until we began her training."

"Have you had that in your head this time? That little filly's got nice disposition as any horse ever knew."

"But Dad, how do we know? She might be crazy—like Rocket—like he was herself up in the stables, if he tried to put a rope on her—and she's got to be a horse."

Ken sat in an anguish of suspense while his father gave Gus direc-

"But Dad," said Ken, completely dazed, "how did she get halter-broke?"

McLaughlin did not answer directly. "That's for you," he said, turning to the small audience. Gus and Tim were both grinning.

"That's the way we break horses on the Goose Bar Ranch. I wish Ross Buckley had been here to see that."

"But Dad," protested Ken, slipping the halter off of Flicka's head. She stood beside him, nosing at it, nipping at it with her lips.

"Figure it out," said McLaughlin boisterously as he walked away. "Come on, Gus, we'll get at those machines."

That night, when Ken came back from taking Flicka her oats, he walked to the terrace where his parents were sitting and said, wagging his head, "More poultices, please—"

Nell, who was laughing, stopped as she heard Ken's words and turned to look at him. "What's the matter?"

"Her hock is swelled up again and she holds the leg up."

Both his parents sat so still and so gravely for a moment, that it made Ken anxious. "The poultices cured it before—they'll cure it again, won't they?"

Nell got up suddenly. "I'll go down to look at it, Ken—"

McLaughlin went to.

They looked at the wound which was swollen and obviously painful. Her right foreleg was swollen too, all the way from the knee up to the scar of the chest wound.

Ken was alarmed when his father pointed out to him the second infection. "Can we put poultices on that too?" he said anxiously.

Nell looked at him. "Sure. It won't be an easy place to bandage, but we'll manage."

Next time McLaughlin went to town he brought back a bottle of serum and gave Flicka a hypodermic injection.

"What's it for, Dad?" asked Ken anxiously.

"For a generalized infection like this."

"Generalized infection?"

"Yes. She had just one infected place on her leg. This chest wound was all healed up and never had been infected. Now it's infected. The infection came through her bloodstream from her leg. That's called a generalized infection."

McLaughlin spoke in a casual, matter-of-fact way, and Ken's anxiety was allayed.

"Will it get her well quick, Dad?" he asked.

"Hope so, son—sometimes it helps a lot—sometimes they seem to do as well without it."

"Where'd you get it?"

"I got it from Dr. Hicks."

The name of the vet always made Ken think of money—and it gave him a shock. That thing his father had said—You cost me money every time you turn around—

"How much did it cost, Dad?"

"They were walking back together. It cost ten dollars."

Ken stopped walking and McLaughlin stood on without him, heading for the tool house, near which Gus was working on one of the moving machines.

Ten dollars? Ten dollars . . .

Ken's father craned about, every penny the boys spent . . . about a forkful of hay . . .

Ken ran after his father. McLaughlin was already arguing over the blades with Gus. "Dad," he began.

"Well!" McLaughlin's head was raised from the machine.

"I—I didn't know—what you said, you remember—"

"What you wish it!" roared McLaughlin impatiently.

"That's cost you money every time I turn around. I didn't see how I could, but now, why, Dad! Ten dollars . . . thanks ever so much, Dad."

"Ten dollars!" shouted his father, with the twisted, sardonic grin on his mouth. "Why, for you, Kenzie, that's nothing. A mere wave of the hand. You're the boy that took away three hundred dollars just looking out the window for an hour."

"Why—why—I never—three hundred dollars—"

"Go on away and let me work," roared his father, and bent his head again over the machine.

Ken found his mother. She was busy too, sorting the laundry, sitting on her heels on the floor picking over a big pile of shirts, blue jeans, socks and linen.

Ken posed the problem. "How did I lose that? I never did, it?"

Nell looked at him. "Six dollars, Mommy," she wrote on a card. "You looked out the window for an hour when you should have been writing a composition. So you weren't promoted and you have to keep on tuition and school."

"Three hundred dollars," breathed Ken with awe. "How can that?"

"Count it up, eight months' board at $23.00 a month. A hundred dollars for tuition and school. You wrote all that, you see. If you hadn't written the composition, your father wouldn't have had to pay that over again for you."

Germany's 'Second Army' Is Nazi Way of Total War

Storm Troopers, Elite Guard Are Backbone of Hitler's Special Military Forces; Every Third German in Uniform.

As I walk down Pennsylvania avenue these brisk winter days with all the sharp reminders of history about me—General Jackson there on his horse, tip-titled in the air with his charger pawing the heavens, in the center of Lafayette park; the theater of the war where Seward was attacked as part of the plot that laid Lincoln low; and across the road, the White House with its kaleidoscope of history—I wonder about the year ahead of us.

Are we going to face a casualty list of 400,000 Americans in the next 2 1/2 months?

I have watched the President closely at the last press and radio conferences since he returned from Cairo and Teheran. I have seen, so serious in his mien that I have not seen before. He said, when he was asked what Stalin was like: he is a realist, like me.

And in the last few days, as I have talked with officials, I find this: the Reich has two conversations. Is America standing at Gethsemane, with the supreme sacrifice to come?

The great boast of Americans is that we are realists, that we are not to be led astray by starry-eyed dreamers. And yet the last thing that America is willing to look at is the bare facts.

Here are some of them: The Allies have one army apiece—the "Big Three." The Reich has two—the armed troops and the uniformed "second army" (as early as 1939, an association of German tailors admitted that every third German was in uniform).

The Storm Troopers

First there is the "SA"—"Sturm Abteilung"—storm troopers.

They started from a nucleus of "brown shirts" who kept order when the Nazis had their early meetings before they came into power. By 1932, this group had grown to three million men. Roehm's "brown shirts" army, Roehm, you recall, was purged. This great organization was then theoretically liquidated but the forces which made its organization possible remained.

there are many ramifications which are strictly under the party control—the Nazi transportation corps—three separate air groups, the famous "Toti" organization ("Toti" means death in German but in this case it is a man's name). This is a great construction (and now, after the bombing, reconstruction) organization, the boys who parade with shovels instead of guns.

There are several others—the Labor service, trained in camps (somehow the old CCC camps in this country); then come the various welfare, women's and youth organizations.

This deep regimentation (remember, one out of three in uniform) is the Nazi way of creating a total war state. When the German armies are beaten, these organizations will still remain. They can work on after defeat unless they are uprooted.

A fuller realization of this problem may make it easier for Americans to understand why, after his latest trip to Europe, the President is in sober mien, why the high army officials and the civilians who know this problem intimately, hope that civilian America will not be overconfident on the eve of military victory.

Status of Fascism in Spain

One of the things that was not discussed by the "Big Three" in Cairo and Teheran, as far as the world knows, was Spain.

The President, in answer to a direct question when he returned, said he did not see Franco. He admitted, however, that something delayed his return. He never said what.

There have been signs that someone has been whispering into Generalissimo Franco's ear just the same.

He has disbanded the Falangists. They are the uniformed party members, a real military and hard-fisted bunch of uniformed fascists, the active party members of the Spanish fascism.

I saw a few in Spain. They were polite to me as a foreigner but they were not pleasant people. The ones I met in Spain were young, untutored youths, anxious for ones; glad, I would imagine, in that wrecked nation, to get food and a suit of clothes from the government.

There is nothing more hard-boiled, of course, than a hard-boiled youth. Take away from him the decent outlets for his animal spirits—on the ball field, in the school yard, anywhere where a man whoop at a holler and be himself—and what happens? A terrific, pent-up force, all the primitive emotions seeking an outlet.

The Nazis and the fascists knew this and their strength is still in the strength of the youth, the perverted: the primal instincts of the caveman, which lurk within all of us, turned to the base uses of the party.

In Spain, a nation of individualists, has at last been able to shake itself loose from part of this bondage. The iron hand of Hitler, and the now withered hand of Mussolini, have been withdrawn. Spanish fascism is almost an empty shell.

It is an axiom that fascism can only live on blood, the blood of its enemies and when they are not within reach, its own people. It has no other sustenance. It represents that group which, in the lower animals, produces the outlawed, the loathed, the mad. We have these phenomena among the wolves, among elephants, even among horses—the blood of the elephant, the mad horse for pleasure and not for food.

Starved to Death

So Spanish fascism has been starved to death and the essential, decent instincts of civilized man are again coming to the surface.

In this great struggle of the ideologies, it has taken force to beat down the strength of the reaction that human beings, banded together in an honest cause, have a chance against the beast, only if they can outwit him at his own game. Once the active element of evil is conquered, the natural decency of the civilized man rise again and dominate.

ON THE HOME FRONT

When you have made one rag rug you will find yourself a member of an enthusiastic clan, counting the days until you fall heir to a dress of a particular color that fits into the design that is developing under your fingers.

These enthusiasts also bleach materials to tone them down; they brighten others with dye; they antique some with tea and they have a wonderful time.

The sketch gives all the directions you will need to copy this fascinating rag rug with a flower medallion in the center. Or you may make two of the medallions, sew them together and add braided handle for a knitting bag. Braid the fabric strips tightly and keep the work flat while you see the circles for the roses and the loops for leaves; then sew them together. Be careful to make the circles for this and for sewing the braided rows around the edge of the rug.

NOTE:—This rug design is from BOOK 8 which contains 31 other designs to make from scraps of fabric and other odds and ends. Price of book is 15 cents. Address:

There's a Surprise With These Spareribs! (See Recipes Below)

Good Taste

"There are a lot of meat cuts with lower point values which we are sure we'd like if we just knew how to prepare them tastefully. Won't you tell us how?" This is a request I'm hearing more often lately, and so today's column will give suggestions for these cuts of meat.

Fortunately a great many of these lower-point meat cuts belong to the variety class, add "variety" to meals and are a wonderful source of vitamins and minerals. You'll like them this way:

Corn Biscuit Pies. (Serves 4 to 6) 1 veal kidney Melted butter or substitute 1 cup cooked, chopped meat 1 cup cooked peas 1 cup cooked carrots 2 cups well-seasoned medium white sauce Corn biscuit

Wash kidney; remove outer membrane. Split through center; remove fat and tubes. Brush with melted butter; place 2 inches below broiler heat. Broil 5 minutes on each side. Slice kidney; combine with meat, peas and carrots. Mix with white sauce. Pour into individual baking dishes or casseroles. Prepare corn biscuit: Sift together 1 1/2 cups flour, 1/2 cup cornmeal, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 3/4 teaspoon salt and a few grains of sugar. Cut in 1/4 cup shortening; add 1/2 cup milk to make a soft dough.

Pat or roll out dough, 1/2 inch thick on lightly floured board; cut with round cutter 1 inch in diameter. Place biscuits on meat and vegetable mixture. Bake in a very hot oven (450 degrees) 15 minutes.

Liver Loaf. (Serves 6) 1 1/2 pounds beef liver 1/2 cups dry bread crumbs 1/4 cup melted shortening 1 egg 1 1/2 teaspoons salt 3/4 teaspoon pepper 3/4 teaspoon paprika 3 tablespoons minced onion 3 tablespoons parsley 1 cup milk

Pour scalding water over liver and let stand 3 minutes. Chop and add all other ingredients except milk. Mix thoroughly. Shape into loaf; brush top with additional melted shortening. Place loaf in baking dish.

Working With Pans: Adventure with low point meats and you'll find them as delicious as the high point ones. They are highest in food value and best in flavor if properly cooked.

Double up on proteins during times like these is wasteful. Select carefully from this one group for the meal: meat, poultry, fish, eggs, dried beans or peas or soybeans, cheese or nuts. Remember, just one to a meal!

Balance the use of cereals with plenty of vegetables and fruit. Naturally cereals and breads have to carry more of a load than meats, but they can't take the place of meat and vegetables. Use them to make the flavor of meat and fish go further.

Pressure Groups Point Way To Mild Fascism in U. S.

Government by Majority Rule Ceases to Exist When Various 'Interests' Begin Trading Votes for Concessions.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

At a recent White House press and radio conference, the President was explaining his pre-Christmas remark—that it was time to discard the term "New Deal"—the remark that gave the cartoonists so much fun. He used a fable about "Old Dr. New Deal" who had healed the patient of "internal troubles" (the depression). But when the patient had an accident and had broken his arms and legs, he had to call in his partner "Dr. Win-the-War" to heal him.

A correspondent asked: "Doesn't that add up to a fourth term declaration?"

The President showed his irritation in his answer. He said that that hadn't been under discussion, that the question was picaresque. Then he cracked himself, leaned back, half smiled, half apologized, with the remark that the questioner would understand that he had to answer that way.

Two things came to my mind at once. First, that the President was thinking about the war and postwar problems, and to be brought back to earth with a bump was very much like being awakened by an alarm clock in the midst of an interesting dream. That was one thing I thought of.

Another was just what the United States, and the whole world for that matter, would be suffering from after the war and what the cure would be, if any.

Recently there have been several predictions that we were in "for a dose of mild fascism."

Background for Belief

I never took that so very seriously until three news items were called to my attention. One was the statement that the CIO committee of political action was planned as a nucleus of a labor party. That didn't smell of fascism but it had a slightly collectivist aroma.

The next item was in the London News Letter, a little pamphlet edited by Commander King-Hall, member of parliament, the contents of which are cabled to Toronto, Canada, where it is printed as an American edition. King-Hall is an independent in politics with slightly conservative leanings.

Here are the excerpts to which I refer:

"... There are many indications at what might be called the lower levels of domestic practice, that there are forces and tendencies at work in Britain which are going to produce great changes in our political system. Some of these changes are shadowed in a pamphlet entitled 'The Future of Party Politics' written by Commander King-Hall in 1937. It was there argued that a crisis, both domestic and international, was developing and demanding for its solution a high degree of national unity in Britain, and that the political expression of that unity, and the instrument for making it effective must be a national government..."

In other words, the writer means by a "national government" a coalition government such as England has now with no opposition—what amounts to a single party.

The Mood in Britain

And here is another excerpt, a quotation from a speech in the house of commons which the London News Letter says was given a "wide measure of assent."

"... Government must always be by majority but let it not be by party competition and party majority. In this country at the present time, there seems to be coming into being a central body of opinion very well and adequately represented on all sides of this house. It is to that central body of opinion that I should like the government to appeal in a bolder and more forward-stepping policy..."

This speaker continues his appeal for a single "central body of opinion" and warns against "dividing a people (the British) who provide some bridge between the extreme capitalism of the United States and the extreme collectivism of Russia."

Just what all this was getting at, I understood a little better when I read an article by Freda Kirchway in the Nation on the mood in Britain.

Miss Kirchway had interviewed a number of people in England and she says that "big business forces in England have recognized more clearly than these forces in America the need for government control." They are ready, she says, to accept the government as a partner to save themselves from liquidation.

Some of the people interviewed by Miss Kirchway gave her the impression that they saw in the set-up ahead "a successful, polite form of semi-fascism," which will prove acceptable to the key people of these groups. She doesn't agree with this herself and she believes British labor will be ready to fight it at the second election after peace but she believes these people believe it.

How much of a similar feeling exists in the United States, I do not know, but, quite independent of England, many people are shrugging their shoulders and saying it is a possibility here.

One thing may point in that direction. That is the way the various pressure groups are now operating in congress. Already many trades have been made even to the point of those "unholy alliances" (all alliances except those in which we belong are unholy, of course) which it was charged in the senate had been formed between southern Democrats and some northern Republicans.

As soon as powerful pressure groups can agree among themselves to trade concessions for votes, government by majority rule ceases and the moment you begin to break down the party lines, you are in danger of having one party which in the end is no party.

I can well understand how when anyone contemplates the problems of our domestic affairs in the post-war period, it is hard to keep one's mind on the war.

The Change in Invasion Plans

It is a perilous thing these days to write more than an hour in advance of the invasion if one uses the future tense. The majority of opinion "as I write" (that's the saving line) believes that the invasion won't get under way until late spring although one report through Sweden said the Germans were expecting it between Christmas and New Year's.

But from the time that General Eisenhower was named as commander and the other changes in command were named, it appeared that the shape of the whole Allied plans for the assault on fortress Europa began to change rapidly. The speed with which the Russian armies were moving toward the German frontiers set new forces in motion.

Suddenly the Mediterranean became less important in the picture as Washington saw it. It was pointed out that the British had a larger force of men, ships and supplies in that theater than the Americans. What had seemed the most important thing in Europe to America ever since our troops landed in North Africa suddenly grew less important. The Middle East, which had looked as if it were the gathering point of a new blow through the Balkans, perhaps with the help of Turkey, shrank on the horizon. The shifting of British commanders seemed to make this clear.

And then there were calls for greater speed on the part of the Allies, it seemed as if a fear that Russia might get to Berlin first was stirring new activity and there were stories that Spain was not as anxious for Allied friendship as she was to keep the "Bolsheviks" from getting nearer her borders, that if she must make new enemies, at least it was better to have the Allies against her than to have Russia get too near her.

But even without these rumors, it grew clearer and clearer that the job ahead was colossal. Hopes that Germany could be brought down by bombing alone were given up. It really seemed as if her factories and indeed her cities had moved underground.

Good-Sized Chapel Made From Tree in California

The first Baptist chapel built in Santa Rosa, Calif., in 1873, and still standing, was constructed from a single tree. The tree was 18 feet in diameter and yielded 78,000 feet of lumber, of which 57,000 feet was clear of knots. A portion of the top of the tree was broken when it was felled, and this was made into shingles. The lumber for the church was valued at upwards of $1,800 and some idea of the size of the church may be gained from the fact that the main auditorium is 80 feet by 37 feet, the parlor is 30 feet by 20 feet, and the pastor's study is 28 feet by 16 feet, while the tower is 70 feet high.

If you were to say the first bugle call of the day in the Army is "Reveille"—you'd be wrong. It's "First Call." But you probably know what cigarette gets first call with Army men—it's Camel. And Camel is the favorite with men in all branches of the service—Navy, Marines, Coast Guard, too. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are. —Adv.

Was our face red And fuzzy—we put off shaving last Saturday night. But never again, Sunday morning after having taken care of some two hundred chicks and cooking breakfast—the wife always makes us cook breakfast on Sunday morning—and while she gets the kids all ready for Sunday School, and herself. Boy, were we in a stew, we forgot to shave at all. So off to Sunday School all a-fuzz. Didn't even think of it until folks started staring, and we suppose wondering what zoo had lost its prize ape. But as we said before, never again will we pass-up our Saturday night shave and wait to perform that chore until Sunday morning.

Grady Reynolds, Jr., is down over France. Grady is bombardier on a Flying Fortress. Reports were circulated the latter part of the week that the family had received word that he was killed. This was not true. He was on his tenth mission over enemy territory when he was shot down. On previous missions he once barely got back over England when he had to bail-out and once cracked up in landing and had been hit once, the bullet barely grazing his neck. All there is we can say is we sincerely hope that Grady Jr. landed safely and can work his way back to his Base in England. We talked long with him when he was home not so many months ago. He is a fine, clean, gentlemanly young man, one that his mother and father can well be proud. We cannot feel but that we'll hear better news soon, from him.

You can't sell War Bonds if you don't advertise them....There is an Old Age Pension meeting at the Court House Saturday, Jan. 22. Prominent speakers too!

Yes, it is a small world, isn't it? Billie Maddox, who was recently wounded in action over England, and who is now in a hospital there, was in London not so many moons ago. He and his buddies had just returned from a mission over Germany and were on a three-day pass. They were eating in a Red Cross Recreation Center when three sailors passed their table and went on into a back room. Billie spoke to his Officer and told him that he thought he knew one of the sailors and was going back to see. Upon opening the door who should he meet face to face but his cousin, Donald Roberts, who was also in London on a two-day pass.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an Abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

FAMILY RESERVE

INSURANCE COMPANY

(Formerly Luquire Insurance Co.)

MORE THAN TRIPLES IN SIZE IN 3 YEARS!

During the past three years, Family Reserve Insurance Company (formerly Luquire Insurance Company) has more than tripled in size. Such rapid growth indicates strong public confidence and aggressive, efficient management.

Since a company's strength is not necessarily measured by its size but rather in terms of its ability to pay its obligations as they arise, it is significant to state that according to a report of the "Insurance Index", Family Reserve has one of the largest ratios of assets to liabilities of any insurance company in the United States or Canada.

If You Have No Family Reserve Policy—INVESTIGATE!

Local Offices And Representatives Are Maintained In Every Section Of Alabama

During the past three years, Family Reserve has made the following progress:

★ Reserves for protection of policyholders have increased (legal reserve, capital and surplus) 364% to a total of $1,580,000.00.

★ Number of policyholders has increased 140% to a total of 210,000.

★ The annual income of the Company has increased from $847,000.00 in 1940 to a total of $1,518,000.00 in 1943.

★ Investments of policyholders' reserves and surplus during this period has amounted to approximately $1,300,000.00.

Of the company's total investments during this period, $1,178,000.00 has been invested in United States War and Treasury Bonds and mortgage loans, all of which contribute to the war effort. Family Reserve has financed one entire housing project in a housing-shortage area, and has made commitments to finance two other housing projects. Family Reserve policyholders, therefore, may have the satisfaction of knowing that the premiums they deposit with their Company are very materially contributing to the war effort.

It is with a deep sense of gratitude and responsibility that we make this report to the people of Alabama—gratitude for the loyalty, friendship and confidence of our fellow citizens; proud responsibility for and in the maintenance of the principle upon which this Company was founded and is operated—one standard, the highest in service and financial responsibility.

THE ADVANTAGES OF A WHOLE MILK MARKET TO CHILTON COUNTY

By Marvorne Henley

The establishment of a whole milk market is certainly of vital importance to the farmers of Chilton County for many reasons. Namely, encouragement for a better breed of cattle, better feeding, soil improvement, production of clean high grade milk, and increasing all year-round cash income.

Milk does more for the body than any other food, and does it more cheaply. A greater use of dairy products will increase the physical strength of the nation which is very important today. The Chilton County farmers are given a chance to help win the Victory through the whole milk market.

The farmers will become more aware of the necessity of a good breed of cattle, good pasture, good feeding, and good management, in order to produce a higher grade of milk, therefore receiving a greater cash income.

In order for dairy cattle to produce an average percentage of butterfat per year, they must have an adequate supply of food. This will tend to make the farmers more aware of the necessity of planting legume hay for the cattle, which will in return improve the soil.

The market will help show the people the necessity of clean milk, not only for sale, but for home consumption. Clean milk is milk that comes from healthy cows, is of good flavor, free from dirt, and contains only a small number of bacteria, none of which are harmful.

A low grade milk will prove to the person that some changes should be made. This will encourage him to do away with unhealthy cows, unhealthy persons who do the milking, or what ever the reason may be, and construct clean places for the cattle, with healthy milkers.

The advantages of this market should open the eyes of the farmers to the necessity and importance of good dairy cattle.

Cooking the Axis Goose Southern Style

PLANES, tanks, guns, ships, munitions, flowing from Southern industry, are literally writing the history of Axis defeat on every battle front . . . cooking the Axis goose—Southern style!

Blazing blast furnaces, giant steel mills, enormous tin plate plants, and numerous fabricators and finishers of iron and steel products in five Southern states served by the L & N Railroad have furnished a large portion of the Nation's contribution of essential production to the great war.

A mighty train of 112,000 cars, crowding the L&N main track from Cincinnati to New Orleans, 950 miles, would carry only a part of the annual Southern production of steel and its products. Hordes of additional trains are required to handle the incidental ore, stone, coal, coke, manganese and other things essential to steel manufacture.

This constitutes a miracle of production and transportation—Free Enterprise at work in Southern industry and railroad transportation—can any other nation or any other form of government match such performance?

In peace times the growth of the South has been constant if not so spectacular. No agency has contributed thereto more than railroad transportation. None will do more in the future.

The L&N, The Old Reliable, hopes to keep modern in its facilities and service and thus merit the good will and patronage of its peoples.

Family Reserve Becomes Name of Luquire Co.

President Troy Arnold Announces Important Change in One of Alabama's Leading Insurance Concerns.

Birmingham, Ala., (Special) Troy G. Arnold, president, announces the change of his Company's name from Luquire Insurance Company to Family Reserve Insurance Company. The change in name comes from the Company's desire to have a name that is significant and descriptive of its business.

The change is in name only. It remains the same Company, with the same personnel, the same agents, the same officers and the same policies. All existing policies bearing the name "Luquire" will remain in force under the same conditions as in the past.

It was found that many people had difficulty in spelling, pronouncing and remembering correctly the name Luquire—which is the name of the Company's founder, an old and honored family name in Alabama. The new name—Family Reserve Insurance Company—was selected from many others because it simulates exactly what the Company possesses to its more than 210,000 policyholders.

Policies are deposited with the Company by these policyholders for the sole purpose of building up in each policyholder's family a Reserve for unforeseen misfortunes that inevitably will occur. Hence the name—Family Reserve.

Family Reserve Insurance Company (formerly Luquire) was organized in 1927 and has shown remarkable growth in those sixteen years. During the past three years, the Company has more than tripled in size. By no less authority than the "Insurance Index" the Company is rated as having one of the largest bases of assets in liabilities of any insurance company in the United States or Canada.

During the past three years, reserve for protection of policyholders' legal reserve, capital and surplus has increased approximately 350% to a total of more than $1,700,000. In the same period, Family Reserve assets increased 300%.

"We have a deep gratitude," says President Troy Arnold, "to the people of Alabama for their loyalty, friendship and confidence. We feel a great responsibility, also, to maintain the principles upon which the Company was founded and as operating—our standard, the highest service and financial responsibility."

President Arnold is one of the best known insurance men in the South. In a typical American style, he came up through the ranks as agent, superintendent, district manager, supervisor, secretary and vice-president. As an agent, he sold insurance policies for the protection of families in every rural section, village and hamlet of Alabama. Mr. Arnold is a native of Calhoun county. Family Reserve Insurance Company is a Southern company, owned and operated by Alabama men, to serve the people of the South.

KILL OR BE KILLED

United States Marines paid the stiffest price in human life per square yard for the capture of Tarawa, vital Pacific outpost.

It was kill or be killed. Your boys did not flinch when they ran into the deadliest fire-power along the beaches of this important Gilbert Island stronghold. That assault, bloody and costly, is one of the many which must be made before Tokyo and Berlin are pounded into dust and ashes.

What are you doing to back up the boys? Remember these are boys from this very community, perhaps from your very home. Any home in your neighborhood which today does not display the treasury's red, white and blue 4th War Loan Shield proclaiming "We bought Extra War Bonds" is not backing the attack. Every Extra War Bond you buy becomes a direct fighter against Japan and Germany. If you could but see one man die on the battlefield, you would not count the cost of your slight sacrifices to buy Extra War Bonds to make each succeeding assault less costly in the lives of our boys. You can't afford NOT to buy Extra War Bonds for the 4th War Loan if you would help these boys.

What's Doing At Isabella High

Guess what now—the girls have organized a basketball club. (Stand back folks, there's plenty of tickets). There isn't anything too formal about this club, however. Some of the girls who are very interested in basketball have succeeded in making provisions to organize a team to play a few games this year. Incidentally, they have some good material, too. Of course, all interest in watching the girls perform is not solely on their playing ability. There's a certain amusing quality to their reactions in a game, especially when the referee gets in the dog house about his calling of a certain play.

It looks as if the Isabella cagers are out to get some wins this year. They sacked up their second consecutive victory when they beat Jemison last Friday. Tuesday night, they played a return game at Plantersville. Since this is written before the game we can't give the returns on that one. Both of the above mentioned wins were over teams which had already given us pastings. We like to see those comebacks.

Harold Scott has up and left us... moved to Clanton. We all hate it, especially Ruby. Hersell Patterson is now the chauffer of bus No. 12. OLD-AGE PENSIONS FROM NATIONAL PLANNING BOARD

This report shows that it is the State of Alabama to establish an old plan for providing and adhering Old-Age Pensions in the The Federal fund available is per month to every Aged, Needy, widual in Alabama which in years provided $7.50 per month for some 26,000 aged citizens in State.

Why this failure to the old plan? The answer—politics, politics more politics. Are the old people played again for politics and ed as they were in the last campaign? Certainly not!

Let Mr James A. Simpson, of Alabama's Old Age Welfare tell you why the Federal fund not been matched by the State of Alabama and the old-age assistance administration is costing the old some $10,000,000 a year! Let him you how hard he has worked for Age Pensions? Let him tell detail about his Bureau Bill S. would have offered in the Senate spring?

Let Mr Simpson and Mr. Gordon tell you why the Governor asked the Legislature last May for only $1,300,000 for the old when other of these gentlemen the edge with the Governor's Interim Committees on the sub old-age pensions?

BUY TO BACK THE NAVY—Navy men are making extra sacrifices to keep the guns firing around the world as the attack goes forward this second week of the Fourth War Loan. Mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers and wives and friends of these men in blue are being asked in every county of the state to match the sacrifices of navy men with extra bond purchases.

See All The People Says State Chairman

Back The Navy's Attack Around The World By Buying War Bonds

See all the people!
This is the message of State War Finance Chairman Ed Leigh McMillan this second week of the Fourth War Loan drive in Alabama. See them not once but twice and even three times and ask them to back the attack by buying extra war bonds, he stated in a call to all citizens to make sacrifices to match the sacrifices of the men on the battle stations.
"Our navy was the first to suffer heavy losses," he said. "They bore the brunt of the sneak attack that black Dec. 7 at Pearl Harbor. But they have fought the enemy to a standstill every time they have met him since that day.

"Thousands of Navy men have lost their lives. Other thousands have spent hours and even days on oil-soaked seas.
"They have suffered and won in a score of battles.
"What they have done on the very first line of battle we can do here at home. Sacrifice and get the job done.
"Those who wait to be asked to buy extra war bonds and those who fail to get out and do the asking will not be matching the grim courage of these brave navy men.
"Extra war bonds will literally plant our state's colors" on their ships. We cannot afford to hesitate.

"Our dollars are needed to keep their guns firing and to give them new ships when the ones they fight on go down under their feet.
"The Navy will lead the way to Tokyo just as it has put our arms and supplies in Africa and England.
"It will beat the Japanese as it has beat the Nazi U-boat.
"Let each of us bear our share of their grim task by buying extra war bonds and carrying the message of their need to every home, every farm, every office and every factory.
"The Treasury Department has a special home front shield to be placed in every home and office that buys extra bonds in the Fourth War Loan.
"Let us all back the Navy's attack and earn the right to display this mark of home front cooperation with the men who are fighting our fight."

MORE ABOUT BONDS FROM MR. PATILLO

Reports from the various sources from which reports of sales of War Bonds should come, indicate that we are not buying as rapidly as we should. Let's not wait till the last moment. Delay often means defeat and we can't accept defeat in Chilton County so let's all get busy and do quickly this job that must be done.
We are planning to have a big auction at the Air Port on Saturday, Feb. 12th. That is the day the paratroopers will jump from a plane at the Air Port here. We have been promised 36 of them for that day. It will be a great day for Chilton County and we hope you will all be here to see this marvelous exhibition.
We are asking donations of articles, such as gun shells, wire fencing, cigarette lighters, nylon hose and any other article that is hard to get. These articles will be auctioned and given as premiums to the one bidding the highest purchase of War Bonds for the scarce articles, perhaps you can give some keep-sake, antique, or some food item, or pig, calf, fancy poultry, puppy or other pet, flower or shrub, potted plants or almost anything that you feel like donating that will stimulate the purchase of bonds.
The auction is scheduled to begin at 10 o'clock a.m. and continue until all articles are sold. The Paratroopers will appear from the clouds sometime between 11 and 12 o'clock.
Let's make this the biggest and happiest day ever experienced in Chilton County—J. C. Pattillo, Executive Chairman.

Last Wednesday evening Miss Ola Mae Parrish and Sgt. Cecil C. Smelcer were married. The marriage vows were read by Rev. G. G. Williams in the presence of a few relatives and friends.

Mrs Smelcer is the daughter of Mr and Mrs W. L. Parrish.
Sgt. Smelcer finished High School at Chilton County High in 1940 then going to Sylacauga where he was employed until he entered the armed forces. He is stationed in Missouri at present.

Sgt Smelcer will leave after a brief honeymoon to resume his duties in Uncle Sam's army and Mrs Smelcer will return to her duties at Childersburg.

HIGHLAND

Last Sunday was our regular preaching day. Both services were well attended and we had two of the most wonderful services possible. We were glad to have Sgt. L. Z. Dickey with us and to have him bring both messages—L. Z. lived in this community until a few years ago when he moved to Anniston and shortly after entered the service of his country. We are proud of him and wish for him the best of everything in his work. May we ask a remembrance in your prayers in his behalf.
Another of our service boys was with us also. Sgt and Mrs Coy Lockhart.
We were also glad to have visiting us, Mr and Mrs Bernie Johnson and son from Liberty Hill Community.
Let's all remember our Sunday School at 10 o'clock and come and bring someone with you.

Billy Maddox Safe; Wounded In Action In England

A letter from the War Department reached Mr and Mrs Fate Maddox last week that their son, Sgt. William C. Maddox had been wounded in action in England and was confined to a hospital there.

On January 20th, the Department wrote Billy's parents that he had been released from the hospital on Jan. 9, and was again in action. That was three days before they received the first notice of his injuries. In other words, Billy was back in action for three days before the notice of his being wounded was received.

Billy, as everyone in Clanton knew him, was a graduate of Chilton County High School, and being a model student in school and in his work after graduation, his friends feel sure that he has made a model aviator and wish him God's speed and courage in every Mission he undertakes.

Sgt. Maddox received his Basic Training at Gulfport, Miss., as an airplane mechanic. From there he was sent to California for assignment. After six weeks in California he was sent to Rapid City, S. D., where he was assigned with a crew of 10 men on a B-17 and was trained there as an aerial gunner. After finishing this training he and his crew sailed for England on October 26th.
Until Billy was injured he had completed five missions.

Mrs Smith and young Mr Smith are getting along fine.

Alarm Clock Missed Most Survey Shows

The housewives of Chilton and Perry Counties will be interested to have a report from the survey that was made in these counties during the early part of November by the local office of the Bureau of the Census in Clanton. This survey was on Civilian Needs and was made at the request of the War Production Board.

American families talk about elastic much more often than about durable goods and appliances when asked what shortages are 'bothering' them, but the absence of alarm clocks is described by the largest number as causing real inconvenience or hardship, the War Production Board has announced. These facts were revealed in a Survey of Consumer Requirements and was made public by vice-Chairman Arthur D. Whiteside.
Of nearly 5,000 persons asked, 'What are some of the shortages which have bothered you most?' the largest number mentioned food, followed at a considerably lower level by elastic, galvanized ware, some textile products, and alarm clocks.

'Most of the needs brought out by this survey can and will be met,' Mr. Whiteside said. 'The items which civilians urgently need are for the most part fairly simple, calling neither for elaborate processing nor for complicated component parts. In all such cases, where materials or factories are available, we are taking vigorous steps to increase the supply. Increased production has already been approved for a number of these things, and while we cannot yet be certain of the exact quantities which can be made available, we do know that further steps must be taken to meet these needs more adequately. Midwinter Jellies Pep Up Menus!
(See Recipes Below)

Get Your Spreads!

Are you low on brown points? Then set the jelly and jam kettles boiling with midwinter fruits and make some delicious spreads to save points.

Last summer when homemakers were putting up their fruits they discovered they did not have enough sugar for putting up all the jams and jellies they would like, but now they have probably caught up on the sugar and can boil the juices they saved into delicious, quivery jellies. Use the jellies and jams on biscuits and muffins when the butter is scarce. It spells first aid and appetite appeal to menus.

For those of you who did not put up juices for winter jelly-making, there are plenty of fruits in season now that make delightful spreads. Out with the kettles and colanders, with jelly glasses and paraffin and here we go:

Orange Marmalade.
(Makes 6 6-ounce glasses)
3½ cups prepared fruit (about 1½ pounds)
2½ cups sugar
1 3-ounce box powdered fruit pectin

Prepare fruit. Use peels from 6 medium-sized oranges and 2 lemons. Cut in quarters. Lay quarters flat, shave off and discard half of white part. Put peels through chopper twice. Add 1 cup sugar, 2½ cups water, juice from 1 medium-sized lemon and ¼ teaspoon soda. (This 1 cup sugar is in addition to measurement given above.) Cover. Heat to boiling. Simmer 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure prepared fruit into 3 to 4-quart kettle, filling up last cup or fraction of cup with water if necessary. Place over high heat. Add powdered pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Pour in sugar at once, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, heat to a full, rolling boil and boil hard 2 minutes. Remove from heat, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot marmalade at once.

Honey Orange Jelly.
(Makes 6 6-ounce glasses)
1 cup juice
3 cups honey
½ bottle fruit pectin

To prepare juice, squeeze and strain juice from 2 medium oranges. Measure juice into a large saucepan and mix well. Heat to boiling over high heat and at once add fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then heat to a full rolling boil and Jelly Hints: Consistency and flavor are the most important points in making jelly. Careful cooking can give you a high score on both.

To tell, fruit juices must contain pectin or must have it added from a commercial product. Pectin must be combined with the correct proportion of sugar in the presence of acids and mineral salts to form jelly.

Best jellies are tender and quivery and translucent. They should cut easily but break with a clean, sharp line.

boil hard ¼ minute. Remove from heat, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

Grapefruit Marmalade.
(Makes 2 to 3 pints)
1 grapefruit
1 orange
1 lemon

Slice fruit very thin, remove pulp from peel. To each pint of pulp, use an equal quantity of water and ½ times as much sugar. Let come to a boil. Remove from fire, let stand overnight. Boil the shredded skins of the fruit in twice their bulk of water until tender, then let stand overnight in the water in which they were boiled. On the next day, heat the skins to the boiling point, then add pulp mixture and boil rapidly until thick enough to congeal when tested. Pour into sterilized glass jars and seal.

If you can spare a few points for the crushed pineapple called for in this recipe you can make a colorful and tart jam that will delight the family no end:

Winter Jam.
2 cups cranberries
1 cup diced apples
1½ cups water
1 cup crushed pineapple
2 cups sugar
Juice and grated rind of 1 lemon

Cook the cranberries and apples in water until they are clear and tender. Add the rest of the ingredients and cook until thick. Mash cranberries lightly. Add vinegar and water and cook until soft. Put through a coarse strainer, add sugar and spices. Cook 8 minutes, stirring constantly. Pour into sterilized jars and seal immediately.

Colorful and spicy is this next jam which all the relatives will love. It is only cranberries can give:

Cranberry Jam.
8 cups cranberries
1 cup each, water and vinegar
6 cups sugar
1 tablespoon ground cinnamon
1½ tablespoon ground cloves
½ tablespoon ground allspice

Mash cranberries lightly. Add vinegar and water and cook until soft. Put through a coarse strainer, add sugar and spices. Cook 8 minutes, stirring constantly. Pour into sterilized jars and seal immediately.

And now for those of you who have bottled grape juice on hand. Here is an excellent jelly that is quickly made with powdered fruit pectin:

Grape and Orange Jelly.
(Makes 7 6-ounce glasses)
3½ cups sugar
1½ cups bottled grape juice
1½ cups canned orange juice
1 box powdered fruit pectin

Measure sugar into a dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure juice into a 3- or 4-quart saucepan and place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Pour in sugar at once, stirring constantly. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

If you want sugar-saving suggestions, write to Lynn Chambers, Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago 6, Illinois. Don't forget to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

National Service Act Answer

War-time Disagreements

Many Cooks' Root of Labor Disputes; Pressure Groups, Individuals Unwilling To Lay Aside Financial Desires.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

National Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Why did the President order the army to take over the railroads? You can get several reasons from even different presidential advisors. I won't repeat them. I will name, however, the epitome of those the potentially minded probably gave; it was a good thing for 1944. That the people total of a number of conceptions of the master minds who are advising concerning the political campaign which is ahead of us. There are two other reasons which are of the time-hardened officials of Washington offer (aside from the great, real or fancied, to the war effort). These officials let the political stream flow over and let the particular job assigned to them done in an figuring out its political effects. Needless to say, they belong to that large, conscientious army which exists, an army of people wise or unwise in their judgments at beholder to no political party or their positions.

These are the three probable reasons they offered; first: The roads were seized as a threat against other industrialists who might make trouble in accepting terms of future labor disputes. Second, such demands for increases which can't be easily dodged, (perhaps just demands, perhaps not, depending on who holds the scales). The second reason offered is this: Simply because many of the President's present labor advisors have little or no experience in labor relations, in the methods of labor action.

Understanding

There are a number of signs which might point to reason one as the one which turned the scales, but, like most of the other motivating forces behind the recent labor decisions, they spring from the same source as does reason two: misunderstanding of the methods of labor action.

You will recall that William Green, A. F. of L. chieftain, when he made what seems since to have been an ill-starred attack on the Marshall statement that threats of strikes might prolong the war, stated flatly that the railroad unions had never intended to strike.

That statement isn't questioned in spite of the angry denials of the railroad union leaders. It is what is known in every railroad office as every old time counselor and advisor in Washington before the roads were taken over.

Unfortunately, the whole situation is a reminiscence of the conversation concerning the coming of the war, stated flatly that the railroad unions had never intended to strike.

Consolidated Features—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—Every morning at eight bells—8 a. m. to land-lubbers—the navy's top man squints upward from the deck of the yacht Dauntless in the Washington yard and throws a smart salute toward the high-flying flag which he now says will throw heavier and heavier shadows across Japan as this new year runs along. A full admirer, there is talk of raising him still higher, to match senior officers of our Allies. This would make him admiral of the fleet, a rank no American has held since Dewey 45 years ago.

Adm. Ernest Joseph King's family, as much as an ardent army has left of it, lives in Washington but the admiral sleeps on the Dauntless because it can also accommodate the staff which helps him plan the coming offensive. Having given his smart salute he walks, properly by way of Virginia avenue, to the Navy building on Constitution.

There he puts in a big day's work for a man already two birthdays past retirement age. He was 65 in November and four then a rumor got around that Admiral Nimitz would succeed him. When this did not happen the rumor died a natural death.

Married since 1915, with a son in Annapolis, and five daughters, of whom four are married to army officers, Admiral King has been in the navy for 40 years. He has had his flag for 10 years, has been a full admiral 7 years, and his present high post for more than 2.

WILLIAM LOREN BATT of the ahead of the days when the war will be stumbling offstage and doesn't like what Vice WPB Chief he sees. He fears a Shortage Of Products Ahead lots of material, but too few products for a commodity-hungry United States. This is likely to be so, he says, because workers will be in one region, stockpiles in another.

The government gives Batt a dollar a year for miscellaneous jobs, chief of which is the vice-chairmanship of WPB. He has worked at the latter since early '42. His assignments keep him in his office 13 hours a day and busy at home more nights than not, but he still finds time to eye postwar problems. He believes that if management and workers put together this country can have an unequalled prosperity with living standards so high the golden '20s will seem poverty-stricken by comparison.

Batt has been studying the relation of management and labor for years. In private life he heads the S. K. F. Industries at Philadelphia. He got to that post from a running start off an Indiana farm. Born near Salem, he walked six miles a day to get part of his schooling and finally was graduated from Purdue with an engineering degree. That led him into manufacturing, and manufacturing forced him into a study of management on which he is now an authority.

Away from Washington he lives in a Philadelphia suburb. For 35 years he has been married to a chum of his childhood and they have 5 children, as well as a substantial equity in 5 grandchildren.

WORD reaches this corner by a round-about road from Tahran of the Big Three in Finland in their talks and that when Russia sits down to make peace with her small northern neighbor she may be surprisingly reasonable. This is a rumor to file for future reference, and meanwhile it will cheer Premier Edwin Sillars. Since he took his job last March he has worried chiefly about Russia's intentions.

Finland's Premier Can Breathe Much Easier After This

Linkomies is one of Europe's most emdite statesmen. Educated abroad, chiefly in Italy and Helsinki, he is vice president of Helsinki university and professor there of Latin and Roman literature and is certainly the only prime minister who has written a Latin grammar. Six years ago, when ex-President Hoover visited Finland, Linkomies welcomed him with a Latin oration.

His political activities have kept pace with his academic progress. He has held various municipal posts in his native Viipuri and for 10 years has been a member of parliament. He is titular head of Uusi Suomi, leading conservative daily and organ of the National Coalition party.

Fifty years old, Linkomies is energetic, persuasive and a terrific worker. Notwithstanding his professional background he gets on with all sorts of people and is popular partly, perhaps, because of his quick sharo, dry wit.

CHRONIC SKIN ULCERS

Almost every week we are hearing and reading of the remarkable results obtained by the use of sulfathiazole and its close relations, sulfafurazole, sulfapyridine and others.

While its effect in reducing deaths from pneumonia from almost 10 percent to almost 2 percent is its most outstanding action, its effective use in local infections in ear, throat and other parts is being frequently reported.

One of the discouraging ailments in bedridden and elderly patients is what is called decubital ulcers or bed sores, some of which are deep and absolute refuse to heal despite rest and all forms of applications.

As sulfathiazole tablets have been effective in infected tonsils and sulfathiazole in ointments has helped infected burns (osteomyelitis), two Cleveland physicians, Drs. J. Goodman and J. F. Corsaro, report their results of using sulfathiazole in five patients who had these chronic ulcers for a long time.

These ulcers had been treated with or without other methods, one for as long as 21 months. These physicians crushed the ordinary sulfathiazole tablets into a powder and applied this powder daily by means of a salt shaker.

The quantity of the drug varied with the size of the ulcer, as sufficient powder to coat the ulcer completely was used in the amount varying from one to three level teaspoons. "Almost" immediately after the sulfathiazole powder was applied the infection cleared up and clean, healthy granulation tissue, followed by rapid healing appeared.

Their success with the ordinary ulcer or bed sore led these physicians to use this method for one patient with chronic bone infection, two with heel-healing ulcers of the feet due to injury, one with draining fistula or canal from a recently amputated stump, and one with a stubborn pilonidal sinus. This is a sinus or running sore at lower end of spine.

Five is not a large number, but these particular ulcers are always difficult and slow to treat, yet "healing" was rapid and complete in each patient.

This will certainly be good news for physicians and patients who have been "battling" with old chronic ulcers for long periods of time.

Women Healthier Than 25 Years Ago

In my student days physicians and teachers of young babies feared the coming of summer because it meant summer diarrhoea and great loss of life among infants and children. Thanks to the better care and preservation of milk and the advance in knowledge of preparing food, fear of summer does not exist any more.

Another interesting fact about life and health has been brought about by World War II. Women are now engaged in work formerly done by men and the Metropolitan Life Insurance company has recently made a study of the health of our women since the last war.

They find that our women "are now in excellent physical condition to carry on the tasks of war."

This excellent condition is due to the phenomenal gains made in the last 25 years in the nation's fight against important diseases like tuberculosis, pneumonia and those associated with pregnancy and childbirth. During the last 25 years the death rate of women insured in this country was cut in half.

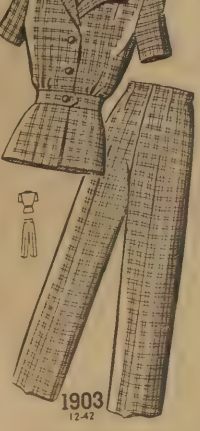

"There were 13 deaths in every 1,000 women, ages 15 to 74, in 1915-16, as against only seven in 1940-41." During this same 25 years the death rate among young women—ages 15 to 24—was reduced by 70 per cent.

The reduction in the death rate from tuberculosis was mostly responsible for these figures, as tuberculosis stood first as a cause of death previously to World War I, whereas it now stands fifth.

Pneumonia was responsible for 107 deaths per 100,000 before World War I; now the death rate is about 21 per 100,000.

Moss Bandages

Peat-bog moss is today grown under the guidance of botanists as a raw material for the making of surgical dressings. Processing the moss is relatively simple. First, it is carefully cleaned of all extraneous matter, then dried, steam sterilized and formed into gauze-covered pads of various sizes. Wounds heal much more quickly with moss than with cotton bandages because of better drainage and its antiseptic properties.

Moss bandages are today being utilized by the Allies in many war theaters of the world.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

Notice that Julian and Robert Evans have their new hardware store open for business. Have a pretty good stock too, considering the difficulty now of buying anything at all. Tuesday afternoon as we passed we also noticed that Robert had his plants down, in front of his new store.

Coming under the head of good news this week is the fact that Sleepy Miller will return to his old place at Clanton Motors. Right now he's sorta under the weather but that won't be for long, maybe. Things have changed considerably in the short time that Sleepy has been in the Navy. When he gets back on the job, he will only need a pair of pliers and a pocket full of bail wire—that's standard equipment at garages now—he's sure won't be able to get any new parts.

Mighty glad to learn that our friend R. W. Williamson is at home again and much improved. He is not ready for a lot of company so his friends will have to put off going to see him just yet. You know when a man has too many visitors he talks too much. Talking is one of the things he mustn't do much of. So, no visitors, no talk, savvy?

Bill Minor, the sage of the Yellow Front Store, when asked what he would do if a man called him a dirty liar, answered quite solemnly, 'How big a man?'

Don't you forget that City License that is due. They become delinquent February 1st, and will cost you ten percent more. City Clerk, Hugh Simpson, is giving you fair warning in an advertisement in this issue and if you have to pay more, then there's no one to blame but yourself.

H. N. (Nelson) Parrish, who is stationed at Patterson Field, Fairfield, Ohio, has been promoted to Lt. Col. Col. Parrish is in the Army Air forces but is connected with the Health department and travels from Camp to Camp promoting this phase of the work. We congratulate young Lt. Col. Nelson Parrish on his latest promotion and wish him well.

Reading so much in the past year about the terrible Russian winters we can't miss passing this little piece taken from the Pub. Aze. but originally coming from the Stars and Stripes.

A man who lives in a village located on the Polish-Russian border recently went to the village fathers and said: 'I have to know. Is my town officially Polish or Russian?' After long deliberation, the elders nodded wisely and answered: 'It is part of Poland and therefore Polish.' 'Well, thank goodness,' sighed the peasant, 'I don't think I could have stood one more of those Russian winters.'

Mrs. Latham Ellis of Mobile is here this week on a return engagement. This has been going on for, lo, these many years. (We ain't saying how many) Ever since the day she was born, Bell Martin Ellis has spent her birthday with her Dad—J. Mell Martin. His birthday and Bell's is on the same day, January 24th. We do believe they missed one, somewhere back through the years. Anyway we wish them both every best wish and may both have many more birthdays together.

hopes that the war will soon be over. But it is optimistic because I feel that it is high time that you on the home front really get busy.

I don't intend to mince any words. I know you've done a wonderful job at home, and you will keep on doing a wonderful job until final victory is ours. You're buying your bonds; you're saving your fats, scrap metal, and rubber; you're enduring ration points, gasoline rationing, and shortages with such courage that every American historian from Charles Beard today to Back Rogers tomorrow, will smile at and praise your efforts. But your job is not over, and the biggest, most important task lies ahead.

If you've read any history—and too many of us haven't—you know that we made a tragic mistake after the last war by not knowing what to do about winning the peace. We Americans have always been pretty good at shooting and flying and fighting through mud and sweat and sacrifices to attain a victory that we can put our fingers on. But we haven't been too able and accomplished at winning intangible victories. We couldn't work our way out of the slavery question peacefully; we had to fight it out with the loss of thousands of men. We got all hot and bothered through newspaper talk and fought Spain just before the turn of the century. And in 1919, we won the war, lost the peace and started talking as if somebody else took advantage of our good will and started a war on us.

Now we are beginning to think in terms of months as to when this war will end. When the big victories start coming, when the big battles start, we are going to be mighty excited. The days, weeks, and months are going to pass quickly. And when the war is over, we shall once again find ourselves unable to make a just and lasting peace. For we shall not know how. And it will be your fault.

It will not be the soldier's fault. He is too busy. He has other things to do, and you know it.

It will be your fault. It will be your fault if someone starts a rumor that Russia will attack us as soon as she gets a chance. It will be your fault if someone says Britain is trying to rule the world and won't work with us after the war. It will be your fault if someone viciously insinuates that China has the same diabolical aims as Japan. It will be your fault if all these rumors add up to spell defeat for our well-laid peace plans.

world, with whom we shall have to work to attain peace. And don't try to find fault. Be honest. Try having a few town meetings of your own. The people in Connecticut found time to organize their open forums. And I'm not yet ready to admit that the people in Connecticut are a bit better than the people in Central Alabama. Use your P.T. A. meetings, your Lions Club, your Kiwanis, your Pilots Club, and don't forget about those people who don't live in Clanton proper, the people in the rural sections. They are just as American as you are. There is no room for class consciousness in the U. S. A. So, see that they get a chance to share in your program. They'll appreciate it and I think you will have a little more respect for yourself when, some fifteen years from now, we are able to see the making of a just and durable peace.

You owe it to yourself. Don't say you owe it to the boy on the battlefield (even though you do) say you owe it to yourself, because you do, too. You've done a splendid job of helping win the war. Extend yourself a bit farther and make the job complete.

It isn't up to the President. It's up to General Marshall. It's up to you.

Reviews & Previews

By Irvin M. Lande
A REVIEWER'S VIEW
By the end of January, it shall have been a year since I, as a civilian, last saw Clanton. Now that these 12 months have passed, I think that it is fitting and proper that a review of world affairs be forthcoming. For, after having written more than one hundred fifty articles for the Clanton papers, in which I stressed the need of us all to think and act with patriotism, and having written them without having seen any formal service in the Armed Forces myself, I believe that it may be interesting, at least to my own conscience (if not to the readers), to make this review.

In these 12 months' service, I have learned a great deal. A year is certainly not enough time to learn all the intricacies of Army organization and practice—let alone understand them—but it is surely enough time to see what has happened and what is coming; that the days of intense training are over and that the big drives necessary for victory, are ahead.

For in these twelve months, I have watched the Air Corps (which, with the Navy, will be the deciding factor in the Japanese conflict) from its lowest branch of instruction—Basic Training—to its highest echelon—military. And I have seen the later training program come to an end because the United States Air Forces will not need the thousands of meteorology officers it planned to have. The AAF will not need them because, as the United States News pointed out, we shall be in this war at most, four years, instead of the 10 years that experts figured we would suffer if Russia collapsed under the Nazi drives.

We can thank the Russians for shortening the war. No matter how much we may dislike their political doctrines, we shall be indebted to the rest of our days for their resistance. They have made the probability of 500,000 casualties for us seem large, whereas, had they been defeated, 5,000,000 American casualties would have seemed small.

Within the past year, I have watched, and you have too, the United States and her allies rise from a position of defense to one of offense. We have seen the Army, last year this time undermanned and untrained, work itself into a position wherein, like a good football team, it has plenty of substitutes and replacements for every position. Not that it expects to use these men, but should the unexpected—and now unbelievable—happen the services will be able to throw in a second team every bit as good as the first team.

That is, I believe, the spot we are in. And the services still need more men. They need them because the second team must be near at hand. And it is being shipped overseas every day. It may not see action, but it will be ready. And, in order to carry on the daily jobs of organization here at home (jobs from K. P. to administration), the armed forces are calling for more men.

This may be an optimistic report. It may be too much so. It may be the product of the imagination of one who

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Inflatable rubber barges for the U. S. Navy are "cured" at B. F. Goodrich in a steam vulcanizer that is 42 feet long, 10 1/2 feet in diameter, weighs 35 tons and has a door that alone weighs 10 tons. It's a record for size and tons out the 25-foot barges at a rate of one every 30 minutes.

Synthetic rubber plants already completed and those scheduled for construction will have an annual rated capacity of 850,000 long tons. Before the war the United States consumed about 600,000 tons of rubber annually. Now, however, our supplies must be shared with the United Nations.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY OHARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin, given an opportunity to choose any yearling on his family's Wyoming ranch, the city of a "deer" named Flicka. His father, a retired army officer, is disappointed by Ken's choice and by his son's failure in school. Flicka is placed at the ranch in Ken since he has had a colt of his own. When Flicka, the colt, is badly hurt trying to jump the corral fence, Ken has the opportunity to care for her and to make friends with her. Ken's mother and father quarrel when he tries to tell him she has seen a wildcat. Ken goes into town to a movie to get away and regain her poise.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XVI

Rolling along the Lincoln Highway at about sixty miles an hour, five miles faster than her usual pace, Nell had a delicious sense of escape. In Cheyenne she crept along the streets, merrily at the Neon lights that outlined the features of every booth, hot-dog stand, shop and restaurant. The streets were almost as bright as day.

At the theater, she saw Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire in a dance-team picture; and here she was lost in delight. Her real life was completely erased. Back again in the days of college proms and holiday dances, she danced the hour in a daze, hardly knowing where she was, or at what point her life was to be picked up again.

Now she must get home—it was nearly eleven. Flicka's long time. She had to open the window, hang her head out, looking down at the front wheel, trying to keep it right on the center line of the road. It seemed that the actual distance of twenty-five miles before she turned off the highway and drove in under the Goose Bar Ranch sign.

Rob was sitting in the arm chair by the radio, absorbed by a playlet he was listening to. One knee was hooked over the arm of the chair. His boots were off, slippers on the heather brown socks that were drawn up over the cuffs of his riding breeches. He was smoking.

Seeing her he smiled and nodded, then held up a hand for silence, not wanting to miss a word of what he was hearing. "Mind if I hear this out?" he said softly.

"Yes," he said. Nell answered stiffly, and went upstairs to bed.

Half an hour later, he lay in bed beside her, smoking a last cigarette in the darkness. It seemed to him that the walnut bed wanted to sing slightly. The tremor emanated from Nell. Lying there, her back turned to him, she was tense from the back of her neck to her toes.

Rob finished his cigarette, ground out the stub in the ash tray on the table, then rolled over and put his arms around her. He held her tight to him, one arm under her neck. With the other hand, he pressed her head against him, smoothed her hair, laid his cheek against it as he so often did, kissing it softly.

It took a long time for her trembling to stop.

When it had, he said quietly, "What frightened you up in the Stable Pasture?"

She didn't answer. "Was it the wildcat?" "Yes."

"I heard you shoot twice—did you get the cat at all?"

"No—that was cottontails I was shooting at."

"Did you get the cottontails?" "I shot them—but the mountain lion got them."

"What happened?" "You know the rock up there that I call the Sunset Rock, because I so often climb up it to look at the sunset?"

"Yes—the one in the woods a little way, that comes up out of the earth sharp and jagged—like the top of a mountain poking through."

"Yes. Well, I had shot the two rabbits, and the light was fading and there were beautiful colors in the sky. I thought there must be a fine sunset if I could get up out of the woods to a high place and see it. So I thought I would climb up the Sunset Rock. It's so steep places you have to go up by your hands and knees, you know, hanging on—"

"I know."

"So I set the twenty-two against a pine tree near the base of the rock and tied the legs of the two rabbits together with that narrow black ribbon I had around my hair, and I hung them on a jagged stump of a branch that stuck out of the trunk of the pine tree."

"How high up?" "Not very high. Just opposite my face. And then I climbed up the rock and stood up there looking at the sunset. When it was over I came down on the opposite side of the rock, and walked around the base of it to the place I had left the gun and the rabbits, but before I got there I met the lion face was coming—not ten feet away—he was facing around the rock, too. And he had my rabbits in his mouth."

"I'll be darned."

"We just stood facing each other."

"Were you scared?"

"Not then. Just so surprised. We neither of us moved for a moment then he just melted away. It was getting dark—it just seemed as if I blinked my eye and he was gone. I stood listening, couldn't hear a thing. Then I got terribly scared, and started to run home. Then I remembered I shouldn't run—and I tried to walk. I kept looking behind me. I was in a regular panic."

"I know he was around here."

"How'd you know?" "I saw footprints the other morning."

"Where?" "In the corral."

"In the corral?" "Yes, four perfect prints in that patch of earth that gets the dampness from the water trough."

Nell was silent, thinking of the cat stalking out from the woods, across the open space to the corral.

"The Stable Pasture—that's pretty close, Rob."

"There's lots of game up there, Nell. The woods are full of deer."

It was true. Several of the hay crew had told of seeing deer when they went up to the Stables early in the morning; and Nell, herself, one day, just pretending that the shape of some twigs and branches and little shrubs were the delicate shapes of deer, suddenly said that it was true. A group of five does and fawns stood there motionless under her eyes.

"It's strange that the men didn't see the prints of the mountain lion, too."

"Gus saw them. He was with me. I told him to take them over. I didn't want the men to see them and talk about it."

"Because of Ken?" "Yes. He's gone through enough this summer, without lying awake at night, the banks of cloud that crept over the sky were heavier, and sometimes thunder rumbled intermittently for hours.

Nell dropped her sewing in her lap and looked out of the window. Her brows knotted with anxiety and distress.

The filly won't pull out of it, Rob had said, when the little mare was in the stable, was right. Flicka was going to die. If Rob knew—if, perhaps, he had known ever since the generalized infection had poisoned her blood stream and he had given her the salt of serum, he had time they got one stack topped they stretched long strands of baling wire over it to bind it to the earth, and hung heavy railroad ties on the ends of the wire. This kept the wind from blowing the stacks away.

The weather still held; but, each night, the banks of cloud that crept over the sky were heavier, and sometimes thunder rumbled intermittently for hours.

When they went up to bed an hour later, all her nervousness was gone. As she blew out the candle, she said, "That cat wildcat—he's got my hair-ribbon."

The afternoon that Ken finished copying his composition, he went over to the Post Office with his mother in the Studebaker, and dropped the long envelope, containing his next three pages of writing, and his mother's letter, into the mail box.

Driving back to the ranch, he sat silent, aware of peculiar feelings within himself. It was another achievement, something that might amount to quite a good deal in the estimation of his father and Mr. Gibson. It was to be kept a secret from his father until Mr. Gibson's answer came.

"Of course, he may not answer," said Nell. "He may just tell you when you and Howard get there."

This made school feel very near. And that made Ken think about Flicka. He had never dreamed that at the end of the summer, Flicka would still be lame and half sick. He hated to leave her that way. After he had gone, no one would care for her so devotedly. He would have to shift for herself. She would need her rations of oats for a long time yet, to put the flesh back on her bones. She had been getting so thin, lately—thinner, it seemed, every day. And her coat was losing its fine color and sheen.

Rob had no eyes and no thought for anything but the haying and the weather. The extra men had gone; Rob and Tim and Gus were storing the baled hay in the barn; and the long way in long lengths that gradually took on shape and style, the sides forked down until they were smooth and perpendicular, the tops shaped in rounded ridges to shed the rain and snow. Each time they got one stack topped they stretched long strands of baling wire over it to bind it to the earth, and hung heavy railroad ties on the ends of the wire. This kept the wind from blowing the stacks away.

Play Flute by Nose

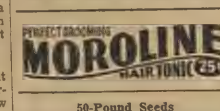

"Singing through the nose" is a common criticism of some vocalists, but only the Filipinos are known to be able to play a flute with the nose. The difficulty of producing a sufficient volume of air to make musical notes by this method may readily be imagined. Evidently these natives have greater lung power than most people.

be realized that although the situation in some raw materials is easier now, many materials required for expanded civilian production are still very limited. In addition, there is little immediate prospect that manpower or machine capacity can be made available to make complicated or elaborate items. In general, it is the simple, uncomplicated things which can be increased. I am deeply appreciative of the attitude the people have shown toward civilian supply problems. I believe they understand that there must be a certain time lag in transplanting available materials into available goods, and I want to assure them that our programs are being pushed as rapidly and vigorously as possible."

Believing that OCR's production programs for essential civilian goods should be in part based on information from the consumers themselves, Mr. Whiteside recently announced a survey of the American homes. During the second week in November, census enumerators rang 5,739 doorbells, obtained 4,935 completed interviews. Only 29 persons refused to answer questions. The bulk of this difference between a valuable and integral part of the supply survey, as it indicates migration with consequent shift to other purchasing centers.

The survey's statistical sample of the population, recently developed by the Bureau of the Census, was based on a random selection of houses and apartments in 68 counties, comprising 120 localities distributed throughout the nation, and carefully chosen for representative character. Proven statistical method shows that, on this basis, each answer, if obtained 150 or more times, may be considered to represent approximately 7,400 persons. Therefore, when elastic is mentioned as the troublesome shortage that comes to mind first in 201 households it may be concluded that the shortage is equally pressing in about 1,487,800 families.

By number of families reporting hardships, the alarm clock takes first place. Elastic appears in second place and waste tubs third. Other items given as causing hardships to American housewives are listed, in importance, as: sheets, boys overalls, iron cords, pail or buckets, electric iron, washing machines, women's girdles, ammunition, clothespins, radio tubes, pots and pans under 10 quarts, tableware, scissors, women's panties and babies waterproof panties.

But America isn't complaining. Survey enumerators were unanimous in their report of stout morale and cheerful acceptance of shortages. A typical comment, constantly repeated, was, "After all, there's a war on." Most people said they were "getting along all right" and showed reluctance to register anything that might be construed as a complaint. Even in hardship cases, there was a general willingness to do without. Not that people wouldn't like to buy more of the things they need, or merely want. The questions on successful and unsuccessful attempts to buy clearly demonstrated that demand is waiting for a freer supply of goods.

Results of the nation-wide survey the broad outlines of which are given here, are being carefully applied by the Office of Civilian Requirements in revising its program determination for 1944.

What's Doing At Isabella News

By Jesse Culp

The Isabella cagers chalked up another win last Friday afternoon, when they edged by the Maplesville team 34 to 33 in a playoff period. All during the first half, the game was definitely Maplesville. At the end of the half they had a score almost double ours. But somehow, the Isabella boys got down to business in the second half, and of course, that's the half that tells the tale.

When the timekeeper's whistle blew, the score was 32-32. During the three-minute playoff period, Maplesville got a foul shot and made it. Then with about a minute to play, we got the ball back to our goal and sacked it for the one-point margin. Thus the game ended.

There was one thing about this game that hasn't been true in all of our games this year: Both sides played good clean ball. That's the kind of team we like to play.

The Beta Club had charge of chapel program last week. After a song by the assembly and devotional led by Alice Culp, Jesse Culp gave a reading entitled "Jake Boggles". Featured on the program was the reading, and dramatization of Browning's amusing poem, "The Courtin'". The selection was read by Mavorene Henley and acted by Evelyn Owen, Faye Bonds, and Jesse Culp. During the announcements to the student body, Mr. Turner gave an interesting talk on good sportsmanship.

Each year, it is the custom of the DAR to sponsor a good citizenship contest for high school girls. Each senior class selects a good citizenship girl to represent the school. By the "name-drawing" process, a girl is selected to represent the county, then one for the state, etc. The winner gets a trip to Washington.

This year the Isabella seniors have selected Mary Ann Oden as good citizenship girl. Mary Ann is deserving of this title. She has a good scholarship record and is a recognized leader among her classmates and friends. Although the selection for higher honors will be on chance rather than merits, we are hoping her name will always be in the right position in the hat.

This 'n That — Ernest McCary is leaving us February 1. He has joined the Navy as apprentice seaman. We are going to miss Ernest in the senior class. Here's wishing him luck in the service... We were glad to see two of our last year seniors at school last week. Bill Grooms, in the uniform of our Coast Guard, and Lloyd Jones who is in the Navy... The seniors have ordered their invitations, while the Juniors have ordered their rings... Do you like public speaking? If so, make it a point to attend chapel Friday morning, when the FFA is holding their chapter speaking contest finals. Quite a bit of interest has been shown in the contest this year, and this contest should be interesting to the winners in the chapter eliminations will represent the chapter in the district contest.

THIS is what we've been working for all along. This is the year to hit and hurt the enemy. This is the time when everything you do counts double. If we all get together and do all we can, we'll be over this hurdle and well on our way to complete and crushing victory.

No question about the men in uniform—they'll go "all out." But can we count on you to back them all the way? Your quota is where you work—you've got to buy your War Bonds and then buy more, until every last loose cent you have is fighting. Tough? Of course, it's tough—unless it is a sacrifice you're simply not doing your share!

Make the sacrifice now—buy more than the extra $100 Bond your country counts on you for—winning the war is worth any sacrifice you make. Besides, you aren't giving, you're lending to America! You'll get back every dollar you invest in War Bonds, with interest.

An extra $100 War Bond now is the minimum for everybody—can't we count on you for more?

Eating Guide Assures Health For Your Family

Meat is a first class protein food and deserves a high place in your diet. It's used to build and repair body tissues and is necessary for both children and adults.

Nutritionally speaking, we aren't exactly on our toes. Doctors tell us that nutritional diseases constitute our greatest medical problem, not from the point of view of deaths, but from disability and economic loss.

You as homemakers can do much to give the doctors a big helping hand in this matter if you firmly resolve to feed the family according to the rules laid down by the National Nutrition Council. The rules are few, easy to follow, and flexible enough to fit any food budget. So, how about it, homemakers, are you willing to give out a big heaping plate of health to your family? Your reward will be happier, healthier and better people to live with.

Here's the guide to good eating. Read it over and over until you have fastened every rule in your mind and you will automatically include food from each of the classes in your menus every day.

Milk is first on the list for it's the most nearly perfect food. See that the grownups get two or more glasses daily and the children have three to four glasses.

Vegetables and fruits regulate and protect the body. They should not even be skipped for they are easily worked into the diet. Of the vegetables you should have two besides potato, preferably one green and one yellow, and one of these raw.

Of fruits you should have two a day and one of these should be a citrus fruit or tomato. This is a way of guaranteeing enough vitamin C to the system. Vitamin C is easily lost if cooked; that's why a citrus fruit or tomato is required as they are usually eaten raw.

Eggs are expensive right now but you should provide each person with 3 to 5 per week. When the price goes down and we have more on hand give them at least one a day as that's preferred. It doesn't matter how you have them—as eggs or incorporated into food.

Cereals and bread should be enriched or whole grain; they're necessary every day. The butter requirement is about 2 tablespoons daily. Other foods may be included in the diet to satisfy the appetite and complete growth and activity needs. This, of course, includes sweet and candies or extra quantities of the above depending upon the activity of the body.

One of the most important classes of foods which must be included in the diet are the protein foods including meat, cheese, fish, poultry or legumes. Although placed last on the list, they are one of the most important and I want to talk particularly about them in today's column because two of the most important of protein foods are rationed.

Proteins are part of every living cell. The body must have them if it is to grow or build or repair itself. You can see the necessity for giving plenty of protein-rich foods to children. Adults need them, too—although their bodies have been built, they are torn down with the work they do, and the tissues must build and repair themselves.

Fish, poultry, cheese and meat are "first class" protein foods. Legumes, in which class we include, roughly speaking, those plants that grow in pods, and consist of navy beans, black-eyed beans, pinto beans, kidney beans, black beans, lima beans and soy beans; dried split peas, peanuts and lentils, are what we call "second class" protein foods and that means they do an excellent job of body building but can't take the place of meats entirely.

Possible exceptions to this are peanuts and soybeans, both of which are now being considered complete proteins.

While meat is rationed and protein values high, we will have to include plenty of all the proteins in our diet. Meats with lower prices and lower protein values are just as good for you, nutritionally speaking.

Here's our round-up of recipes today. They'll stretch meat and points and show you delicious ways of fixing the second-class proteins:

- Dinner Complete.
- 2 cups sliced raw potatoes
 - 2 cups chopped celery
 - 2 cups ground beef (1 pound)
 - 1 cup sliced raw onions
 - 1 cup finely cut green pepper
 - 2 cups cooked tomatoes
 - 2 teaspoons salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon pepper

Place meat and vegetables in layers in greased baking dish. Season layers with salt and pepper. Place green pepper slices on top for garnish. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 2 hours.

Vegetables and fruits belong in the dietary daily. If possible have one of each raw so that you can get all the vitamins possible. Long cooking will destroy many precious vitamins.

Country Baked Limas. (Serves 8)

- 2 cups lima beans
- 1/4 cup bacon, cut small
- 1 medium onion, sliced
- Place lima beans, bacon and onion in layers in pot. Combine the following:
- 1/4 cup light molasses
- 1 1/2 cups brown sugar
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 2 tablespoons chili sauce
- 1 cup tomato juice

Pour the mixture over beans. Bake 4 to 6 hours in a slow (250-degree) oven. Uncover for last 1 1/2 hour.

- *Cherry Cake.
- 1/4 cup shortening
 - 1/4 cup sugar
 - 1/4 teaspoon vanilla
 - 1/4 teaspoon lemon flavoring
 - 1 cup finely chopped, drained maraschino cherries
 - 1 cup milk
 - 3 cups sifted cake flour
 - 3 teaspoons baking powder
 - 1/4 teaspoon salt
 - 4 egg whites

Cream the shortening and sugar. Add the favoring and chopped cherries, then mix. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk. Beat until smooth, then fold in egg whites beaten stiff. Place in a greased, shallow, floured pan and bake 45 minutes in a moderate oven (350-375 degrees). Cool and ice with boiling icing.

SNAPPY FACT ABOUT RUBBER

A Wisconsin truck driver recently received a tribute to the Office of the Rubber Director because he risked his life to save the tires on the front of a tractor-trailer unit that was driving. The driver caught fire, but the driver lacked it up and removed the tires while he was ablaze.

The far-reaching influence of rubber should not be exaggerated when it is known that to 40% of the motor vehicles made in this country were made in December, 1941. More than half of them were owned by families with incomes of less than $3,000 a week.

Bombers can take off and return to these bases usually without facing serious enemy opposition.

Flak Towers Take High Raider Toll

This is one of the most successful defense devices developed during Britain's long struggle for survival against Nazi bombers. It is a flak tower of the anti-aircraft command. Such towers proved very effective last summer during the sneak attacks against seaside towns. Last year flak towers accounted for 93 downed enemy planes and 59 "probables."

A MAN who has met so many motion picture stars that he can't even remember how many he's known told me that Joan Fontaine is really pretty wonderful. Vitality, intelligence, warmth, sensitiveness—she has them all, said he. He seems to be right. A girl who grew up with her and her sister, Olivia de Havilland, told me that Joan always did know what she wanted, and how to get it. Well, when she came to New York after finishing "Frenchman's Creek" for Paramount, she wanted a vacation with her husband, Brian Aherne. So she took it, in a quiet corner of Connecticut—and sandwiched work as a nurse's aid in with doing the marketing.

You'd never have known, if you heard Marlene Dietrich recently on the CBS Playhouse, in "Manpower," that she started for the broadcasting studio in fear and trembling. Back in August, 1942, she appeared on that same program—and fans practically mobbed her when she got out of a cab in front of the impressive building. This time she wore old clothes—and the doorman didn't want to let her in!

Here's perfect casting: Samuel Goldwyn has engaged Victor McLaglen for the role of the pirate known as "The Hook" in his technical production of "Treasure Chest." McLaglen will be a good pirate, even though he will be the nemesis of Bob Hope, and so involved in comedy. Hope's cast as a touring actor who gets involved with a boatload of pirates.

Not wanting to trade on her father's fame, she used the name of Lynn Winthrop—but the only person she fooled was herself. Her father's been signed by Warner Bros. for one of the top roles in support of Humphrey Bogart in "To Have and Have Not."

The Blue Network's glamour star, Gertrude Lawrence, is one of the proudest women in America, since the American Red Cross gave her her first stripe for 1,000 hours of service. Everybody who knows how much time and good hard work she gives to aiding the war effort feels that she ought to be the most decorated gal in America; she's never too busy or too tired to do whatever she can.

"One Man's Family" got its start on the air as a sustaining program on NBC way back in April, 1932. Carlton E. Morse had been writing and producing radio programs like "Chinatown Squad" and "Twisted Tales," but felt that the story of life as it is to the average American would appeal to the public. First thing anybody knew, the public made it a weekly listening habit—and it still is.

Nancy Kelly would like to spend winters on Broadway, on the stage, and summers in Hollywood, in pictures—if she manages it, let's hope she'll get better picture assignments than she's had recently. At 17 she was sensational in "Susan and God," on the stage, and the movies grabbed her. To an unprejudiced onlooker it seems that she's capable of far better work than she's done so far.

Human Parts on Hand

For use in mending injured human bodies, physicians of tomorrow may carry a stock of "replaceable parts" on hand, including bones, tendons, and nerves of varying sizes. Dr. Paul Weiss, of the University of Chicago, developed an animal nerve "bank" and has, by a special technique, successfully grafted "cold storage" nerves into rats, cats, and monkeys.

Nerves are prepared for storage in much the same way as blood is prepared for blood "banks"—by freezing and drying in a vacuum. Parts for human nerve banks would be taken from cadavers or from arms and legs which are amputated.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

Entered in the Postoffice at Clanton, Alabama, as second-class matter under the Act of Congress of March, 1897

MRS. MARK L. TUCKER, Owner

R. M. TUCKER, M'g'n.-Ed

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

The Fourth War Loan

How to get the people of Chilton County to buy bonds, to buy bonds in sufficient quantity to meet the Fourth War Loan Drive, to make the Chilton County Quota. This is the burning question with the members of the various committees who are working in order to make this drive a success. These workers are all volunteers, they neither ask nor expect pay, they are not entitled to pay. The work they are doing is their patriotic duty and they accept it as such. Whatever effort any of us might make in order to win this war is small indeed compared to the sacrifice being made by our brave boys in the service.

I sometimes think that the proper approach to our people is to get them to want to buy bonds. If we could but realize the importance of buying these bonds the quota would be over subscribed and that very quickly. I would not dwell on the safety of these bonds. I think it would be an insult to the citizenship of Chilton County to try to convince them that these bonds are safe, in fact, I am of the opinion that every man, woman, and child recognizes the fact that these bonds are the safest investment in the world. There are other reasons vastly more important than the safety factor. We have recently read in the papers and heard over the radios of the savage treatment the Japs have dealt to war prisoners. We have read how they have beheaded Americans, how they have chained men and women to a post and have then bayoneted them to death, how they have starved them, withheld medical care for the wounded and many, many savage treatments too gruesome to mention. Why have not the Japs cut off the heads of Chilton County citizens, mine and yours? Why have they not ravaged our wives, sisters and daughters? Why have they not burned the homes of Chilton County citizens, stolen our property and made slaves of our people. Why, the answer is because they have not been able to get here. Why have they not gotten here? Only because of the fact that our boys, yours and mine, thousands of them are blocking the road. They are saying to the miserable yellow barbarians, "You Shall Not Pass."

Our boys are blocking their road with American blood. Our boys, in the Marines, the Army, the Navy and in the Air are giving their all to block the way, to hold the savage away from you and from me.

Well, now it is a certain fact that our boys can't fight Japs with broom sticks and sling shots. It takes bullets, guns, air planes, tanks, ships and hundred of other articles of equipment. Where do they get this equipment? The United States government furnishes these things. Where does the government get them? They buy them from the manufacturer. Where does the government get the money? They get it from the people, from you and me, Tom, Dick and Harry. The government says to us, "Lend me the money and I will buy the necessary equipment to furnish our fighting men in order that they might beat this savage bunch of barbarians to the ground and keep the yellow devil away from our shores." No one on the top side of this earth can doubt the fighting men, they are holding the line, they are beating the enemy back. If this war is lost, and it can be, it will be lost on the home front. It will be lost because we the people continue to have the "let the other fellow do it," attitude.

Now our government wants us to lend them $465,000,000. This amount is small compared to the total. This amount won't feed Chilton County men in service and pay them for a very long time. This amount only helps to carry the load. Now the question is with us "What are we going to do about it?" Chilton County has oversubscribed quota number 1, 2, and 3. What will we do with number 4? Let's just imagine that it is a few years from now, let's picture the war as being over, the boys coming home. Will we be able to look them in the eye and say we met every quota or will we have to stumble for words to try to explain why we did not meet Quota No. 4. Will any words be satisfactory explanation?

Now there is a great deal to do in a Bond Drive. The job could be very easy, however, there are many people who will not buy a bond unless there is a lot of fan fare, noise, etc. etc. This drive should be very simple. If you have the money, lend it to your government. Do not wait for someone to call on you. Do not wonder how many bonds the other fellow is buying. Be sure that you do your part, buy your bonds, use your influence to get the other fellow to buy, talk bonds, buy bonds, sell bonds. Our natural reaction, when we read of the treatment the Japs are dealing out, is "can't we do something." Yes we can do something, we can buy these bonds and this is the most important thing we can do.

Citizens of Chilton County let's get after this quota now, we could meet it within one week from this date if everyone did his best.

What's Doing At Isabella High

Isabella cage fairs witnessed another good game at the school gym last Friday, when I. H. S. inched by the Verbenas cagers 18 to 17. Verbenas retained the lead until the last quarter, when the Mustangs, in their recently traditional fashion, began to "come through." We won all right, but these one-point wins are beginning to get us rather on edge.

In our games Tuesday night of last week Marbury defeated the first team 30 to 21 and handed the B team a pasting to the tune of 29 to 11. Our teams will have an opportunity to make a come back Friday afternoon, when we play the same opponents in a return game at Isabella.

The Isabella FFA chapter eliminations in the public speaking contest were held in chapel last Friday. Competing in the contest were C. F. Gandy, whose subject was Soil Conservation, Seth Gilliland, who spoke on the subject, Forestry, and Jesse Culp, whose topic was, Food For Freedom. All of the contestants did well on their orations. After the speeches had been given, the judges—Mrs. Heida, Miss Baker, and Mr. Williams

THORSBY INSTITUTE NEWS

The First Semester Music Recital by Mrs. H. S. Peterson's pupils was on Friday night, January 28, in the auditorium of Thorsby Institute. The Girls' Glee Club and Boys' Chorus sang and there was also a violin solo and an accordion solo. Aside from the piano and voice solos there were duet piano numbers. It was not possible to make up for this. This will not interfere with the regular holiday scheduled March 20th.

Thorsby Institute will open its second semester February 8 (Tuesday) at 9 a. m. instead of February 7. There will be school on a Saturday to make up for this. This will not interfere with the regular holiday scheduled March 20th.

Semester examinations will be on January 27th, and 28th.

The annual party of the Helen Keller Literary Society will be on Saturday night, February 12, from 7:30 to 9:30 at the Dining Hall. It is for the members of the society and the faculty. Alumni who wish to pay ten cents toward the refreshments are invited. However the refreshment committee would need to know a couple of days before the party. The chairman is Willodean Minor.

The annual Declaratory Contest will be on Friday night, February 18, 7:30. Everyone is invited. There will be no admission charged. Rev and Mrs. E. L. Benson of Elgin, Illinois, have given the school for several years ten dollars to be used as prizes.

CHURCH NEWS

Services will be as usual next Sunday. Sunday School will be at 9:45 a. m. and Church services at 11:00. Probably Rev David Shepard of Roan-

—decided that Jesse was the winner of first place. He will represent the chapter in the district contest, which will be held at a future date. It should be emphasized, however, that none of the contestants in such a contest are losers, for they do not lose the benefits that they themselves derived from writing and delivering their oration.

This 'n that—The seniors are all engrossed in a study of spelling—Odus Ousley seems to have the proper tactics in dealing with the fairer sex, eh Mary Ann?—School buses just won't run with the gas cut off, as certain ones could testify—Mr. Turner should establish a private detective agency. The Advantage Of A Whole Milk Market In Chilton County

By EDNA OUSLEY
2ND PLACE WINNER IN MAPLEVILLE HIGH SCHOOL GROUP

A whole milk market would be an advantage to the community, or to Chilton County in several ways.

First, it would cause farmers to have better soil by planning cover crops and using barnyard manure in raising green food for the cows. They would want better pastures too.

It would encourage farmers to have a better stock of cows. To have a better stock of cows would mean careful selection. A better stock would produce more milk per cow and increase the butterfat content.

In order to have a better grade of milk, there would have to be close examination of the cows. This would make farmers feel sure of healthy cows, and they would, also, say they were helping to promote the health of the public by producing better milk.

A whole milk market would keep people from wasting milk, which, I think, is of great importance. If a person knows he can get money out of anything, it is human nature for him to get it. So, in order to get more money, there is going to be careful use of milk at home.

The milk would furnish a new source of income, which would mean better living conditions at home. The people would have a steady income to buy better things for themselves and better things for the home. They could have better food too.

It would bring about a new occupation for farmers as well as for boys and girls.

Since gas is rationed, it is good that farmers don't have to use their own gas and time to carry the milk, but instead the milk is picked up by trucks.

The milk being sold here and the money collected here will give Chilton County the name of being more self sufficient.

LETTER FROM MARVIN ELLISON

Dear Ben and Family:
A few lines to let you know I'm still kicking. How is everybody and the dear old "News"? I get the paper about every three or four weeks and is always three or four weeks old, but it is good to read all about home.
I'm allowed to say that I'm somewhere in Italy. So you see I'm doing better every day; North Africa was terrible, Sicily was a trifle better and Italy is better still. Who knows what the future holds? Home—I hope.
Have you heard from, or seen, our old friend, Clark Headley, lately? It's been quite a while since I've heard from him.
We're still hoping for "Christmas at home in '44". Maybe it won't be so much longer until this is all cleared up—it looks good so far.
Hold 'em down, Ben, I'll be seeing you before long.
As ever,
MARVIN.

LETTER FROM ENGLAND

January 3rd, 1944.

The Chilton County News, Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

Just a few years ago the thoughts of the young man of today were toys, eats, drinks and a good time, but as the years passed swiftly by, his thoughts and dreams changed. When he was drafted into the United States Army the GI in the ETO separated from the things he loves. He dreams mostly about the things he left behind, but life in the future is also in his thoughts.

Home, he says, is a small cramped apartment where he takes off his shoes and sits in a soft chair in the living room and smokes his pipe and listens to the radio; home is a big sprawling farm house in Alabama (Stanton) where he looks out of the window and sees the rich black dirt and hears the healthy noises of fat pigs and chickens, and smells the freshness of growing vegetation; home is Mom, apple pie and his girl.
Some soldiers are not thinking of marriage because "Somebody else has taken my place." They realize that if she didn't love me enough to wait for me, then she wasn't worth waiting for in the first place.

There are others who want to finish school, or those who have never been east or west of Podunk now want to keep traveling all over the Globe before settling down.

Most of us are thinking of settling down quickly and we are worried about our jobs after the war. We were farmers, clerks, mechanics, factory workers yesterday, and we know our boss has somebody else on our jobs. After the fine speeches and handshakings are over maybe the boss won't be so keen about trading workers.

All of the boys in khaki are expecting their Government to help ease their transition into civilian life. They are talking about this money which Congress is debating giving to them when they need it. Many of them will. The soldier should get help because tomorrow the taxes will be the heaviest ever known.

Soldiers talk and think a lot about food. I'd give a hundred shillings right now for a big piece of cake and a glass of cold milk is the way I put it. Their thoughts return to mother's white tablecloth, covered with delicious food.

All these things are deep and warm around his heart, and it does him good to think. Our thoughts are centered around—"When the Lights Go On Again" and "Peace, The Gift of God's Love."

May our thoughts and dreams come true during 1944.

Sincerely,

CPL. JULIUS A. SAMPLE,
Sup. Sqd. 45th ADG, APO No. 638, in care Postmaster, New York, N. Y.

FROM CAMP COOKE, CALIF.

Hello, Mr. Tucker:

I get the Chilton County News every week and enjoy it very much. It is nice to read the home town news, especially when I am out on problem.

California is okeh, but for me it is Alabama. Tell all my friends to write to me—Pfc James H. Hosey, Co-B, 50th A.I. Bn., APO 256, Camp Cooke, Calif.

ABOARDSHIP

Dear Mr. Tucker:

I have just finished reading my Chilton County News and by the letter you have published of the boys in the service, I can see that most of them are well and think enough of their letter or rather paper to write you a letter. I know I have been receiving your paper for a long time now. I have truly enjoyed every bit of it. I wish your forgiveness for not writing you. I have only received five since the week I landed on foreign soil. That week I had a lot of paper, but since then my mail just hasn't caught up with me.

I have been out of the States a little over three months now and with my letter I'll say my papers have helped me a lot. I guess the most good my papers do me though are the letters from all the boys I have known so long and are now in the service. I would like to tell my homefolks and friends that they don't know just how much their letters and the papers from one's own county can do for us boys; without them I'm afraid it would be hard to go.

I would also like to congratulate Sis Higgins on being the girl from Clanton that someone would name a plane after. I'm sure the officer will be proud of his ship named after a girl as nice as Sis. I'm sure she will do a lot in helping bring down the Japs.

Mr. Tucker, please give my address to all of my friends so they may drop me a letter or card—anything would be appreciated out here—Herbert M. Newell, USS Agnor, R. Div., Fleet Post Office, Navy 60, San Francisco, Calif.

Fifth Army Patrols Move Into Cassino As Nazis Begin Withdrawal Movement; Russian Troops Press Drive to Baltic; Winter Drouth Broken in Midwest Area

FREED Leningrad—Map shows direction of Russian drives to relieve long-besieged city of Leningrad. (See: Russia.)

ITALY:

Nazis Trapped

Taking one daring jump up the long Italian peninsula, Allied troops under command of Mediterranean Chief Sir Henry Maitland Wilson landed far to the rear of 100,000 Nazi troops fighting off steady U. S. and British advances in the mountainous Cassino area.

Swarming ashore along 30 miles of sandy beach a short distance below Rome, the Allies seemingly caught the Germans off balance, with no opposition encountered.

As supplies were being rushed to the invading army, the Nazis launched a series of fierce counterattacks near Cassino to cover their withdrawal from the town shortly after.

Marshal Albert Kesselring found himself in a pretty pickle, with a big Allied army at his rear threatening the two supply roads leading down to Cassino. The Allies first began to encounter resistance at their invasion point when they poked 12 miles inland, with one of the two supply roads already under their fire.

LEND-LEASE:

Food Shipments

Ten and one-half billion pounds of food and farm products were sent abroad on lend-lease during the first 11 months of 1943, with November shipments alone aggregating 1,000,000,000 pounds, of which Great Britain got 60 per cent and Russia 38 per cent.

During the 11-month period, lend-lease took 15 out of every 100 pounds of pork produced in the U. S.; 11 1/2 pounds out of every 100 pounds of lamb and mutton; 1 out of every 100 pounds of beef and veal; 4 out of every 100 quarts of milk; 13 out of every 100 pounds of cheese, and 3 1/2 out of every 100 pounds of butter.

Of the 10,500,000 pounds sent abroad during the 11-month period, sugar alone accounted for more than 3,000,000,000 pounds.

RUSSIA:

Press Baltic Drive

Nazi troops fell back to the south of Leningrad as the Russians pressed their big offensive aimed at driving through to the Baltic sea.

As the Reds moved forward behind the tremendous weight of tanks and artillery, they cut off all of the east-west railroads over which the Nazis could remove troops from their front lines. In addition, they fought to clear the Germans from the Leningrad-Moscow railroad linking Russia's two great industrial cities.

Fighting to stave off capture of the Warsaw-Odessa railroad supplying their Ukrainian troops, the Germans launched counterattacks on the southern front, slowly pressing back the Reds about 80 miles from the Rumanian border. After stabbing deep into prewar Poland on either side of the vast wastes of the Pripiet marshes, the Russian drive tapered off in the face of strong resistance.

JET PLANE: The new "jet plane" is easier to operate than a primary trainer, according to a veteran test pilot who has made many flights in experimental models of the Pripet machine, the chief advantages of the jet propulsion engine are the great power compared to size and weight and its adaptability to a wide range of fuels, including alcohol and cheaper petroleum products.

BLAST: Explosion of a steam turbine in a huge steel plant in South Chicago, Ind., killed five men and injured 11 others. The huge machine, which would generate 8,000 kilowatts, was being tested before being put into service. A section of wall was blown out, fragments of steel flew around like shrapnel and the roar was heard over a wide area.

RECONVERSION:

WPB Plan

Tackling the knotty problem of reconversion of industry from war to peace, the War Production board has formulated a plan under which no one would get a competitive advantage in the resumption of civilian output.

The plan is simple enough, calling for quotas of civilian goods based on a percentage of certain prewar production to be assigned to manufacturers, with such manufacturers as are still engaged heavily in war work turning over their quotas to others who would make the product for them under their trade name.

The plan already has been put into operation in the authorized manufacture of two million detainers, with makers entitled to produce 43 per cent of their 1940 output and to transfer their quotas to others.

GAS RATIONS:

More for Emergencies

Local rationing boards have been given authority to issue extra gasoline coupons to motorists in cases where inability to operate their cars might cause hardship.

Previously, boards could issue extra rations only for use in occupational pursuits, or in certain specific cases for which additional allotments were permissible. Because the Washington OPA office could not draw up a list of emergency cases covering all possibilities, it decided to leave their determination to local boards.

Despite the liberalization of the new regulation, local boards will not be able to issue additional gas rations freely, since their extra supplies will be limited.

HOPKINS' LETTER:

Branded Forgery

The mysterious Harry Hopkins letter purporting to show the close relations existing between the present administration and Wendell Willkie was no mystery at all but a forgery to a grand jury sitting in Washington, D. C., which indicted Interior Secretary Harold Ickes' once-confidential assistant, George N. Briggs, for forging a letter for the purpose of obtaining money or other things of value.

According to the grand jury, the letter never existed at all, and when Briggs said he could obtain it from Oliver Wendell Willkie, he was in violation of money for train fare, he was making a false representation.

The letter was first published by C. Nelson Sparks in his book, "One Man's Story of the Roosevelt Campaign," and was promptly denied by Hopkins, who called in the FBI to investigate.

To the Rescue!

At least 30 million of the 50 million harassed Americans who have all but scratched their heads off making out their final 1943 income tax returns will be heartened to hear that Representative Frank Carlson (Iowa) has introduced a bill in the house under which pay-as-you-go deductions through the year would settle their whole tax liability with Uncle Sam.

For the remaining 20 million who would still have to file a return to make a final settlement, Representative Carlson proposes only one set of rates and exemptions. Further, he suggested use of the 1040A, or simplified form, for everybody with incomes up to $5,000 instead of $9,000 as at present. Representative Carlson also would extend the time for filing a final estimation of the individual's income and tax to January 15 following the taxable year.

PACIFIC FRONT:

Air Power

U. S. troops dug in on the Gilbert islands in mid-Pacific turned battle-eyes northward to the Marshalls as American bombers continued their heavy aerial strikes against these Jap strongholds astride the supply lines to the Philippines.

Farther to the southwest, other U. S. aviators took to the sky to blast the big Jap bases of Wewak on New Guinea and Rabaul on New Britain, where enemy troops are resisting Allied forces.

With memory of strongly dug Jap shore installations at Tarawa still fresh in mind, the U. S. air force suffered no let-up in blasting the Marshalls, where the enemy apparently also is firmly entrenched in concrete and steel fortifications. Both airfields and shipping were pounded at Wewak and Rabaul, jumping-off places for Jap planes and supply lines, and feeder points for Jap forces resisting in the mountainous jungle country.

SUGAR BEETS

Growers of sugar beets will get the benefit of a subsidy of at least $1.50 a ton from the Commodity Credit corporation if a bill sponsored by Senator Murdoch of Utah is passed. The act would exempt sugar beets from the provisions of the Steagall bill, which denies the CCC the right to make subsidy payments. The senate has delayed action on the Steagall bill, thereby continuing the life of the CCC until February 17 by a resolution.

'A Season of Surprises'—And Still More to Come

Government Control of Railroads and National Service Act Complete Surprise in Many Quarters.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

This is the season of surprises—I don't mention it at this moment the big one which will cause your eyebrows to go up at an early date (if they haven't already).

I'll mention two others—the labor front—since they represent two of the most problems with which congress still has to deal and which are particularly full of dynamite because of the coming elections. And elections are bound to color and change the face of every public act from now until the end of November.

We are used to it now because it happened some time ago, and the effects were not visible to the naked eye—but one big surprise that shocked officials as the year ended was the sudden announcement on a balmy Monday evening in December which ordered the army to take over the railroads.

All over Washington the day before, "one day too, as a matter of fact, you could have collected the odds against such a thing happening. Not that people were betting on that subject itself; what they were betting on, those who were betting, was that it would not happen in the know, was that there would be no railroad strike.

The second big surprise is still having its sharp repercussions although it happened not so much more recently than the first event to which it was closely linked.

National Service Act

The first, I discussed in a recent column in connection with the seizure of the railroads. Then the second, the President's demand for a national service act as a part of his legislative program outlined in that annual message, came tumbling in. And we haven't gotten over either yet.

One astute and neutral observer of affairs in Washington—an old-timer, who sees parties come and go without loss of sleep over his job, said something to me after the roads had been seized that I have had occasion to ponder upon often since.

"One of the men of who would be ready to give odds that there would be no strike and he knows all of the people who participated in the conferences, employers, union heads, officials by their first names—except the President, of course, whom nobody but his mother as far as I know, perhaps his wife when she is here, first names. One just doesn't first-name President."

Anyhow, this friend of mine, agast at the suddenness of the seizure of the roads, remarked:

"Do you realize this? Overnight, instead of being the object of all attacks for having led the President suddenly in the position now of defending the people against labor?"

That was the quick reaction of a technical man to whom politics is only an interesting sideline.

When the President's message was dropped out by the reading clerk in congress and the President came to point first in his five-point legislative program, there was a sharp intake of breaths. You recall the first reaction. Hardly anything but a frigid reception for the suggestion for what was immediately called "the labor draft."

Cynical Reactions

Then came the cynical observation of the anti-administration political pundit who sounded a little like the comment of my first-quoted observer except that it was flavored more heavily with party tabasco.

"Pure politics," they sneered. "He had no labor program. He knew it. So now he tosses the hottest controversial question on the boards—labor draft—into congress. He probably hopes we won't pass it. If we don't, he'll say: 'See, I give them a labor program and they turn me down!'"

Well, there are the two surprises which are scheduled to breed others in their trail, and you and everybody else will interpret them in terms of your or their prejudices, sharpened to a knife-edge of devotion or hatred in this year of the ballot.

What is really behind these two sharp and unexpected moves? It is pretty hard to be really objective. Anyone who has watched political campaigns in the making, has a hard time not to attribute a partisan motive to any act or word spoken in Washington in an election year.

As far as taking the railroads over goes, that might have been prompted by a real and honest fear that transportation would have been interfered with at a moment when it was as vital to the war effort as a division of fighting men. What possible excuse could there be for letting such a thing happen?

Again, whether or not there was to be a strike, there was a strike threat. At the same moment, there was a strike threat in another vital industry—steel. That was called off by putting pressure on Phillip Murray, head of the C. I. O. But could that pressure have been applied unless Mr. Murray could have been told, "Remember, the chances of acceptance of your demands by the steel men will be a lot better if they are afraid the government will take their industry over too. The railroads are a warning."

And then, if you want to take one highly unofficial explanation from a nobody as far as officialdom goes, but from a man who has fought in his own little sphere for things he believes in, I'll throw it in for good measure.

The comment was applied to the President's call for a national service act, not the seizure of the roads, but it applies to both. This observer observes:

"Politics? No. The guy just wants to win the war."

And come to think of it, that might have had something to do with it too.

Notes From a Broadcaster's Diary

The following two viewpoints received recently are interesting. Here is the first:

"Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude except as punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted shall exist within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction."—from the Constitution of the United States.

The President swore to uphold the Constitution—the national service act or the labor draft is involuntary servitude or human slavery. That's what he called it in Berlin and Tokyo and he wants it here. What are we fighting for?

And now for the second viewpoint! General Eisenhower said we can win the war in 1944 but everyone must do his part.

Something must be wrong somewhere for him to say that. He knows it is not the armed forces. So it must be on the home front. For the armed forces operate on a functional alignment—from commanding officer down, orders are given and obeyed. Servicemen cannot bargain with their commanders as to wages, hours, fighting conditions or make contracts on a cost-plus basis. Their objective is to win battles.

But on the home front, the objective is to make money (see Truman Report). Ships, planes, tanks and guns are secondary.

We can have a functional operation at home by installing total conscription of men, machines, material and money.

These boys were conscripted to die. Then why not conscript the ones at home? If it's good enough for the armed forces, it's good enough for the rest of us.

Who can say he is entitled to more?

Jottings

From May through September, 1943, various government agencies placed 2,706,000 volunteer farm laborers to help harvest the nation's crops.

During 1943 Massachusetts home-makers canned fruits and vegetables which were worth an estimated 900,000,000 ration points.

MY FRIEND
FLICKA

by MARY OHARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old McLaughlin has an opportunity to enjoy some yearling on his family's Wyoming ranch, picks the filly of a "tooc" mare.
His father, a retired army officer, is disappointed by her choice and by his failure at court. When Flicka, the filly, is badly hurt trying to jump the corral fence, Ken takes the opportunity to make friends with the wild little colt.
Although he is now convinced that Flicka is not "tooc" like her mother, Captain McLaughlin does not think she will get well. But Ken, who always wanted a colt of his own, is still hopeful. He believes he can tame Flicka, who is to him something new and beautiful.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XVII

At dinner, Ken ate nothing. Howard said, "Ken isn't eating his dinner—doesn't he have to eat, Mother?"

But Nell answered, "Leave him alone."

Ken had understood what his father meant when he said, "I won't have a thing like that on my place."
To allow a colt to die, lingering death was something his father would not do. Flicka was to be shot.

He didn't hear his father give the order to Gus. "Pick a time when Ken isn't around, Gus, and take the Winchester and put the filly out of her misery."

"Ja, Boss—"

Ken watched the gun rack in the dining room. All the guns were standing in it. No guns were allowed in the bank house. Going through the dining room to the kitchen three times a day for meals, Ken's eyes scanned the weapons to make sure they were all there. That night they were not all there. The Winchester was missing.

When Ken saw that, he stopped walking. He felt dizzy. He kept staring at the gun rack, telling himself that it surely was there—the counting again—he couldn't see clearly.

Then he felt an arm across his shoulders and heard his father's voice. "I know, son. Some things are awful hard to take. We just have to take 'em. I have to, too."

Ken got hold of his father's hand and held on. It helped steady him.
Finally he looked up. Rob looked down and smiled at him and gave him a little shake and squeeze. Ken nuzzled a smile, too.

"All right now?"

"All right, Dad."

They walked in to supper together.
Ken even ate a little. But Nell looked thoughtfully at the ash en-colder of his face; and at the little pulse she was beating in the side of his neck.

After supper Ken carried Flicka her oats, but he had to coax her and she would hardly touch them.
She stood with her head hanging, but when he stroked it and talked to her, she pressed her face into his chest and was content.

He could feel the burning heat of her body. It didn't seem possible that anything so thin could be so alive.

Presently Ken saw Gus come into the pasture carrying the Winchester.
When he saw Ken, he changed his direction and sauntered along as if he was out to shoot cottontails.

Ken ran to his father. "When are you going to do it, Gus?"

"You was goin' down soon now, but they got dark—"

"Gus, don't do it tonight. Wait till morning. Just one more night, Gus."

"Well, in de morning den, but it got to be done, Ken. Yer fadder gives de order."

"I know. I won't say anything more."

Gus went back to the bank house and Ken returned to Flicka.

At nine o'clock Howard was sent by Nell to call Ken. He stood at the corral gate, shouting.

Flicka was still standing in her nursery when the full moon rose at ten. It was the Hunter's Moon, as yellow as the Harvest Moon.

Flicka's wounds did not pain her, but the suction of the down-whirling spiral was an agony felt through every part of her. Now and then her young body found strength to fight against it; she struggled; she lifted her head.

She was thirsty. The smell of the fresh running water drew her.
She waded into the stream and drank; got full, lifted her head, turned and ran to the house. The cool water rippled against her legs.

There was no sound from the house, no sound running upon the path, and suddenly the last of her life strength was gone. Lunging forward, she fell half on her back, half in the water, and lay there, struggling convulsively.

At last she was still.

Some minutes later, from ten miles away, a towering blacktimbered shoulder of the Polar Mon-tains, there stole out the most desolate cry in the world—the howl of the gray timber wolf. It rode on the upper air without a tremor, high and cold, and it was a death cry.

Through long minutes the note sustained, mournful and remote—through long moments it died, with a falling cadence of profound listlessness; and even before it ceased, it was the essence of the quiet of the night.

Ken had seen the Hunter's
Moon rise over the eastern horizon before he went upstairs, and lying in bed, wide awake, and shaken by a steady, faint quivering, could see it reflected in the opened casement window of his room.

He hadn't completely undressed, but he had the sheet drawn up to his chin, in case his mother or father came in to look at him. He heard them talking together in their room as they undressed. How long they took. It seemed to him hours before the whole house was quiet—as quiet as the night was outside.

He waited still another hour, till everyone was so deep asleep there would be no chance of their hearing. Then he stole out of bed and put on the rest of his clothes.

He carried his shoes in his hands and crept down the hall, past the door of his parents' room, taking a half minute for a step.

On the far end of the terrace, he sat down and put on his shoes, his heart pounding and the blood almost suffocating him.

He kept whispering, "I'm coming,
Flicka—I'm coming—"

His feet patterned down the path.
He ran as fast as he could.

It was so dark under the cottonwood trees, he had to stand a moment, getting used to the darkness, before he could be sure that Flicka was not there. There stood her feet box—but the filly was gone.

Unreasoning terror swept over him. Something had spirited her

The alarm clock broke the early morning silence of the bank house and jangled for sixty seconds.

Before it stopped Tim and Gus were sitting, naked, on the edge of their bunks, yawning and rubbing their heads.

Gus reached for his clothes and began to draw them on, remembering as he did so that something unpleasant was ahead of him. It was a moment or two before it came to him—the shooting of Flicka.

Then he remembered he dropped both ends on his knees and sat in silence. Nothing for it, it must be done. The filly might have been left to die of her own accord, but that was contrary to custom on the Goose Bar Ranch.

Gus finished dressing, made the fire and laid the table for breakfast, thinking that when he had everything ready except frying the eggs and bacon and making the coffee, he'd go down to the calf pasture with the Winchester. It wouldn't take a minute. He had the gun with him there in the bank house.
It stood in the corner, still loaded.
He'd be back before Tim had finished milking the cows and have plenty of time to make breakfast.

Gus walked down to the ranch house, took the gun against the house outside, and went into the kitchen to make up the fire.

Gus' shaking down of the ashes every morning was the rising bell for the family. When the kindling box was lit, the flames were licking up around the blocks of coal.
Gus closed the back draft and went out. He took the gun and walked slowly across the Green, to the gate of the Calf Pasture.

A few minutes' walk brought him to Flicka's Nursery and showed him that Flicka was not there. He walked down stream and soon found Ken sitting in the water, Flicka's head in his arms.

One look at the boy's face was enough.

Gus crossed the creek, laid down his gun, and seizing the filly by the head, dragged her out onto the grass bank, carrying Ken. He began into the world by the head, never, safely, by any other part.

Ken could not move. Gus lifted him in his arms and again crossed the creek. Ken's head dropped back over the Swede's shoulder, turning to the filly for one last look.

"Good-by, Flicka." It was only a whisper.

Rob was standing at his window fastening his belt, when he saw the feyen passing, carrying Ken. He thought, "Flicka died—I didn't hear the Winchester—Ken's found her head—fainted—"

He ran downstairs and out, took the boy from Gus' arms, and then noted the unbelievably shrunken, drawn features, and the violent chills. This was more than a faint.
Gus told him how he had found
Ken, and Rob carried him in and up to bed.

Ken and Nell put Ken to bed between hot blankets and tried to get some brandy between his lips.

Gus returned to the Pasture to get the gun. Flicka was lying as he had left her, but at his approach she lifted her head. The man knelt down on the grass but she did not look at him. She looked into his head, her neck, looked into his eyes. "Well—well—Flicka, liddle gurl—" He was astonished to feel that her body seemed to have lost control, she was dead and gone.

He looked at the two wounds. The cuts were clean and all the hard swelling had gone; and he could see by her face that she was brighter, as one can see by the expression in a child's face, even though it is still pinched and wan, that life is coming back.

JESUS FEEDS THE MULTITUDES

LESSON TEXT—Mark 6:33-44: 8:1-9
GOLDEN TEXT—I am the bread of life:
he that cometh to me shall never hunger;
and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.—John 6:35.

Hungry! That word describes the crying need of the greater part of the world's population. Men who have vaunted themselves because of their ability and ingenuity have brought the nations of the earth into such awful confusion that even God's abundant provision cannot reach the needy ones.

God is concerned about man's physical need just as truly as He is about spiritual needs. This story brings Christianity into action on a level that all will appreciate—the need of food for the body. It works there as it does everywhere.

The supply of food and need of man is God. "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Phil. 4:19).
Countless Christians have found it to be true that we may trust God—completely—for everything.

The stories of the feeding of the two groups of people show the wrong and the right attitude toward man's need. In two approaches to the problem the disciples were wrong.
Then Christ showed them the right way.

I. They Can Take Care of Their Own Need (6:35, 36).

"Send them away"—that was the plea of the disciples when the multitude of those who had followed Him became hungry. The people were there because they were interested in Christ. They had come in a hurry
(v. 33) and had not brought food.
The problem was on the disciples' hands, and they sought the easiest way out. Let them shift for themselves—"Send them away."

The church has followed their example in dealing with the social problems of the people down through the years. The result is that being denied fellowship, comfort, and help by a church which was too busy building up a vast organization or a beautiful order of worship, the common people have responded to the realm of political leaders who have provided a substitute for what the church should have given them.

When Jesus put upon them the direct responsibility to feed the people, the disciples changed their "slogan"
and said:

II. We Should Like to Help, but
We Cannot (6:37).

Reckoning hastily on what a small boy had brought for his lunch (trust an alert boy to be ready!), the disciples soon demonstrated that it was impossible to feed this great throng. (See similar reasoning in Mark 8:4).

Logic is such a devastating thing when it operates apart from faith in God. They were absolutely right in their reasoning and in their calculations, but they had forgotten the one factor in the realm of political leaders who have provided a substitute for what the church should have given them.

As we face the need of the world now and after the war, we wonder how the peoples of other lands can be fed without depriving our own land of what it needs. It is a great problem, and we ought to pray for those who must work with it.

But let us not forget that all that we have comes from God, and that He is able to do "exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think" (Eph. 3:20). The Christ who multiplied the loaves and fishes is our Living Lord today, and ready and able to do it again.

III. Jesus Said, "I Have Compassion on the Multitude" (6:38-44; 8:1-9).

He started right. Instead of shutting His heart against the tender desires to help, He let His love for the people control. Then instead of magnifying the difficulties, He multiplied the provisions. And lo, there was enough for all, and to spare.

He commanded . . . and they did all that He said (vv. 39, 42). When God speaks, all the limitations of the finite disappear, and the needs of men are fully met—with "twelve baskets full of fragments" left over!

Note the orderly manner in which our Lord met the situation. Five thousand men, with women and children to swell the throng, were seated on the grass. Jesus took the loaves and fishes and blessed them.
You who forget to return thanks at the table, notice that quiet and melancholy act. Then He broke the loaves and divided the fishes. No doubt they were multiplied as the disciples passed them out to the people.

God is able to do that very thing even in our day. Perhaps not in just the same manner, but surely those who serve Him have marveled as they have seen that "little is made much" (v. 9). Let those who labor in difficult places with limited resources take heart—and trust God.

Note the care with which the fragments were collected for future use.
It took this way to teach America how shamefully wasteful it has been.

Chilton County Abstract Co.

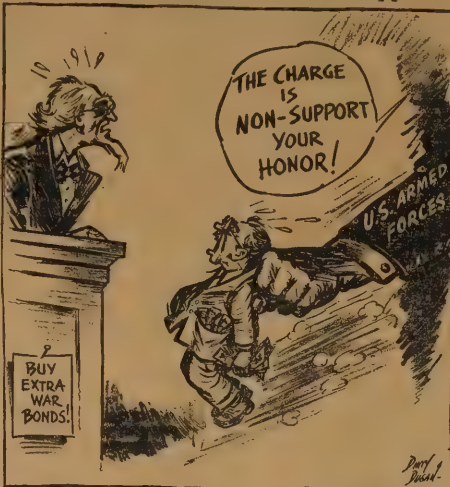

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an Abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

INSURE THEIR WAY OF LIFE !

THIS IS OUR MISSION—THEY ARE OUR CAUSE—The final week of the Fourth War Loan is "Schools At War Week." It is a week which will see the school children of America go out to buy and sell thousands upon thousands of dollars in United States War Bonds. The nation asks their mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers and the folks next door to give them every encouragement. Not just because they are the kids in the block but because this horrible Second Great World War is being fought to insure their future and see that the blight of death that has ravaged the young of Europe does not fall on them. This is our mission... they are our cause.

Last Week Of War Drive Dedicated To Youngsters

Schools At War Is Slogan As State Pushes To Get Over The Top

This is the last week of the Fourth War Loan Drive in Alabama. Many youngsters still have failed to sell their share of victory.

During this fourth week of the state's great all-out effort to "Plant is Colors On Every Fighting Front" by buying $93,000,000 in war bonds, the school children of the state will make a special effort to put the state over the top.

This fourth week will be "Schools At War Week." The first week of the drive was dedicated to the Army. The second week was dedicated to the Navy. The third week was dedicated to the Marines. These are the men who are in the field fighting Alabama's fight.

Fittingly, says State War Finance Chairman Ed Leigh McMillan of Brewton, the final week should be dedicated to the children of Alabama and America.

"It is for them and their future that we fight this war. That we buy these bonds.

"All of us know of the blight of death that has ravaged the young of Europe and Asia.

Supt. W. E. Snuggs (former State Co-ordinator and at present President of the Alabama Educational Association) gave a heart to heart talk on the responsibility of the principal in the war time and post war period, saying: "The Federal Government will take care of the education and the post-war training of our returned soldiers... through the schools if we are ready to handle the situation; without them, if we are NOT ready. It is UP TO US AS SCHOOL MEN TO GET READY."

Plans were made to have two other meetings—March 7th and April 25th—at which time questions of interest will be discussed. The March 7th meeting will be largely given over to the discussion of the program of the

"We know of the starved and maimed young ones. We know of the orphaned and the homeless.

"We want our young people to have carefree tomorrows. Tomorrows that will permit them to play baseball, shoot marbles, and do all the other things so dear to the heart of the young.

"We want our free American schools to flourish. We want our churches to stand untrammelled. We want the home to guide the child, not the state.

"Let us go into this last week of the Fourth War Loan resolved to do our utmost not only to back up the attack of our Alabama boys on the fighting fronts but to make doubly sure with extra war bond purchases that our youngsters have an insured tomorrow. One that will be free of tyranny and lighted with the American Way of Life."

FORMER GOVERNOR B. M. MILLER DEAD

MOTHER, SON TO BE HELD IN SLAYING NEAR HERE

Coroner J. Mell Martin Saturday said he had sworn out a warrant for Mrs. Ella Haywood charging murder in connection with the slaying early Saturday of her husband, Henry H. Haywood, 77, at their rural residence in the Cane Creek Community, near here.

"It was a family difficulty as near as we have been able to ascertain," Coroner Martin said. "We are still investigating to get all the facts."

The coroner revealed that shortly after Haywood was slain with a shotgun at his home, his son, George, 39, was taken into custody in connection with the slaying.

A verdict of unlawful homicide was returned by Coroner Martin following his preliminary investigation. He quoted the mother as saying her husband was slain in an effort to protect the son, George, whom the father allegedly had threatened to kill.

JAMES L. DELOACH

James L. DeLoach, who has been in the armed forces since July 8, 1941, is now at home after being released from the hospital at Camp Croft, S.C. He received his basic training at Fort Benning, Ga., after which he entered the Paratroopers School in North Carolina where he received his wings on October 3, 1943. He was then assigned to active duty and on June 15th, 1943 was injured and sent to the hospital. He is stationed in Birmingham now awaiting further orders from Uncle Sam.

The association's board of managers, it was learned, will meet here today to consider the election of a successor.

Treasure Hunt For War Stamp Albums By School Children

Wednesday morning of this week the school children of Chilton County began a "Treasure Hunt" for the purpose of finding all the partially filled War Stamp Albums in the county. The children hope to get every War Stamp Album in Chilton County converted into a war bond by Saturday, February 12. If you have a stamp book get out enough money to finish filling it and ask some school child to swap your book for a bond. The child will receive recognition for making the sale and Uncle Sam will get the money to buy shells to shoot Japs. Incidentally, you will get the best investment in the world, a United States War Bond. Help the school turn in all War Stamp Books for Bonds by next Saturday!

A verdict of unlawful homicide was returned by Coroner Martin following his preliminary investigation. He quoted the mother as saying her husband was slain in an effort to protect the son, George, whom the father allegedly had threatened to kill.

This coming Saturday, February 12, is expected to be the biggest day there has been in Clanton for years, as that is the day when thirty-six paratroopers from Fort Benning, Ga., will leap from planes at high altitudes and land in Gragg Field.

Following the parachute performances, there will be auction sales of War Bonds, in which will be given to the highest buyers of Bonds, such valuable prizes as a Registered Guernsey calf, fat pigs, hams of meat, airplane rides, a due bill for laundry work, 22 cartridges, a model sailboat, the Mayflower, $500 in trade, face powder, congocong rugs, garden seed, baby chicks, gun shells, bed blankets etc.

Loud-speaker systems will be operated both in town and at the airport, and arrangements are under way whereby an outstanding speaker will be on hand to address the gatherings. There will be band music and other attractions off and on all during the day. The auction sales will be held somewhere in the business sections of the city.

At 1:00 o'clock all the stores of the city will close their doors, and the personnel will be in the selling of Bond sales, until the paratroopers arrive. After landing at Gragg Field, the paratroopers will be brought to town and will demonstrate mechanism and use of their parachutes. The auctioning of various articles by selling Bonds will begin, and probably other attractions will come off. It will be some time Saturday that the diamond ring will be awarded some young lady who is responsible for the sale of the most Bonds during the week, the complete plan having been announced by the County Department of Education.

Many will be interested to learn that the bale of cotton given away last Saturday went to Mr. Arthur D. Martin, the watch shop man.

The county is still considerably behind its quota of Bond sales and it is hoped that the top may be reached before the time of closing Tuesday, February 15th, at midnight.

It will require everyone doing his or her best for us to make the goal; but we must not fail, we cannot fail.

Miss Barbara McGowin, student at University of Alabama, spent last week-end with her parents, Mr and Mrs S. W. McGowin.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Let Hearts Be Gay on Valentine's Day!
(See Recipes Below)

Cupid's Share

Hold on to your heart! Here comes Cupid ready to do tricks to your heart on Valentine's Day! It's time for a party with cute Dan Cupid reigning on a mighty throne.

February's a short, short month but with plenty of opportunity for party-giving. You can have a Lincoln's or Washington's Birthday party, or you can be extra gay and colorful with a Valentine's party. These should be extra popular this year with the pepped-up pace of romance. If anyone in your crowd is already ready for a shower or wedding you might take the cue from Valentine's day and make Cupid's decorations your theme.

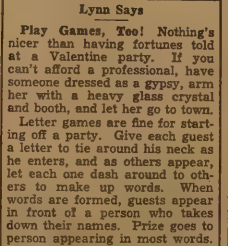

Pink-and-white or red-and-white are the gay color schemes and you can carry these out in both food and decorations. A simple but dramatic table picture is seen in the picture in today's column. Three large, red valentine boxes are set on their side in a row to form the main interest for the table. If you want to enlarge on this, get other pink-and-white or red-and-white decorations such as nosegays of roses and tie with a swirl of ribbon.

If you would rather carry this out in flowers, get a nice centerpiece of red-and-white flowers. But have a heart, somewhere along the way. If you have a valentine mold make a valentine cake or jelly mold and work out an arrow with a pastry tube or, if the cake is fed you might even put on an arrow made out of red paper.

Here is a luscious salad that takes it easy on rationed foods:

Molded Raw Cranberry Salad.
(Serves 6-8)
2 cups raw cranberries, ground
1 envelope orange gelatine
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup chopped nuts
1 cup granulated sugar

2 cups water
Pour ½ cup water in a bowl. Add gelatine to water. Add 1½ cups water and sugar and stir until dissolved. Add lemon juice. Set aside to cool. Grind raw cranberries, chop nuts and celery fine. Add these ingredients to gelatine. Place salad in

Lynn Says

Play Games, Too! Nothing's nicer than having fortunes told at a Valentine party. If you can't afford a professional, have someone dressed as a gypsy, arm her with a heavy glass crystal ball and booth, and let her go to town. Letter games are fine for starting off a party. Give each guest a letter to be around his neck as he enters, and as others appear, let each one dash around to others to make up words. When words are formed, guests appear in front of a person who takes down their names. Prize goes to person appearing in most words.

Novel Idea for a Scavenger Hunt which needn't take you outdoors. Select about 10 guests and make them find something unusual. For example, have a man with two unmatched socks, a girl with two different colored hair bows, someone who wears his watch on the left arm, a girl with two different colored earrings, etc. Everyone is provided with a list of above so he knows what to look for. As he finds the person, he writes down the name. The one finished first gets the prize.

one large or several individual molds and let jelly until firm. Serve with lettuce and greens.

These clever ham roll-ups add a colorful and festive note to your menu. They're simple to make if you just follow directions.

Ham Roll-Ups.
(Makes 4 Roll-Ups)
2 tablespoons fat
2½ tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
Pepper
1 cup milk
¼ cup grated American cheese
4 slices leftover boiled or baked ham, sliced thin
8 asparagus tips
Blend fat, flour and seasonings. Gradually add the milk. Stir until thick and smooth. Add cheese and stir until it has melted. Cut ham in thin slices 4 x 6 inches. Roll two asparagus tips in each slice. Secure with toothpick, place in a shallow pan and surround with cheese sauce. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 15 minutes. Insert sprigs of parsley at end of each ham roll. Serve at once.

Get out your heart-shaped cutter if you want to make sandwiches. For a simple children's supper party or for valentine refreshments for grown-ups, serve heart-shaped sandwiches filled with chicken salad and garnish the platter with buttered beets cut in heart shapes. Strawberry and vanilla ice cream with little sugar cookies—a tiny motto candy heart placed in the center of each cookie—is effective.

This chicken sandwich spread may be prepared the day before it is used to fit in the day's schedule:
*Chicken Sandwich Spread.
4 cups finely minced chicken
1 can pimientos, finely minced
½ cup pickle relish
¼ cup grated onion, if desired
Salt and pepper to taste
Mayonnaise to moisten
Thoroughly mix all ingredients and store in refrigerator until ready to use.

Cherries can make food decorative for any Valentine party whether they are used in cake or pie:

Champion Cherry Pie.
Crust:
1½ cups bread flour
10 tablespoons lard
1 teaspoon salt
5 to 6 tablespoons ice water
Sift flour and salt together, add lard and blend. Add ice water gradually and cool.
Filling:
2½ cups pitted sour cherries,
½ cup cherry juice
2½ tablespoons fine tapioca
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon butter
Soak tapioca, sugar and salt in cherry juice and let stand until pastry is being made. Then mix well with cherries, add butter and put in pie tin. Bake pie for 10 minutes at 450 degrees then reduce temperature to moderate or 350 degrees and bake for 20 minutes. Turn off oven and let stand at oven temperature for 20 minutes before removing from oven.

mountain-top experiences of spiritual uplift are not an end in themselves, but a preparation for service. All too often we come to the end of such times of peculiar blessing, whether in the privacy of our room or in the great conference of Christian workers, as something which should glow warmly in our hearts, making us glad in the Lord, and not as a preparation ministry to others.
Jesus and the disciples went up the place of prayer, into the place of glory, and down to the place of service. How fitting is that service which confusion exists in the life because those who have followed abandoned God's Word and squandered the energy of the flesh tally in service to humanity.

Those who know and accept truth about Christ, and who profess to believe in the power of the allotted life, have failed to serve

28 and 29 indicate that the disciples at that time had done the same by prayer.

Hot Sword Lie Detector

Modern science has nothing on African tribesmen in the use of a lie-detector.
When witnesses at a trial conducted by Embu tribesmen of Kenya Colony are at odds in their testimony, they are tested by "tasting," a hot sword. A witch doctor puts a sword in a fire and daubs the heated end with paste. A witness licks it off, the sword is reheated, more paste applied, and the "tasting" procedure followed by each witness. Each man then goes around the circle formed by the tribal council, showing his tongue. Those whose tongues are blistered the most are considered to be lying, and they lose their case.

COLOR is important in making harmonious rooms from odds and ends, and nature is the best source for color inspiration. The soft golden color of wheat, the orange-red of poppies and the blue of cornflowers were worked into the charming applique design you see here over the desk.

This needlework picture was made in a few hours with scraps of gingham and bits of embroidery thread. Stretched over a piece of cardboard to fit an unused picture frame this piece of applique work became the keynote for the interesting furniture group you see here. The top of the old desk was cut away and it was boxed in between book shelves. The padded stool was made of a box. The sketch shows how the applique colors were repeated in paint and fabric. The desk accessories also repeat these colors.

Household Hints

A sharp knife, rinsed in hot water, will do a good job of cutting cake and keeping near cake and frosting edges.

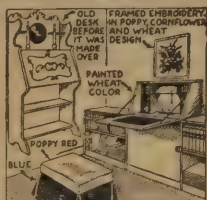

Honey should be kept in a warm place in the kitchen. If it does granulate, place the container in a pan of hot water until it liquidizes.

If a small leak makes it impossible to use the hot water bottle in the regular way, try filling it with hot salt. You'll find it holds the heat even longer than water and will last a long time.

You can add a cute note to your skirt by cutting out musical notes from odd pieces of felt and sewing them around the hem. Or one applied on your sweater will make a nice conversation piece too.

Continual opening of the oven door changes the temperature and is a common cause of baking failures.

If it is difficult to make wallpaper stick to chimney, ceilings or walls, apply a coat of aluminum paint before papering. Then the wallpaper will not crack or come loose.

NOTE—Now is the time to start a really interesting piece of work that will fit into that room that you expect to remodel next spring. A stamping pattern, color guide and directions for all the stitches in the graceful applique design shown here may be obtained for 15 cents. Address:

FOLK & THINGS

Heres one that has been going the rounds of the weekly newspapers and is well worth reading:

So you're sick of the way the country's run,
And you're sick of the way that rationing's done,
And you're sick of standing around in a line,
You're sick you say—well, that's just fine.—
So am I sick, of the sun and the heat,
And I'm sick of the feel of my aching feet,
And I'm sick of the mud and jungle flies,
And I'm sick of the stench, when the night mists rise,
And I'm sick of the siren's failing shriek,
And I'm sick of the groans of the wounded and weak,
And I'm sick of the sound of the bomber's dive,
And I'm sick of seeing the dead alive.
I'm sick of the roar and the noise and the din,
I'm sick of the taste of food from a tin,
And I'm sick of slaughter—I'm sick to my soul.
I'm sick of playing a killers role,
And I'm sick of blood and death and the smell,
And I'm even sick of myself as well,
But, I'm sicker still of a tyrant's rule,
And conquered lands where the wild beasts rool,
And I'm cured damn quick when I think of the day,
When all this hell will be out of the way,
When none of this mess will have been in vain,
And the lights of the world will blaze again,
And things will be as they were before,
And kids will laugh in the streets once more,
And the Axis' flags will be dipped and furred,
And God looks down on a peaceful world.

—M. H. in Washington Times- Herald.

We know you doubting thomases wont believe it—what with the scarcity of elastic and stuff—but we bought a pair of socks last week that has so much, and such strong elastic in them that they cut off circulation—blood, not papers.

We dont think it was a local preacher, but at any rate it was a preacher who went up to the old darko and complimented him on his fine garden. The old negro said, yassuh boss, it shore is fine. Then the preacher told him that he had the Almighty to credit for so nice a garden. To which the old one replied, "Cap'n, did you ever see this patch of land when the Almighty had it all to hisself?"

Now dont forget that you have a date Saturday afternoon at Gragg Field to watch the Air Show. Thirty-six paratroopers will descend from the skies at about 1:45 o'clock and it will be a sight that you may never get to see again. There will be a big Bond Auction the same day here and a long list of valuable prizes will be given to those who buy the most bonds. February 12th is going to be a big day in Clanton. Make your arrangements to be here. Also make arrangements to come prepared to buy Bonds.

What's this we hear about Pat Smith' resigning his position as County Agent and going back to Geneva County. What's Geneva County got that Chilton County hasn't got. Pat Smith has really done a good job. He will be sorely missed in Clanton. Both in the Civic life as well as the business life of the town. And too, Fay will be missed. She has given freely of her time and talent in worthwhile undertakings. We hate to give up the Pat Smiths.

Helping immensley in the county quota of bond buying are the local chain stores. Goodyear Service Store bought a thousand dollar bond. Hills Grocery bought a thousand. Elmore's bought a couple of thousand and the A and P manager and employees buy theirs by withholding ten and fifteen percent of salaries and putting it into bonds. Alabama Mills bought twenty-thousand dollars worth in this Fourth War Loan. Sumter Farm and Stock Company, operators of The Yellow Front Stores, have also bought their regular thousand dollars worth. All-in-all, the chain stores in Chilton County are doing their bit right along with the rest of the businesses. We dont know that we named all who have bought in this drive but those stores just come to mind. They're doing a swell job.

Just received a nice engraved announcement from Arthur Wallace (Shorty) Headley. Shorty will graduate, or did graduate, Tuesday morning, Feb. 8th at Pecos, Texas, Army Air Field. He's a 2nd Lt. now. We understand that he will be home this week for a few days furlough. Clark, Shorty's older brother has been in the Service about a year longer than Shorty. He is a member of the Engineers in India. We want to be around when Big brother and Little brother meet and Little brother makes Big brother recognize that gold bar on his shoulder. Boy, but will Clark get even when Shorty pulls off that uniform.

Applications For Crop Loans Being Taken

Mr John K. Spivey, Field Supervisor for the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan office, stated that farmers of Chilton County are now applying for loans to finance the production of their 1944 crops. Applications for loan are now being written in Room 12, of the Chilton County Courthouse, at Clanton, on Fridays of each week.

He stated that, in addition to financing the production of regular crops such as cotton and corn, loans were also being made for and that special emphasis is being placed on the production of those crops declared essential and so vitally needed this year in the war effort. Plans for 1944 call for increased production of many food crops. The production goals of these crops, which can be successfully planted and grown in Chilton County, should be met and the need for funds necessary for their production will be given special consideration with the view that credit will be extended, where needed, so that every farm family will have an opportunity to make its maximum contributions to the Food Production Program.

Emergency Crop and Feed Loans are available to farmers, either owners or tenants, who own or can make arrangements for land to farm, who own or have the use of necessary workstock and equipment with which to farm, and who can give as security a first lien on the crops to be financed. Loans are also available for the purchase or production of feed for live stock to be fed for the market, or for breeding animals with the increase to be marketed and, as security, a first lien is required on such livestock. These loans will be made to farmers whose cash requirements are relatively small and who are unable to obtain from other sources, including local banks and Production Credit Associations, loans in an amount sufficient to meet their needs. Mr Spivey emphasized that these loans are not restricted to selected applicants but are available to all farmers who can establish eligibility, according to the terms of the loan regulations and authorizing act.

The wartime models of pressure cookers now in stock have bodies of steel coated with colored procelain enamel and covers of steel plated with tin.

One of the resolutions that American housewives may well make this new year is to put up food only by scientifically approved canning methods. Canning specialists of the Department of Agriculture for safety from spoilage, acid foods—that is, meat, vegetables except tomatoes—canned under pressure. Pressure cookers are no longer, no one should be tempted a chance on putting up food methods like oven canning. year's output of pressure cookers is 315,000, this year's is expected to be about 400,000.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

MARY OHARA

STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Flicka gives an opportunity to any yearling on the family's ranch, picks the army of "foes" who, like a retired army officer, are disappointed by her choice and failure at school. When Flicka, a baby bird trying to jump the fence, Ken takes the opportunity to friends with the wild colt. Flicka grows steadily worse, and McLaughlin orders Gus, the foreman, to shoot her. Ken goes out to the McLaughlin order. Gus, the foreman, is a bad boy who is asleep and Flicka trapped in a stream but he wakes into the stream and her head out of the water. Ken continues with the story.

"I'll follow you in to town," said Rob, "and bring it back."

He reached for Nell, took her in his arms and hugged and kissed her. "Now don't worry so, darling, the kid'll be all right."

"Of course," said Nell. "I'll go back to him."

The doctor gave her some final instructions for Ken's care and went out with Rob.

Gus had gone about his work all day, thinking of Flicka. He had not been back to look at her. He had been given no more orders. If she was alive, the order to shoot her was still in effect. But Ken was in, McLaughlin making his second trip to town to buy medicines, and would not be back till long after dark. He did not know just what to do.

She raised her head as they reached her. "By the Powers!" exclaimed Tim. "There she is!" She dropped her head, raised it again, and moved her legs and became tense as if struggling to rise. The men cheered her on. She rolled over on her belly, reached out her forefeet and scrambled halfway up. "Yee whiz!" said Gus. "She got plenty strent yet."

Hi! cheered Tim. "She's up!" But Flicka wavered, slid down again and lay flat. This time she gave notice that she would not rise again by heaving a deep sigh and closing her eyes.

Gus took his pipe out of his mouth and brought it over. Orders of no orders, he would try to save the filly. Ken had gone too far to be let down.

"Ay'm goin to rig a blanket sling for her, Tim, and get her on her feet and keep her up. If she's got a chance, that'll help. If she ain't it'll do no harm anyway."

While they were getting the tools, the post-hole digger and shovel, crowbar, ropes, and blanket, the downpour of rain came again. This time it was persistent. The two men went to the bunk house, put on their oilskins, and brought a couple of lanterns with them when they carried the stuff down to the creek.

Flicka was just as they had left her.

"She's sure goin to get another drenching," said Tim. "Work her, hurt her," said the Swede. "She bin out in tunderstorms since she bin born."

It took them an hour to rig the sling. They struck rocks in their flanks, which had to be pried out. Flicka was lying on a piece of sward, only a little higher than the level of the creek. To the far side, the ground rose sharply behind her, in a steep hill which, on part of its surface, was a sheer slide of rock, another of the rock-slides which were characteristic of the terrain of the ranch.

The men set two tall and sturdy aspen poles deep into the ground on each side of the filly, then rolled her onto the folded blanket. The ends of the blanket were gathered and the rope tied on to them in a knot which the more weight was on it, the tighter it was drawn. The tops of the posts were notched, and a crowbar laid across them. The end of the rope was passed through and a hole bored through the post a few inches below the notch; and when everything was ready, Gus said, "Altogether, now—" They each pulled on their rope, and the blanket and filly rose off the earth together. When she had reached a height where her feet just lightly touched the earth, they let her, and fastened the ends of the ropes to the crowbar.

So she hung—not in the least disconcerted, and when Tim brought her a bucket of water, put her nose in it and drank.

While the two men were carrying the tools back to the tool house, the heavens let loose.

"We're in for it now," said Tim. "I didn't think it could last much longer."

"I'm glad we got de tarps stretched over dem stacks," said Gus. "De hay's not packed hard."

When they reached the ranch house, he handed Tim the tools he was carrying. "I'm gonna stop here, Tim, and see if de Missus need anything—an fin' out how de little feller is—"

"Tim went on without him, and Gus went into the kitchen, where the oil lamp was hung on the wall beside the stove, and removed his slicker.

Nell heard him stamping about and hurried downstairs.

"Is that you, Gus?"

"Ja, Missus—how is de little boy?"

"Oh, Gus, we don't know yet—he seems pretty sick." Nell's face was worn and anxious. Standing there, belted in her narrow gray flannel wrapper, she looked slim and childish. Her hair was loose on her shoulders, and she put up a hand and pushed it back with a nervous gesture. "Gus—is Flicka dead?"

"No'm. Tim and I, we just got truxin her up in a blanket sling. She can't stand alone; but dere's life in her, and she reached for de bucket of water and drank it down like a good yon."

Nell's eyes sank to the floor, and she stood a moment in tapping her foot. "You didn't shoot her," she said, just thinking out loud. "Gus, did he—did Captain McLaughlin say you didn't have to shoot her?"

"No'm, he told me last night to fire a time when Ken wasn't around and shoot her. But you, you I found 'em like dat dis mornin'—I—I—"

"I know," said Nell quickly. "I know what you mean. Well—I'll tell Ken. Maybe he'll help him—I'll make Flicka happy, the way she likes alive. Gus, now you're here, I want you to set up a cot for me in Ken's room, so I can sleep there and take care of him. It's down in the cellar—would you bring it up?"

"I know where it is, ma'm," said Gus soothingly. "Now you go up to de little boy, and I'll bring de cot up and set it up for you."

Nell ran upstairs, and found Ken's eyes wide open. He moved every few seconds, turning from one side to the other. His breath was shallow, often with long pauses between. She sat on the edge of the bed, bent over him and smiled into his eyes with deep, penetrating love. The faint smile appeared on his lips in answer. She smoothed the hair back from his forehead, then took one of his hands in both of hers and said, "Kenne—did you know that Flicka's a little better?" Gus has fixed a blanket sling for her, and they've got her up in it, and she drank some water when they held the bucket for her."

The boy's face changed as if a light had been thrown over it, and his lips moved, but no words came. "Maybe—just maybe, darling—she'll live after all. We'll do the best we can—but you musn't hope too hard."

Ken was trying to move his lips again. At last she heard the words, "But—Dad—gave—the order—"

At that moment Gus entered the room carrying the cot. Then he brought the mattress; and as they set it up, Ken's eyes followed their movements.

Gus tip-toed to the side of his bed and looked down at him.

"De filly's up, Kenne—now you be good boy an' soon you be up to de cot."

"Ja?"

"Did Dad tell you you didn't need to shoot her?"

"No, Kenne, but I ain't done it yet—und maybe he change his mind—"

Kenne's face changed. He closed his eyes and a look of dread and pain was upon his lips.

Gus tip-toed out of the room, and presently Nell heard a whisper from the bed. "Mother?"

"Yes, darling."

"Where's Dad now?"

"He went to town, dear, to get some medicines the doctor ordered for you."

Ken said nothing more. He seemed to be sleeping, and Nell went quietly about the business of making up the cot.

Presently he spoke again. "Will he be back soon?"

"Any time now, dear, I think."

Ken lay with eyes closed, but Nell, every time she looked at him, realized that he was tense, listening for the sound of the Studebaker roaring up the hill.

Washington Digest FAO Draws Up Plans for 'Family of Nations' Buying

Food and Agriculture Organization Aims at Expanded Production, Increased Trade Within Countries Involved.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

When the President introduced his second bill of rights into his State of the Union message to congress and skillfully linked the past and future with it, he set up old arguments among the elite of Washington's cracker-barrel set.

When Old Dr. New Deal" was set aside as the guardian of American welfare, some folks hereabouts insisted that he had plans for considerably extending his practice later—that his friend, Franklin D., was planning on a "World New Deal."

Like all smoke, it signals a fire somewhere.

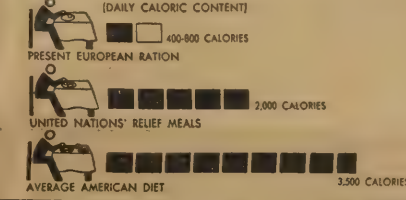

There is no doubt that even though the realistic Mr. Churchill and the realistic Mr. Stalin didn't see eye to eye on everything as they looked at each other across the green table at Teheran, we have reason to believe that both are pretty well sold on what they each think can be done in the way of a little international "welfare work" which would raise the standards which measure the hum of business in their respective countries.

The President presented to congress the various human "rights" he visualized, as you recall, and there will be more specific data coming which will measure the hum of business in their respective countries.

There is no doubt that even though the realistic Mr. Churchill and the realistic Mr. Stalin didn't see eye to eye on everything as they looked at each other across the green table at Teheran, we have reason to believe that both are pretty well sold on what they each think can be done in the way of a little international "welfare work" which would raise the standards which measure the hum of business in their respective countries.

TELEFACT

to keep his hand in in case he contemplates, as the cracker-barrelers suggest, further personal activity later, or merely wants to keep Americans thinking about all these things, come the ideas of November.

About Relief

No matter how you look at it (unless you are a 100 per cent "stew-in-their-own-kitchen" you have a sort of vague feeling that we ought to do what we can to help out people who are starving or freezing no matter where they are. I say that advisedly and for proof turn to the record.

One of the earliest memories of my childhood is tagging up Main Street on my mother's hand and seeing a dishpan in front of the "Silver Dollar" (not the original) filled with dollar bills. My mother dropped in a quarter and hurried past the sinister abode. Passersby tossed in their currency for the sufferers of some Chinese famine or Italian earthquake (perhaps Pompeii and Herculaneum, I don't recall).

America is always willing to go down deep in its pockets for "relief." But it doesn't seem to like it if government runs the show. Nobody on Main Street knew how much of the dishpan's contents reached the quaking Italians or what-have-you and how much never got past the "Silver Dollar" back room, but nobody cared.

On the other hand, even when the money is triple-checked by the government and investigated by the opposition, if it is taken out of the general kitty, Americans don't like it. That's playing Santa Claus. When they can shell out individually, it's all right—which may be perfectly logical from a psychological point of view.

However this may be, your government is going right ahead and preparing a program for taking out the wrinkles and concealing the ribs of a starving world just the same—it is also doing something more, helping the starvers raise more of their own food.

They are trying to organize the job with the same business acumen that a business man would use on it. Believe it or not, the men who are figuring out right lunches and the production programs to make them unnecessary hereafter are doing it scientifically, and even if you don't like the word, on a "businesslike" basis.

Little has been said of this permanent food organization of the United Nations. You hear about UNRRA, which is supposed to take care of what might be called "strategic feeding"—that is, taking care of the hungry in the countries the Allies recapture (hungry men and women are no help to anyone). The motive is less altruistic than military.

But you may not have heard of the work of the FAO—that's an entirely unofficial abbreviation of the Food and Agriculture organization which Gove Hambidge of the agriculture administration of the department of agriculture made up himself. He was appointed one of the secretaries of the commission appointed at the conference in Hot Springs last May.

Work 'Going Well'

Hambidge says the work of this FAO is going well. It has drawn up the plans for this job of permanent feeding. Not "free" feeding permanently, but a plan for "family by family"—family of nations buying. Naturally there is plenty of chance for differences of opinion but Hambidge puts it this way:

"Pa wants a certain kind of engine. Ma has her eye on the upholstery. Sis prefers a certain body color. Junior—just thinking about the gadgets on the instrument panel. But the main thing is—they all want a car. They end up by getting one that isn't quite what anybody expected—but one that's durable, and a good buy, and gets them where they want to go."

"In other words, they compromise. Each one gives up his own pet ideas to get a car that will be serviceable for the whole family."

"And that's what will happen," says Hambidge, "with the Food and Agriculture organization. The Interim commission has been working out a constitution—a broad plan of operation, showing what the organization will do and how it will do it and a general budget, so we'll know what the work will cost. Along about March, probably, they will have these plans ready to submit formally to the 40-odd governments. If there's quick approval—the organization should be set up and ready to go not too long after that."

Two things FAO is aiming at: expanded production within the countries involved, and increased trade between the countries involved.

Some countries, for instance, just can't produce enough of the right kinds of foods to feed their people properly; others can produce certain foods—like wheat, for instance—only at very great cost. The FAO, its members say, aims to get away from the old isolationist idea that prevailed almost everywhere before the war—with every country trying to meet all its own needs which ended up with a smashing big depression and a whopping big war. What the FAO can do to prevent such world catastrophes, according to Hambidge, remains to be seen.

That is what this very silent committee, or commission or whatever you want to call it, is doing—making an attempt at prophylaxis—an attempt to cure the disease instead of the symptoms.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Tire life on rough gravel roads is about 40 per cent less than on smooth concrete pavements. This was proved by tests conducted by the Iowa State College.

Scap, it develops, is to be a growing factor in maintaining motor transportation. It has been estimated that 100 million pounds of soap will be required for one year's production of synthetic rubber.

Cameback, which gets its name because it originally had a hump in the center, is a greatly improved product of the rubber industry. Over 20 million pounds of cameback are now being made monthly to recap tires.

Crash on Alabama River Bridge Stops Traffic

Traffic across the Alabama River bridge on Highway No. 31 was tied up several hours Sunday night and early Monday as the result of a side-swiping truck-automobile accident in which four negroes in the auto were injured and brought to a local hospital.

A truck of Deaton Transfer Company was moving a heavy highway grade through from Florida to a Mississippi point when, after going upon the bridge, the automobile headed for Montgomery attempted to pass and side-swiped the grader, an over-width machine. The grader toppled from the truck and caved in the passenger car.

Several hours were required to clear the debris from the bridge and start truck and grader on their way, and haul the wrecked car to Montgomery.

State Highway patrol men made the investigation.

PLANT OUR STATE'S COLORS ON EVERY FRONT

Alabama must buy almost $4,000,000 a day in War Bonds if the State reaches its quota of $93,000,000 by February 15, State War Finance Chairman Ed Leigh McMillan announced Monday.

Official figures released by the Federal Reserve Bank in Atlanta show that through Saturday the state had bought $59,200,000 in all types of bonds.

"This means," Mr. McMillan said, "that we still have $33,800,000 to buy if we are to Plant our state's colors on every fighting front."

"I am sure that no Alabamian wants news of a failure to meet our quota in the Fourth War Loan to go out to our men in these battle lines."

"Let each of us get busy and buy our share of the extra War Bonds necessary to put our state over the top."

MANPOWER SITUATION STUDIED IN ALABAMA

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 9. — Pursuant to orders from Governor Chauncey Sparks, Haygood Paterson, director of the Alabama Defense Council, has addressed a letter to every county defense chairman in Alabama asking him to make a survey to determine the manpower situation in Alabama.

Director Paterson asks that county defense chairman find out first, if there is much vagrancy in their county, as the vagrancy law being enforced, is there absenteeism from jobs, is there any appreciable labor available for adjacent farms, what is the domestic serving problem and what can be done to meet the labor shortage during 1944.

Governor Sparks long ago insisted that Sheriffs put an end to vagrancy in their counties but reports continue to reach the Capitol that thousands in Alabama are not making an effort to secure jobs.

Gene Gore is Defense Chairman for Chilton County.

YOUR RATION CALENDAR

Hosiery buyers cannot be forced to purchase the coarser or heavier gauges of women's rayon hosiery in order to obtain finer gauge stockings, OPA has announced.

This statement was issued by OPA after receipt of complaints from consumers and retailers who said they had been frequently compelled to buy coarser gauge stockings as a part of "combination sales."

OPA said this ban on "combination sales" applied to carrying grades of hosiery as well as to other articles, services, packages, wrappers, etc., and at all sales levels.

Two Killed; 2 Injured In Explosion At Dam

Generator At Lay Dam Wrecked; Building Is Damaged

Two men were killed and two others injured Monday morning when a generator at the Alabama Power Company's Lay Dam on the Coosa River, about 12 miles east of here, wrecked itself and tore out a part of the powerhouse wall.

The mangled bodies of Plant Foreman H. L. (Tommy) Thompson, 40, and W. J. Vinson, 58, turbine operator, both of whom were long-time employees of the company, were recovered after the accident. Injured were Macey Jones, electrician, and John Jackson, Negro employee.

Cause of the accident was not ascertained immediately, but company engineers in Birmingham left for the scene as soon as they were notified to make an investigation.

Engineers here pronounced the accident as one of the most unusual and mystifying they had ever seen. The accident occurred at 9:50 a.m. but the bodies of the victims were not found until some time later.

OUR COMIC SECTION

A Little Sugar, but a Lot of Sweetness
(See Recipes Below.)

Short on Sugar

Requests continue to pour in for sugar-saving recipes. This leads me to believe that there are many who want home-baked goodies in quantity greater than their sugar supply will allow. That means they want recipes that are short on sugar but long on sweetness.

Most baked goodies taste best when only part of the sugar is replaced by other sweetening agents. Only in plain muffins, bread and rolls is an exception made to this rule. Richer doughs have only one-half to three-fourths of their sugar replaced by corn syrup or honey.

It's best to use only tested recipes for your sugar-savers. You will find the proportion of liquid has been reduced—and if you are trying to change over a recipe you might forget this very important step.

Foundation Sweet Dough.
(Makes 2 coffee cakes or 3½ dozen sweet rolls)

- 2 cakes yeast
- ¾ cup lukewarm water
- 1 cup milk
- ¼ cup butter or substitute
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 cup light corn syrup or honey
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs
- 5 cups sifted enriched flour (about)

Soften yeast in lukewarm water. Scald milk. Add butter, sugar, syrup and salt. Cool.

2 cups flour and beat well. Add softened yeast. Beat eggs and add. Mix thoroughly. Add the remaining flour to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead until shiny. Place in a greased bowl, cover, let rise until doubled in bulk. Punch down.

Shape into tea rings, rolls or coffee cake. Place on greased baking sheets or in greased pans. Cover and let rise again until doubled in bulk. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees) 25 to 30 minutes for coffee cakes, 15 to 20 minutes for rolls.

Honey Orange Rolls.
1 recipe Foundation Sweet Dough
2 tablespoons grated orange rind
¾ cup honey

When dough is light, punch down. Let rest 10 minutes. Roll into a rectangular sheet ¼ inch thick and about 9 inches wide. Spread with honey and sprinkle with orange rind. Roll in jelly-roll fashion, sealing edges. Cut into 1-inch squares. Cover and let rise until doubled in bulk. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees) 20 to 25 minutes.

Lynn Says

The Score Card: You can save pennies and points if you watch the markets closely and plan your menus accordingly. Right now you can use more eggs, pork cuts, citrus fruit, and winter vegetables such as turnips, broccoli, green beans and spinach to perk up your menus.

Be sure to turn in those used fats. Your butcher will pay you for them in both points and pennies.

Use fresh vegetables and fruits whenever possible and save your canned foods for quick or emergency meals.

February is the birthday month of enriched bread and flour. It was estimated that before the war the per capita consumption of the flour was 6½ ounces daily, but it probably is more now because bread and flours are carrying much of the load of other foods such as meat.

Save Those Used Fats:
Take Them to Your Butcher.

Let stand 1 minute before turning out.

Applesauce can go into muffins too! It's as delicious as the cake which has made it famous.

Applesauce Muffins.
(Makes 2½ dozen 2-inch muffins)
¾ cup shortening
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup light corn syrup
2 eggs

2 cups sifted enriched flour
2 cups enriched flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped nuts

Cream together shortening and sugar. Add syrup and beat well. Beat eggs and add. Add applesauce. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt and add to creamed mixture. Stir until uniform flour is moistened. Add nuts. Fill greased muffin tins about ¾ full and bake in a moderate (375 degrees) oven 20 to 25 minutes.

Give yourself health as well as appetite appeal in the cup cakes made with iron-rich molasses:

Gingerbread Cup Cakes.
(Makes 18 cup cakes)
¾ cup melted shortening
1½ cups pure dark molasses
1 egg, beaten
2½ cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoons soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon ginger
¾ teaspoon cloves
¾ teaspoon salt
¾ cup hot water

Combine shortening and molasses and add egg. Stir until well blended. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add alternately with the hot water. Turn into greased muffin pans and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees) about 25 minutes.

Here's an unusual dessert with that well-liked apple-cinnamon flavor:

Apple Cinnamon Snow.
1 package lemon flavored gelatin
¾ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
4 tablespoons red cinnamon candy drops

1 cup boiling water
¾ cup cold water
1 cup applesauce
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Dissolve gelatin, sugar, salt and cinnamon drops in boiling water. Add cold water and applesauce. Cool, then chill to consistency of thick syrup. Add egg whites and beat until mixture is light in color, thick and holds a small peak. Pour into sherbet glasses. Chill until firm. Garnish with a few extra cinnamon candies.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Don't use soap on enameled ware. It dulls the gloss. Clean to which one teaspoon soda has been added to the water should be used. On flat-painted surfaces, soap, rinsing quickly with water and wiping dry.

Before adjusting hem to new lengths, rip up and wash the garment. It gets rid of the crease, ridge of soil which often at this point if the preliminary is given.

Sawhorses with a board on them make a dandy for papering and other cleaning chores. But scratch the floors to remove the paper while you save your thumb. The sawhorses will be a trouble.

Clean gummy furniture with a small piece of olive oil and going over the surface to be cleaned. Wipe off the oil and polish with dry cloth. The oil is a varnish, as it tends to be cracking.

Before starting to do small tack, stick it through heavy paper—brown paper is fine. Then you can pull the paper while you save your thumb. The tack will come off easily.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY OHARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Two-year-old McLaughlin, given an opportunity to see any yarding on his family's Way ranch, picks the filly of a "toes" Flicka, the filly, is badly hurt trying to break the corral fence. She grows ill, worse, and Captain McLaughlin, the foreman, to shoot her, persuades Gus to wait, and when she is asleep he goes out to the pasture and finds Flicka trapped in a snare. He rescues her, but when Gus sees her, he is so angry that he attacks her and dangerously ill. Finally, Captain McLaughlin risks his life to save Flicka from a wildcat. Flicka has both get well.

CHAPTER XIX

"I entered the room holding the heater in one hand and one shell in the other. There were only one shell, Boss." "Where are the others? There was a box of them."

"The officers shot 'em all off dat dey was here."

"I matched the shell. 'One's "said, 'You'll find de filly in a de far side de creek. Tim I rigged it up for her ven we got his flashlight from the and went out. Gus raised soul eyes to Nell's white face. He took it so hard, Missus," he softly. "De Boss is right. No, to let sick and live. I thrust the shell into the rifle, thrust the gun under his left arm, knew the way as well as he, the way around his own room, the light picked out his footing blinding flash came, and another, and another, illuminating the pasture, while the skies exuded with thunder. The room doors shut the scenes out, Rob seen three things. He saw the in the sling on the far side of the creek, the rock-side behind her, saw down at the end of the trail, the cattle bunched together, guard, frightened, staring. And saw what they were staring at, nothing white lying on the ground, the three pines, with a huge main lion crouched over it. Rob stood motionless in the darkness, thinking. He wondered if the lion had seen him. The flash of lightning answered that, the lion had disappeared. That was that white thing lying on ground? Rob wanted to investigate, but he dared not move. Just shell in the gun—

He stood still for some time, senses strained, listening, trying to see through the darkness, the ready in his hands, cocked, half

The lightning flashes showed the lion bunched, watching, and white thing on the ground with moving creature near it. Then laughter saw two blazing green fastened upon him. He could tell whether they were near or until a flash of lightning showed that they were in the center of a mass of shrubs. The lion had seen himself in those shrubs and looking out at him from there, the eyes seemed quite steady. He raised his gun, took aim, and seemed to him that just before he had pressed the trigger the lion had disappeared. He lowered his gun and stood warily, listening for a sound.

After a while, he stood bold-ly over to the bushes, shouting and undisturbed by the gun. With the aid of his flashlight, he looked along the path and found, as he had expected, that he had missed. There was no sign of the lion.

"Well, we're in for it, Flicka," he said, stroking the filly's nose. "A lot of it. You're a drowned rat. I'm another. I'd feel better if I had a pocket full of shells—and a nk—and a fire—and some dry

He had barely reached this conclusion when he saw a light approaching, swinging and bobbing on the path.

"Hey! Nell!"

"Rob! Are you all right? Where are you?"

"Here—on the far side of the creek." He swung the flashlight. Presently he saw her anxious face, lit from underneath by the light of the lantern in her hand. Under her other arm she carried the Express rifle. She was in old "Good girl!" He went to help her cross the brook where there were some stones, and took the heavy gun and lantern from her.

"What happened? I heard a shot was that Flicka?"

"No. The mountain lion."

"I wish he'd show himself this minute," said Nell, "and get him off shot. What do you think he'll do?"

"We may never see him again. He's been shot at once, he sees me, he may make for the woods."

"Well—if he doesn't—here is Flicka."

"Yes. Well, I'm spending the night with Flicka. I can't get her to the stables. She can't walk."

Rob took Howard to school on the pending date and talked to Mr. Gibson about Ken. He returned to Nell, astonished and moved at what the boy had done.

"Did you read it?" he asked Nell a low voice as they sat by the window in Ken's room, "The Story of Cypri?"

"No. We decided that it must be all his own. If I'd read it I'd have wanted to make suggestions, and as this was really an examination paper, it didn't seem right."

Rob handed her the paper. When he had first read it himself it had given him the strange emotion within his breast that his younger son sometimes caused.

She returned to Rob. "What did Gibson say about it?"

"Said it was a good piece of writing. Says Ken's got a brilliant mind—asked me if I knew it."

"What did you say?"

"I said No, I thought he was dumb; and he said sometimes a brilliant people were very dumb."

In Nell's worn and tired face the dimple of the right cheek suddenly showed. "I didn't know Gibson was smart enough to say a thing like that," she whispered.

"Rob! Are you all right? Where are you?"

"Did you know it, Nell—that Ken is brilliant?"

"What on earth made you think that? He's always failed at everything—till this summer."

"Well—" Nell spoke slowly, thoughtfully, "a dreamer—you know it's a mind that looks over the edge of things—the way Ken can do what he calls 'getting into other worlds'; gets into a picture; gets into a drop of water; gets into a anything—"

Rob sat looking out the window.

"What did Mr. Gibson finally decide?" asked Nell.

"Said that as Ken had made a sincere effort, he would take him back into his own grade on proba-

Some days later, when there had been a light fall of snow, and the whole world was an etching in brown and white, Rob wrapped the boy up, and telling Nell that there was something out on one of the hills he wanted to show him, drove down the road and stopped the car. Looking out the window, they could see, a short distance away, where the range rolled up to the woods.

"Look," said McLaughlin, pointing on the window.

On the edge of the woods stood a great stag with a full-antlered head. Blending perfectly with the brown and white etching, he was hard to see at first. His whole body was in profile to the car, but his head was turned around to face them, held very high, the eyes in an unswerving direct gaze bent upon the car there in the road. The up-curving lines of his neck and head flowed out into the trunks and then the branches of the many-pointed antlers in indescribable beauty.

Ken's mouth fell open as he looked. The stag was absolutely motionless. The word nobility might have been coined to embody all that the magnificent creature expressed. Or courage.

McLaughlin glanced down at his son. The mouth was still open.

"How did you know he'd be here, Dad?"

"I just saw him, driving in from the highway."

"Why does he stay so long without moving?"

"He's got a doe lying down there. He's protecting her. That's why he doesn't move."

The boy looked a long time yet, then glanced up at his father. "Because she's his responsibility?"

"Yes."

McLaughlin started the engine, turned the car and drove toward the ranch.

Ken watched the motionless stag as long as he could see him. The boy's eyes burned; there was a choking in his throat, and all through his body a feeling as of rushing torrents.

When he could no longer see the stag, his eyes roved over the hills and woods. He did not know what had ended the cold, weary detachment and united him to the world again, he only knew that it was his own once more, that it was beautiful and alive, that he wanted to see Flicka. And he pressed his face against his father's sleeve and wept.

Late that afternoon Ken, bundled up in a heavy sweater, slammed the house door, thudded across the Green and opened the gate. He found a new pasture; snow on the ground, bare trees, the orange glow of a real winter sunset in the sky. And Flicka—

Every day, for weeks, she had looked for him. She would stand at the corral gate with head up and ears pricked sharply; then disappointed, whirled about with an impatient nick and trot restlessly around the hill, then turn, point her ears, and stand listening again.

She had grown two inches in height and gave promise of being a big horse, with speed and power and fire. She had a thick, warm winter coat of long fur; there was no swelling on any of her legs. Cold mornings, she put her nose to the earth and kicked her heels in the air; or twisted her body and bucked; or galloped wildly from one end of the pasture to the other, her blonde mane and tail streaming. When snow fell, coming sometimes on a whining winter wind, she lifted her head high and sniffed at it with baring nostrils.

Now the slamming of the ranch door caught her attention and she trotted questioningly toward the corral.

Ken's quick feet thudded across the Green, the gate rattled; and when the boy came running down the path, crying, "Oh, Flicka! Flicka!" the neigh that rang out on the cold air was a sound the filly had never made before.

(THE END)

Rob! Are you all right? Where are you?"

Old Eli Took Jenny's Ultimatum Pretty Hard

Old Eli and his wife, Jenny, had enjoyed bickering for over 40 years. But at last Jenny seemed to be really annoyed. For a week she had been harping about Eli drinking his coffee from his saucer. Finally, at supper one night she delivered her ultimatum.

"Eli," she said with dignity, "if you don't stop a-drinkin' your coffee out'n your saucer, I'm a-goin' to leave you, that's all!"

Old Eli's jaw dropped. He looked at her, then surveyed his saucer of coffee in sorrow. He pushed away the saucer and spoke with a note of longing in his voice. "Jenny," he said, "I'm a-goin' to miss you, gal."

"I WAS CONSTIPATED FOR MANY YEARS!"

Now I'm 'Regular' Every Morning!"

Constipated? Then here's an unsolicited letter you'll want to read: "I've been troubled with common constipation for many years. Was taking laxatives and pills all the time, and was very weak and run down. 3 months ago I began taking KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN daily. Now I have a regular, natural movement every morning, which helps me keep my best!"—Mrs. Samuel D. Black, 234 Kings Highway, Brooklyn, New York.

What is this seeming magic of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN? Scientists say it's because KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN can really "get at" a common cause of constipation—namely, lack of sufficient "cellulose" elements in the diet. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements, which help the friendly colonic flora fluff up and prepare the colonic wastes for easy, natural elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is not a purgative! Doesn't work by "sweeping out." It's a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If you have constipation of this type, eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN or several ALL-BRAN muffins regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you don't find lasting relief. Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

With synthetic tires about to be in general use, experts emphasize again that speed is important in determining tire mileage. The legal limit of 35 m.p.h. has been found to be the best mileage conservator with synthetics, just as it was with tires of crude rubber.

The cords lose elasticity as they grow older, which accounts for many blowouts when a well-worn tire strikes a rough spot in the road.

MRS. MARK L. TUCKER, Owner

R. M. TUCKER, M'g'n.-Ed

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

FOLKS & THINGS

If you could go on, and on, and on, congratulating the committee, who, with Chairman Pattillo, put on the air show and auction in town and at Gragg Field Saturday, and still not overdo the thing. Everything worked out fine, even though a strong wind was blowing and it was as cold as the nose of an Eskimo dog. More automobiles and more people than we have seen in and around Clanton in a long, long, time, gathered at Gragg Field to watch the paratroopers—we must have sat there from ten till tired. The only reason we didn't go home when it was over, we couldn't. Sardines have a nice roomy car compared to the way we were jammed in between miles of cars to the front and back of us. But what we started to say when we got caught in the crowd was: In spite of the high wind, no one was hurt. A very large crowd also gathered in town later and bought War Bonds and got nice presents for their patriotism.

Macy Jones, who was critically hurt Monday morning in the explosion at Lay Dam was one of the patriotic Americans who bought thousand dollar War Bonds at the auction Saturday. Macy, however went around the table on the quiet and told one of the ladies to put him down for a bond. When told to get out there and bid, he refused, saying that he didn't have to be induced to buy bonds. He thought it was our duty, as American citizens to buy all that we could.

Several were scared badly out at the Field when the plane carrying the paratroopers dropped that dummy with the long streamer. After we got to town we learned that it was merely a test to determine when and how the boys should leave their plane, but it looked for all the world like a 'trooper' who's chute had failed to open.

J. T. King, Ed Propst, Bill Minor and John Mullins went to their Draft Board last week and volunteered for service in the armed forces. They left Monday morning for Fort McClellan for their physical and as we go to press we hear that John Durwood Mullins and Ed Propst were accepted, J. T. King was turned down and about Bill Minor, we haven't heard how he came out with the Medical Staff. By-the-way several dozens more of our "boys" went over at the same time—and for the same thing.

The consensus of opinion as we get it in the Senate race between Lister Hill and Jim Simpson is that, as everyone agrees, both are mighty good men. They are men that our state are proud of. Well, that being the case, why trade Lister Hill for Jim Simpson, when Lister has had years of experience in Washington. He already knows what it will take years for Jim Simpson to learn—and at our expense. We don't think that would make sense.

Much appreciated by "Ben" is a letter received this week from Pat Smith, former County Agent for Chilton County. Pat, you know, resigned to return to his farm. In his place has been appointed M. R. (Red) Glasscock, who was Assistant County Agent. Red "took over" Wednesday morning and our prediction is that he will make us a good County Agent. He is very likable, has a good personality, knows his job, and last but by no means least, he loves his work. Anyhow, we wish him the best of luck in his new place and offer our cooperation at all times.

FDA Establishes Supported Price On Grade "A" Eggs

Egg producers in this and 30 other Alabama counties this week were given assurance of a supported price of 34c a dozen, until further notice, for all Grade A large eggs sold to "country buyers" operating under contract with the Food Distribution Administration.

The support price is in effect in the following counties and those lying to the east of them: Escambia, Conecuh, Butler, Lowndes, Dallas, Chilton, Coosa, Talladega, Calhoun and Cherokee.

Support prices also have been set on Grades B and C large, at slightly lower levels, and on Grades A and B medium eggs.

The Southern Egg Marketing Program, in operation in 11 states, will be inaugurated in this area upon the approval of contracts with "country buyers" and the announcement of support prices, James H. Hall, FDA area supervisor, with headquarters in Demopolis, Ala., said.

The support program, Mr. Hall pointed out, is designed to (1) maintain prices at federal-approved levels as a means of stimulating adequate production; (2) assist producers and distributors in developing an efficient and economic marketing system which will facilitate the movement of the largest possible volume of eggs into normal channels of trade at prices that will be reasonably profitable to both groups; (3) encourage the production of better quality eggs by giving producers an opportunity to sell and (4) aid in the establishment of uniform quality sold on U. S. Consumer grades.

The country buyers will buy all graded eggs offered in quantities of one dozen or more, at no less than the stipulated support price. They may sell through regular trade channels if they wish, but the FDA stands ready to purchase any graded eggs the buyer may acquire, in lots of 10 cases or more, at the support price plus costs of handling. He thus is guaranteed a market for all he buys.

Alabama 1943 Cotton Yield Second Highest In History

Auburn, Ala. — The yield of lint cotton per acre in Alabama last year was the second largest ever produced in the State, announces J. T. Belue, APL extension cotton improvement specialist. The yield the past year was 283 pounds, while that in 1942 was only 261 pounds. The record year was 1937 when the yield was 290 pounds.

High yields per acre in 1943 were made despite heavy boll weevil infestation and unfavorable weather conditions. This was attributed to planting treated seed earlier, using better varieties and fertilizing properly. Thirty-five per cent of the total acreage in Alabama was grown in one-variety communities and produced 40 percent of the crop.

Proper fertilization and the use of recommended varieties will help maintain this high yield in 1944. The Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station recommends that 400 to 800 pounds of 6-8-4 or 4-10-4 per acre be used on the heavier soils of the State where no extra potash is needed and the same amount of a 4-10-6 be used on the sandy soils. Where 4-10-4 or 4-10-6 is used the cotton should be side dressed with nitrogen.

Stoneville 2B, Coker 100, White Gold, Carolina Big Boll, Deltapine 14, and Miller 610 are satisfactory varieties for any section of the State not infested with cotton wilt disease. Wilt-resistant varieties are Coker Wilt, Coker 4 in 1, S and C Big Boll, Delta Dixie, Stonewilt and Cook 144.

"It is to the distinct advantage of producers to sell eggs on grade," Mr. Hall pointed out. This is the only way they can realize a sure profit over a long period of time from producing better eggs. The program offers producers not only a supported price, but a sure market for all eggs of approved grades."

JOHN DERAMUS WILL NOT DIRECT SIMPSON CAMPAIGN IN COUNTY

Last week there was an announcement in one of the local papers that I would manage the campaign in this county for Mr. Jim Simpson, candidate for United States Senate.

Since that time the company with which I have been connected for the past sixteen years advise me that on account of the manpower shortage I will have additional duties to perform which will keep me out of the county for the greatest part of each week for the next three months and insist that I take on no further duties.

In view of the above facts it is plain that I will not have the time to do justice to his campaign and it will be impossible for me to take on any other responsibilities.—John B. Deramus.

New Industry to Begin Operation March 1ST At Munford, Alabama

A new pipe fittings and casting company will begin operations in Alabama on or about March 1st, manufacturing grey iron casting both for government contracts and for contracts now held with one of the nation's largest mail order houses, it was announced this month.

The company, a branch of the Central Specialty Company of Ypsilante, Michigan, has acquired the property of the Munford Cotton Mills between Talladega and Anniston, and was brought into that section through the actions of both the Talladega and the Anniston Chambers of Commerce. The company first sought a Southern location in Alabama and was assisted in the matter by Birmingham industrialists. It was learned that both the Anniston and the Talladega Chambers further assisted by furnishing maps and informational data on several locations in their vicinity, and succeeded in locating the new industry at Munford, midway between the two cities.

Work has already been started converting the cotton mill property, preparatory to installing the foundry equipment of the new concern. At the outset of operations, it was announced, a relatively small scale production will go into effect. The new company will begin in March with a total employment of approximately 100 men and 50 women, however, almost immediate expansion is anticipated, as the company holds current contracts that will require considerably more facilities than it now has in operation.

J. C. EUBANKS DIED IN KANSAS CITY, MO.

James Cecil Eubanks, age 50, died in Kansas City, Mo., last Wednesday morning at 6:00 o'clock, the victim of meningitis. He had left his home in Knoxville, Tenn., ten days prior to his death, attending a convention of Southern Railway Boilermakers. He had been connected with this company as boiler-maker for three years.

Besides the mother, Mrs. John M. Robinson, and three brothers, Leonard and Dewey Eubanks of Clanton, and Herman Eubanks of Chattanooga, Tenn., surviving is the wife, Mrs. Gertrude Webb Eubanks, son, James C. Eubanks, Jr., and one daughter, Miss Kathleen Eubanks of Knoxville.

Services were held at Mann's Knoxville, Saturday afternoon at 3:30 Rev. A. F. Mahan and Rev. R. W. Prevost officiating; interment in Lynhurst cemetery. Serving as pallbearer were 35 fellow boilermakers, all members of Union Local No. 143, of Knoxville.

Manufacture of Buses To Be Limited

In permitting the manufacture of a limited number of buses in 1944, the War Production Board has given further recognition to the importance of highway transportation in the war effort, according to Arthur M. Hill, president of the National Association of Motor Bus Operators.

WPB has set a tentative quota of 6,960 integral type buses to be built for civilian use in the next twelve months. Indications are that 1,700 will be allocated for intercity service.

Mr. Hill stated that more than 4,000 of the nation's 22,000 intercity buses are over eight years old, the life expectancy of such vehicles. Although highway buses are now carrying triple the number of passengers of any pre-war year, no new equipment has been made available for over-the-road use since 1942 and there is an acute need for replacements.

Many buses are being driven 10,000 to 12,000 miles a month to meet wartime transportation demands. Older models are kept operating only because the industry has developed more intensified methods of maintenance, repair and conservation.

While the number of new buses promised the intercity lines is far less than the annual requirements in peacetime, even the limited quantity will help by replacing the carriers which have reached the point where overhauling and repair work is impractical for dependable operation.

A LETTER OF THANKS

I want to thank God for sparing my life for some purpose. We don't know what. I want to begin by thanking the men that picked me up at the accident and brought me to the hospital. I don't know who. I would like to see them and talk to them. I want to thank Dr. Moore for his faithful service and I want to thank the hospital attendants for the kind treatment at Central Alabama Hospital. I feel that they saved my life by prompt treatment.

I want to thank Mell Martin for staying with me until he found out I wasn't going to die and still stayed with me and did all he could. I want to thank the people all over the county for coming to see me and especially those that knocked and they wouldn't let in for I was so low till the hospital knew I couldn't have company. Miss Gardner nursed me like a baby and I won't never forget the treatment my special nurses Mrs. Windham and Mrs. Raspberry were very nice. I just feel that all put together is the cause of me living today.

The accident was unavoidable and I blame no one and am proud to be living.

I am very thankful for Dr. O'Connell of Birmingham. I spent 2 weeks at the Medical Arts Building after leaving Clanton and I am in very good shape, am not well but think I am out of danger now. I want to thank the Baptist and Methodist Pastors for attending the hospital so regular to visit me and others. I had one special friend when I got able to walk down the streets to settle some small bills. I was due to draw a black line through the account. I said John you owe me nothing. Now if you want to know who he is just ask me don't ask him. I am so glad to live as close as I did and if you don't believe I am your friend just ask me for a favor. I want to live to where the better I know you the better I love you.—

Yours,
J. W. CAGLE.

STATE FINANCE DEPT. MAILS TAX REPORT

Marking a new departure in the realm of State reports, a joint report of the Department of Finance and Revenue for the last fiscal year, entitled "Your Sales Tax Money—Where It Comes From and Where It Goes," has been received by the News. The report, which tells of the State's financial operations in a style that can be understood by the average citizen, attractively designed and illustrated, was sent to newspaper editors, county and city officials, schools and colleges, banks, legislators and leaders in civic organizations.

The report shows that of 1943 State tax collections totalling $59,602,669.78 nearly three-fifths, or 59.44 percent, was derived from various forms of sales taxes—gasoline, general sales, use tax and tobacco tax. Other tax sources included: Licenses, 12.52 percent; income tax, 11.57; ad valorem, 10.02; gross receipts, 4.40; and several minor items of less than 1 percent each.

Battle for Italy Grows in Intensity As Allies Close on Supply Routes; Pacific Sea Lanes to China Cleared By U. S. Triumph in Marshall Islands

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Italy—Captured German prisoners are marched through Anzio as bitter battle raged for Allied beachhead below Rome.

EUROPE:

Fight for Rome

In the coastal plains 18 miles below Rome, Allied and German forces locked in battle for the Eternal City, while farther to the south, Fifth army troops closed in on the supply lines feeding the enemy forces resisting doggedly in the Cassino area.

While fighting in Italy rose in fury, waves of Allied planes thundered over Europe, pounding the French coast along the English channel to soften the Nazis' concrete and steel defense emplacements and rip their network of air fields, on which they are counting to check invasion forces.

As fighting developed below Rome, the Nazis brought up heavy armored reinforcements to challenge the big Allied army operating along a 30 mile coastal stretch. Both sides threw swarms of planes at each other's supply lines, with the German force demonstrating in strength for the first time during the Italian campaign.

The Germans' hold on battle-scarred Cassino was shaken when Fifth army troops worked their way toward highways over which supplies were being fed to enemy forces hanging on near the town, key to the broad plain leading northward to Rome.

RUBBER:

U. S. Steps From Brazil

After two years of pioneering deep in the steaming Amazon jungle, the U. S. is pulling out of rubber growing there and leaving the job to Brazil, from whom this government will purchase the material for .60 a pound.

To help develop an accessible source of natural rubber after the Japanese overran the English and Dutch plantations in the east after Pearl Harbor, the U. S. decided to rebuild the industry in the Amazon basin, once the world's rubber capital and producer of the seed which was smuggled to the Orient for cheap cultivation there about half a century ago.

Since 1942, the U. S. spent large sums on recruiting workers for the steaming rubber districts, transporting them to the sites, and maintaining them there, with equipment, food and medicine. As a result, rubber cost per pound was supposed to have risen to anywhere from $1.22 to $50 a pound.

POST-OFFICE:

Profit Shown

A money-maker in the 12 months ending last June when it realized a profit of $1,332,849 for the first time in 24 years, the post office department is seeing red again during the current fiscal year.

Supplied by Postmaster Frank Walker to the house committee considering appropriations for the department for 1944-45, figures showed that during the 12 months ending last June, gross postal revenues totaled $968,277,288, of which $964,894,439 was expended. In addition, $122,343,000 of free service for soldiers and government agencies was rendered.

For the fiscal year 1944-45, the house committee recommended an appropriation of $1,105,897,583, an increase of $205,719,245 over the present year.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

HOUSING: Two million new homes will be needed immediately after the war to take care of married servicemen and families that have doubled up during the conflict. John Blanford, administrator of the National Housing agency, told the Associated General Contractors. Other new houses will be needed at the rate of 600,000 a year for replacements, he said.

PACIFIC:

China Bound

The Pacific sea lanes to China are being cleared by U. S. army and naval forces for a grand assault upon Japan from bases in that country, Admiral Chester Nimitz declared in reviewing the quick triumph in the Marshall Islands, where over 12,000 enemy troops were killed to the Americans' 1,000.

Revealing that U. S. policy was "to get our ground and air forces into China as early as possible" because "I do not believe we can defeat Japan from the sea alone," Admiral Nimitz said: "I believe the Japs can only be defeated from bases in China because they draw food, iron and other supplies from Manchuria and China, and as long as they have access to these they will be difficult to beat."

As Marine Commander Maj. Gen. Holland Smith's troops rung up Old Glory over the Marshalls, U. S. air forces again hammered the big Jap base at Rabaul on New Britain, going after airplanes from which enemy craft have been taking off to blast American ground units on the western end of the island.

MEAT SUPPLY:

Civilians Share

About 131 pounds of meat will be available to every person in the U. S. during 1944, and this supply might be increased if the government can spare stocks from its emergency reserves, the U. S. department of agriculture announced. Reviewing the meat situation, the department reported that a record 25,000,000,000 pounds may be produced in 1944, even though numbers of cattle, hogs and lamb on hand were about 15 per cent less than last year. The services, lend-lease and other U. S. agencies will get the 8 per cent increase.

Cattle and calf slaughter in recent weeks has been heavier than a year ago, and about 46 per cent of the animals now on feed are scheduled for marketing by April, the department said.

OIL:

Seek Arabian Reserves

To relieve the strain on U. S. petroleum supplies will be called upon to furnish the fuel to enable the country's military and naval forces to help maintain collective security in the postwar world, the federal government will co-operate with the Standard Oil Company of California, the Texas company and the Gulf Oil company in exploiting Arabian oil resources.

At a cost of approximately 150 million dollars, the government will build a 1,250 mile pipeline which will carry the crude from the companies' fields to the Mediterranean coast, with the companies repaying the principal cost plus interest within 25 years. The companies would maintain a crude oil reserve of 20 per cent of the total field for the government and sell to it below the market price.

Since the consent of Saudi Arabia and smaller Kuwait would be needed before work could start, Senator Moore (Okla.) said the agreement would amount to a treaty affecting relations between the peoples of the U. S. and the countries concerned, thus requiring senate approval.

CANNED MILK: Civilians will get slightly less condensed and evaporated milk this year than last, the War Food administration announced. An allotment of 1,740,000,000 pounds of evaporated, and 190,700,000 pounds of condensed milk has been made from stock estimated at 3,562,200,000 pounds total. Military supplies were increased to 839,800,000 pounds.

GRAIN STOCKS:

Rail Movements Spurt

With farmers anxious to move grain and fertilizer before the planting season and box cars being diverted to haul in Canadian feed, rail facilities for the rural regions are tightening up. Further strain on rail transport looms with Great Lakes shippers asking for early movement of grains now aboard vessels in storage so that they can begin operations in the spring.

While tightening of the rail situation was announced, it was also revealed that the Commodity Credit corporation's total wheat stocks at the end of January amounted to 87 million bushels, and corn supplies to only 1 million bushels, reflecting the big pinch in this commodity.

Since July, 1943, CCC purchased 146 million bushels of wheat, of which 75 million bushels were Canadian. Since July, CCC wheat sales aggregated 230 million bushels.

RUSSIA:

Nip Threat

Believed to be the spring board for future German operations in the southern Ukraine, the Nazi-held manganese center of Nikolai came under heavy fire of Russian forces driving in from the east.

The Germans' position at Nikolai was their farthest extension eastward in Russia, following their withdrawal from the whole 800 mile front, and with a similar eastward bulge further to the north, was seen as a possible prong for a gigantic Nazi pincer movement against the back of the Red armies far inside pre-war Poland.

In the Baltic region to the north, the Russ pressed forward below Leningrad, and continued heavy attacks farther to the south between the Pripiet and Berezina rivers, where a break-through would enable them to loop the entire German army heavily engaged in the Baltic states.

VETS:

Discharged Redrafted

Discharged vets who have fully recovered from battle wounds and can meet the physical requirements of the services are being redrafted in accordance with selective service regulations, but not for overseas duty.

In striving to meet its tremendous manpower needs, the army also has advised commanders to check men thoroughly in the light of lowered physical standards before discharging them. Many disabilities on which men formerly were released are no longer recognized, it was said.

Aware of the redrafting of vets, the army has ordered restoration of their old ranks.

Get-rich-quickers are enjoying a field day in the Chungking, China, black market, where beef is selling at $2.50 for 1.33 lbs.; eggs at 35c apiece, and fish $10 for 1.33 lbs.

Driving past WAC quarters in Algiers, North Africa, one night, Col. Oveta Hobby and Company Commander Maj. Wesley Wright stopped to look at a couple in a log outside behind a tree outside the grounds. There's nothing wrong in a WAC kissing her friend good night, Maj. Battle said afterwards, but she must do it inside the company grounds.

California's Senator Sheridan Downey received this postcard from a state constituent trying to fill out his income tax report:

"My Dear Senator: 'I hope you roast a thousand years in hell for each minute I put in this federal income tax report.'
"Frank Warren."

TRUCK RATES:

Urge Competition

Such factors as competition with the railroads should be considered when formulating trucking rates, the Supreme court declared.

The high court took this position in disputing what it said was the Interstate Commerce commission's rule that lower rates for shipments by motor carrier were justified only when a reduction in operating costs is achieved.

"Each form of transportation presents its own problems for the function of rate making," the court said. "Hence in such situations, principles previously established for application with a single form of transportation cannot always be transplanted without consequence unduly harmful."

As an example, the court pointed out that by tying rates to weights, a railroad with 30,000 pounds would have a great competitive advantage over a truck, for instance, with 20,000 pounds.

SHOES

As shoe rationing enters its second year, CFA officials stated that there will be about 25 million pairs of footwear available a month same as in 1943. That means about 2½ pairs per person a year, or one pair every 21 weeks. The lesser shoe situation, said, and army needs are increasing, officials commented.

Stamp No. 1 in Book Three (the airplane stamp) will remain valid until May 1, and No. 18 in the first book will remain good indefinitely.

Star Dust

By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE talented folk responsible for the Inner Sanctum thrillers (Saturday evenings, CBS) are hoping the police won't think they're prophets. A while ago their weekly sketch was called "The Candestick Murders"—a few days later one of New York's most shocking murders took place, when a young woman was killed with a candlestick. Soon afterward the city was horrified when many of the pigeons that fly about St. Patrick's cathedral (near the CBS studio) were poisoned—that week the Inner Sanctum mystery was "The Bird of Doom," and had Laird Cregar, of the movies, poisoning pigeons. It begins to look as if somebody around there had a crystal ball.

A large amount of money, time and labor was spent on the dream sequences of "Lady in the Dark," but they couldn't possibly be loved or more dreamlike than those in the Claudette Colbert-Fred Mac

FRED MACMURRAY

Murray "No Time for Love." That hilarious comedy bears a striking resemblance to the story of the Ginger Rogers picture, and deserves to be rated among the year's top productions.

At the suggestion of Bette Davis, star of the picture, Warner Bros. have changed the name of Douglas Drake to Johnny Mitchell, the name of the character he plays in "Mr. Skeffington." Gig Young also was named from a film character, his role in "The Gay Sisters."

On Broadway service men stand in line to get into "Destination Tokyo," along with the rest of the public. The picture was just as popular during its recent one-week run at the Mare Island naval hospital, San Francisco. Because many patients could not be moved to the hospital theater, a 16-mm. print was screened in wards and sick rooms.

"The Song of Bernadette" is an impressive picture; it was done beautifully, reverently, with dignity. Jennifer Jones, new to the screen, seems to have been perfectly cast as the heroine; many of the best actors and actresses in the theater and the motion pictures are in the cast, and all have given their best.

Paramount had a problem in "The Uninvited." The star-spangled cast includes Ray Milland, Ruth Hussey, Donald Crisp and Gail Russell. But there had to be an unseen actor who moans and weeps brokenheartedly in the night, filling the hearts of you and me and the rest of the audience with cold terror. She's the ghost of a Spanish gypsy girl. Betty Farrington, character actress, got the role.

Quite a deal, the one by which RKO will release the star-studded product of the new International Pictures, Inc., representing one of the strongest independent organizations of producers, writers, directors and stars in Hollywood. Lined up are Gary Cooper, Sonja Henie, Edward G. Robinson, Teresa Wright, Dinah Shore, Frank Morgan, and other headliners. The first picture will be "Casanova Brown," costarring Gary Cooper and Teresa Wright.

Compromise Forecast in Debate on CCC Extension

Labor to Use Organized Strength to Fight Increased Prices; Administration is Counting on That Support.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

A few weeks ago, an earnest and agreeable young man came to my office from the American Farm Bureau federation. His name is Ben Kilgore. He is a Kentucky Farm Bureau man, a former farm paper editor who has just been put in charge of the bureau's publicity here in Washington. He said as a result of some remarks without any bark on them which Chester Davis, former war food administrator and president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, made at the recent bureau convention.

Davis did not say that the bureau and some other farm organizations were interfering with the war effort and trying to be hogish by fighting for higher food prices but he did say that the people of the country were beginning to talk that way about farmers. And he told the organization members that if they weren't in Washington, they were being had better begin telling the people of the country so.

And so the bureau went out for some "new blood." Kilgore is not new to the farm bureau but he is new to Washington. He has served in Kentucky. He knows his subject and can write about it.

I couldn't say whether he has brightened the grim picture which Mr. Davis painted to the bureau—he has hardly had time—but his presence is evidence of dynamism which are energizing this chip of the farm bloc—or one might put it the other way, for the Farm Bureau federation is really the talk that was the congressional action.

And soon action will begin, for the grace extended to the Commodity Credit corporation expires February 17 and then the fight over the subsidies begins in earnest.

The Federation 'Line'

What the publicity plans of the farm organization are, I do not know, but the "line" as Kilgore expressed it to me.

"The American Farm Bureau federation is not opposing consumer subsidies in general, but it's down the price control and obtain higher farm prices. The present general farm price level is high enough. All we ask is for a few sensible price adjustments on specific commodities. Such small and specific adjustments are far more practical and wholesome than a billion or more dollars out of the federal treasury to help pay the consumers grocery bill and to subsidize and socialize the farmers of this nation."

The War Food administration, charged with carrying out the war farm program, has no publicity plan. As a matter of fact, the office of Administrator Jones is about the quietest place in Washington as far as the public goes. Its work is carried on without press agentry right now.

One reason why we don't hear much from the war food administrator right now is because the food situation is pretty good. Of course, there is wrangling about prices but that isn't in the forefront. The last week in January he announced his support prices which can't be carried out unless the three billion dollar agency that keeps floors from farm prices, the Commodity Credit corporation, is continued. Jones made it plain that the 1944 program depended entirely on congressional action. In reply to a question, he said it could be carried out "without subsidies."

There isn't any question that congress will favor the support plan. That's accepted as essential in wartime and sometimes welcomed at times. The reasoning is that you don't ask a nation's maker to sign a contract to deliver machine guns without telling him what the price will be. In order to carry out the farm program, you have to demand certain things from the farmer in order to get the things want. Hence the guaranteed price.

But subsidies are a horse of a different color. Support prices protect the producer. Subsidies protect the consumer. Without them, the price ceilings crash.

Farm income has risen 116 per cent in dollars since 1939 when the war in Europe began. During the last war, it rose steadily, 128 per cent. However, there is a catch in those figures. In the last war, the farmer's debt was only 13 cents in purchasing power. Today, the farmer's income has risen 72 per cent in terms of purchasing power.

Preliminary Report

Just what is ahead? On or before February 17, debate will begin on the bill extending the life of the Commodity Credit corporation containing an anti-subsidy provision.

Meanwhile, the farm bloc adherents and supporters will probably carry on a pretty good publicity plan for their side and some of the consumer groups will be heard from. Labor will shout the loudest and most effectively. But that is simply because it is a large and a well-organized group. It is a strange thing, but America, which has organizations of almost every kind and description formed largely for increasing the income of its members, has very few organizations formed for the purpose of decreasing their income.

There are, of course, a few cooperatives but they are hardly more than local affairs and, comparatively speaking, small and weak. This is due to the cheerful American theory that if you haven't got enough money to pay your expenses, you ought to go out and get some more money.

In any case, labor (although organized) is not getting more pay. It is going to use its organized strength to fight higher prices and the administration is at present counting on enough support from the labor lobby itself, the results of the publicity campaign on the general public, to sustain a presidential veto of any measure banning subsidies. There is no sign of enough votes to prevent the passage of the bill, but there are aspects to sustain the veto. So that legislative process will have to be gone through with the farm bloc feels it has an accurate measure of the administration's strength, as revealed at the various test votes, so that it can compromise without going through the veto process. Either way, some kind of a compromise will undoubtedly be reached.

But the way is a weary one.

Preview of Invasion Tactics

With invasion in the offing I decided I wanted a preview. A little difficult to arrange, I admit. I know, however, that you could see a full rehearsal at the amphitheater base at Fort Pierce, Fla. That institution has been cloaked in the darkest secrecy until recently. Just before the base celebrated its anniversary I was allowed to look behind the scenes.

No details can be reported of this revolutionary development in American military history that started fresh from zero.

For almost a full week I watched and, in some cases, worked with the men who make "amphibious action" possible—those who go over the transport side into the landing beach, the men who observe and the men who see that they get there, from scouts and raiders who slip in at night, crawling through the wash of a strange beach to throttle the sentries and clear the way for the others, to the last of the reserves.

I have never met a finer type of man, soldier or marine, and they are all three—army, navy, coast guard, and the engineers, the seabees, the medics, scouts, and the other specialists. Cooperation is the key to the greatest achievement in amphibious action—army and navy working together as one. It is a navy operation right up to the tide water mark, where the army takes command, but a closely interwoven texture, as much a single unit as a fighting division of land troops or a navy task force.

I talked with their leaders, tough, cool, young men who have learned by doing—they know what it is to land on a strange shore in Africa or Sicily or the Pacific. They are a great lot—the scouts and raiders and the commandos, some big, some little, some college athletes, some from farm and factory, but all hard, wiry, certain, and anxious for more action.

Wood is being taken from the forests at the rate of about 13,000,000 cubic feet per year, of which 2,000,000 cubic feet is lost due to fire, insects, and disease. If these destroyers could be controlled, present wood growth would almost balance wood use.

JESUS TEACHES TRUE GREATNESS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:33-39; 10:13-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.—Mark 10:45.

Ambition to be great is not wrong—provided one has a proper conception of greatness, and seeks it in a right way. Every one of us should be our very best, not for selfish ambition, but for God's glory.

The disciple was earnest and eager to have a place of honor with the Lord in glory, but even in that holy purpose they became selfish and argumentative. Jesus gives several instances of a truly great man.

Greatness means reigning.—I. Not First, but Last (9:33-35).

The way of the world is to seek the place of "No. 1 man" to be looked up to, honored, and served by the place of a servant; and to do so. God regards that as the first place.

It is not a question of timid diffidence, or self-effacement, but a willingness to take the humble place in order to serve all.

II. Not Proud, but Humble (9:36, 37).

"Great" people of this world have no time for children. Let them be cared for by servants, teachers, anyone at all, but not by their "disciples" or church members.

But Jesus said that the one who set aside human pride and received a child with humility of heart and mind—and in His name—received the Lord who gave them life—spiritual life, and a servant, and to be interested in them; in fact, He is with them and hence when we receive them in His name, He is there!

III. Not Exclusive, but Co-operative (9:38, 39).

Who can apprehend spiritual truth, saw in the teaching of Christ concerning the little child the condemnation of something he had done.

The man who casts out demons, who keeps the disciple of Jesus a cup of water, in His name—that is, with true faith in Christ, and in His power, and for His glory—must be a believer. He may not belong to our church or church, but he must speak our language, he may not use our methods, but if he is serving Christ we should not forbid him or speak evil of him. You and I may not like some of his appearance, his voice, or methods, but let us love and co-operate with one another for Christ's sake!

IV. Not Important, but Approachable (10:13-16).

Some who think they are great, pride themselves on being hard to reach—protected from the rabble and their problems by secretaries and servants.

The disciples had built up such an idea of the importance of Christ in their own minds. He had never given them any ground for it either by word or deed.

So the man who is truly great follows in the footsteps of Jesus. He is approachable, kind, has time for simple folk and little children. If that isn't true of a man he is not great—no matter what he may think of himself or what others may say about him.

V. Not a Supervisor, but a Servant (10:42-44).

Christianity is not organized after the manner of secular government (v. 42). Much of the mischief that has come to pass in the church is the result of "running the church" as an organization, when it should be allowed to develop as a living organism.

The way up is down. That is always true in the spiritual realm. The Son of man came not to be ministered unto but to minister, yes, to give His very life (v. 45). Shall not those who bear His name walk the same path of humble self-denial? Anyone who observes with eyes a little clear knows that the church of Jesus Christ is hindered most seriously by the presence of pride and selfish ambition. Some people will not work unless they can rule.

Are there then, Christians, who humbly serve the Lord? Yes, praise His name, there are many, and wherever they are found they are the salt of the earth.

VI. Not Unselfish, but Sacrificial (10:45).

The world is full of people who want to be served. Their little personalities swell with pride and pleasure if someone else cringes and bows, and serves.

There is nothing commendable about being served. The great and good thing is to serve.

The Son of man—Himself the Lord of glory, the One who might have called legions of angels to do His bidding—came to be ministered unto but to minister. That service meant going about doing good even when He was exhausted and worn. But it meant far more than that, for it took Him to the cross where He gave His life for the redemption of us. Are we ready to learn of Him?

Who's News This Week

By Delos Wheeler Lovelace

Consolidated Features—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—The name of Napoleon Zervas keeps coming into the news that is relayed from Greece, and he may be the leader around whom his people may rise to be Greek Tito Broz Nazi invaders try to retreat up the Valley of the Vardar, down which they marched in such easy triumph a while back.

Just now, as long ago in Yugoslavia, there has been a split among the Greek partisans and Zervas has just broken away from the oldest guerrilla forces to set up his own movement. He calls it the National Andartes and hopes to keep his members free from the bribery which, he says, taints the old group.

Allied leaders in the Middle East call Zervas Greece's ablest guerrilla leader. Before the war he was an officer of the regular army. Now he calls himself "General Zervas" but whether he uses this title on more than his own authority is not clear. He is old enough to have been a general.

His present fight against the Nazis is being waged in the northwestern province of Epirus. This is his home and his birthplace. He knows every dim trail over its wild mountains as well as the secret of the Tennessee hills. Every tree, every rock is a friendly shield, and every small village a fortress with a hundred sally-ports out of which to attack or... when the enemy presses hard... escape to fight again when the odds have evened.

SINATRA fans from coast to coast are rising to defend their idol against the cast by Artur Rodzinski. Older and soberer and more eminent.

Rodzinski Takes folk, too, on Sinatra; Winner Not as Yet Called

Who can apprehend spiritual truth, saw in the teaching of Christ concerning the little child the condemnation of something he had done.

Certainly he has courage. The smoke caused by his quarrel with dismissed New York musicians has just started getting in his eyes, and now he takes on the embattled "teen agers. The man positively enjoys squaring off for a fight.

Of course age doesn't have to worry him yet. He was born in Spalato, Dalmatia, 58 years ago. And if he needs legal aid in his squabbles, it's right in his own head... or ought to be. To please his father he got a law degree at the University of Vienna as well as a doctorate at the Vienna Academy of Music. He began as conductor of the chorus at Lwow; he went on to Vienna, where he was the U. S. at Stokowski's invitation to be assistant director of the Philadelphia orchestra. This was in 1926.

He isn't the long hair that Sinatra calls him although he has an ample pompadour. He has a tall virile figure, straight-backed, lively eyes, and quick likeable grin. His manner on the podium is matter-of-fact but he has plenty of temperament, as all know who listen in Carnegie Hall and over the roaring air waves.

THE seldom-heralded earl of Selborne (Roundell Cecil Palmer) reports that Germany cannot hold out much longer, and the announcement is significant as one would be expected to hear of the earl of shattered Nazi corps. Selborne is Britain's minister of economic warfare and it is his business to keep tabs as much on Germany's resources as upon those of his own country. If he didn't know what bombings and the blockade and sabotage were doing to his enemy's stockpiles, he would hardly know how high to keep his own for victory.

He is a rock-ribbed conservative, but held in his estimates of Germany's staying power. He knew that Hitler's best men have been killed in battle, and he knows that this has weakened Hitler's fortress, and how the bombings have weakened it, and the lack of oil, and the lack of food. He doesn't say just when the break through will come, but his guess ought to be good.

The Selborne earldom is not old. It dates back only 62 years or so, but this is the third head of the house to have an important, though unobtrusive finger in his country's problems. The first earl gave sound legal advice to Prime Minister Palmerston in troublesome matters arising out of the American Civil war. The second earl, as high commissioner for South Africa, helped build the Union now standing loyally with the mother country. And the present earl has been directing matters of economic warfare three years.

FACING THE biggest food production job of time, you will need every pound of soda you can get. It is coming in faster and, while there are still the big problem, there is reason to believe there will be enough for every essential requirement.

1,000,000 tons of natural Chilean nitrate—the tonnage U. S. farmers used last year—properly applied, would produce 25,000,000 bu. of oats or 100,000,000 bu. of wheat; 125,000,000 bu. of corn or 4,800,000 tons of forage crops; 6,000,000 tons of vegetables, or 2,500,000 bales of cotton and 1,100,000 tons of cotton seed.

These figures show why farmers need all the Chilean Soda they can get to smash '44 goals and make Victory sure!

EVERY EXTRA CORD OF PULPWOOD BRINGS VICTORY NEARER

Right now one of the critical war-material shortages is pulpwood. And this shortage can be overcome. There is plenty of pulpwood to be cut. The woods are full of it. The only problem is to get it cut.

Cutting Pulpwood Is An Essential War Job

If you are in a position to get out some pulpwood—and every cord helps—you can contribute that much to an early victory and be well paid for your work. The nation looks to you for help! For information, ask your local pulpwood committee.

The Promise of Tomorrow

We do not know what tomorrow will bring.

We have never known.

We do, however, have faith in the future of Alabama. While at present our efforts are devoted chiefly toward doing those things necessary to support the war effort, we are not losing sight of the fact that some day the war will end. So some of our time is devoted to studying the possibilities for future industrial and agricultural development in Alabama.

It is our intention, at war's end, to intensify our efforts to help bring about in Alabama further broadening of industries so that more and more young men and women may find agreeable employment near home.

I was already doin' my damndest to hold the bus at 35, which is tough when those land cruisers are built to steam at about 45 knots. The new speed limit cramps your style as well as mine. CONCERNING M. LOCKHART'S MANUSCRIPT IN PARTNERSHIP WITH GOD

I want the public to know that the piece he wrote in his book, (so called Partnership with God) that should have been called partnership with Satan. About James Brown who has been dead five years is all untrue. James did not threaten him but he did stop Malcolm on the street on Saturday to ask him about some thing he had been telling that was not true and it ended up in a quarrel, but he only told him what he was.

And he need not boast about conducting his funeral because he was not wanted to do so. The preacher we sent for was teaching school and the one that went for him didn't think that he could come, so he went by to get Lockhart without the family knowing about it. And it was so close to the time set for the funeral until we didn't cause no disturbance about it.

But James had plenty of friends that wanted to ask him not to say anything. The things he said about James father in his book, is also untrue. I don't think that God approves of him criticizing people like he has in that book. I believe God would consider him more of a partner if he would stop being a hypocrit and criticizing his neighbors. If he would read his Bible he will find that it says, "Judge Not, Unless Thy Be Judged." And I do believe James had more friends than Lockhart does because he would do a favor for anyone. I don't think he made any friends by publishing that piece that hurt a good mother and father so deeply—Annie Brown, Clanton Route One. 9-11p

The Advantages Of A Whole Market In Chilton County

The following suggestions are the eight points recommended by the Alabama Extension Dairy Department and Dairy Manufacturers for increasing dairy products production in 1944.

Last year milk production goals for the war effort were reached. Study the eight point program given below. Chilton County can exceed its goal in 1944.

1. Grow legume hay.
2. Fertilize your pastures.
3. Have temporary pastures.
4. Give cows 2-month dry period.
5. Feed according to production.
6. Milk more cows.
7. Breed to registered bulls.
8. Use methods to get high quality products.

FACING THE biggest food production job of all time, you will need every pound of soda you can get. It is coming in faster and, while ships are still the big problem, there is reason to believe there will be enough for every essential requirement.

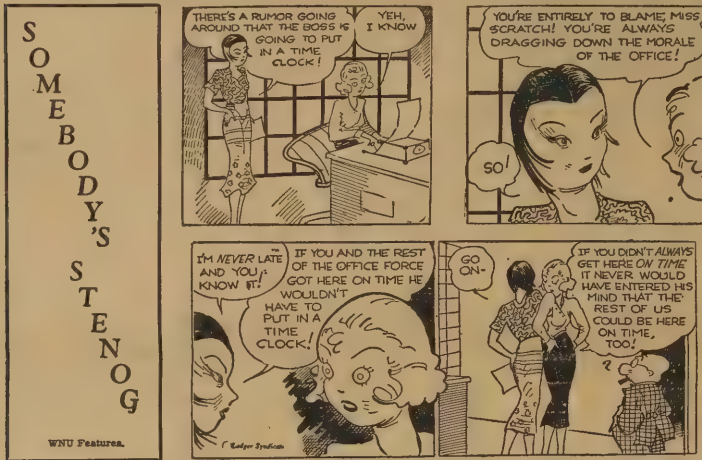

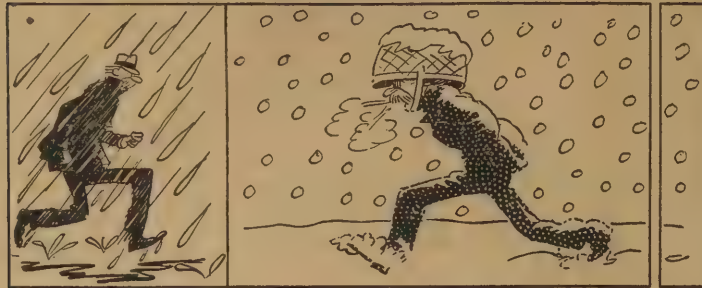

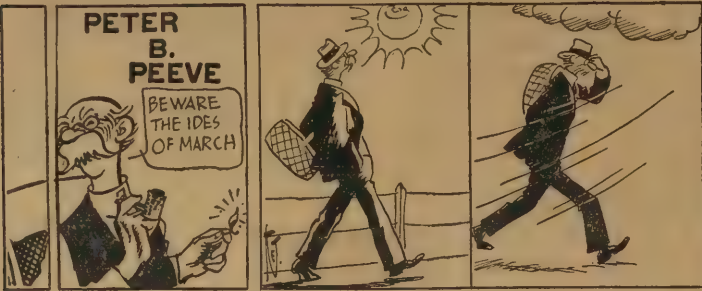

1,000,000 tons of natural Chilean nitrate—the tonnage U. S. farmers used last year—properly applied, would produce 250,000,000 bu. of oats or 100,000,000 bu. of wheat; 125,000,000 bu. of corn or 4,800,000 tons of forage crops; 8,000,000 tons of vegetables, or 2,500,000 bales of cotton and 1,100,000 tons of cotton seed.

These figures show why farmers need all the Chilean Soda they can get to smash '44 goals and help make Victory sure!

"Guest?" replied the plainly dressed one. "Heck no! I'm paying five dollars a day here."

Keep to Low Point Foods on Lunches
(See Recipes Below.)

Luncheon Aids

If you don't have the points for traditional staples to make up the children's mid-day lunches, then glance over the suggestions I'm giving you today. They're low on points, good on nourishment and high in health-giving vitamins and minerals.

Homemakers with growing children who must feed them at home during lunch, and then feed a very hungry husband at dinner, frequently find themselves low on points for these two important meals. They must be well balanced and satisfying or the family will suffer in days lost at school or at work and that's sabotage on the home front.

Sandwiches are an old standby and children look forward to them. To give a well-balanced lunch, they should be served with soups or salads.

It is smart to save bits of leftover vegetables from dinner, even if they amount to only a quarter of a cup, and then to use them for a soup for luncheon the next day. Think of the colorful soups that you can create from green peas, spinach and carrots. And as for nutrition, that's there in vegetables without saying!

Creamed Soup.
(Leftover Vegetables)
(Serves 4)

- 1/4 cup pulp (onions, carrots, celery, peas, string beans or lima beans)
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 2 tablespoons butter or substitute
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 2 cups milk

Add milk and seasonings to vegetable pulp. Blend butter with flour and add to milk and vegetable pulp. Bring to a boil and cook slowly for 4 minutes.

*Cream of Corn Soup.
(Serves 6)

- 2 cups corn (canned or leftover)
- 2 cups boiling water
- 2 cups milk
- 1 slice onion
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- Salt and pepper

Place corn, boiling water, milk and onion in a saucepan. Simmer for 20 minutes. Rub through a sieve. Brown flour and butter together. Stir in corn mixture. Simmer 5 minutes. Serve very hot.

When making sandwiches, there's a tendency to fall into the same pattern and create real monotony. New ideas can quickly pep up lunches whether they're at home or in the lunch box. It's easy to achieve variety if you use low-point cream cheese or some of the wedge-cuts flavored with pimiento, relish and chives. These furnish nutritious butter fat too, and you can take it easy on butter for spreading:

Lynn Says

Escort Ideas: The little things you do for food are as important as the big things you do for them in cooking correctly. For example, the bread pudding may be good, but it will be better with a spoonful of spicy apple butter on top, or a dab of grape jelly.
Make your meat casseroles interesting by leaving the vegetables in larger pieces. When you make a biscuit topping, use different types of cutters for biscuit dough—hatchets, diamonds, cloverleafs, etc.
Apple slices fried in bacon add fragrance to your kitchen, and have that hard-to-resist flavor when served with old fashioned griddle cakes.

Save Those Used Fats:
Take Them To Your Butcher.

Cream the cheese until soft. Add nuts, lemon juice and salt. Spread between slices of bread.

The other half of the wedge can be mixed with 2 tablespoons of lemon juice and pulp and 2 tablespoons of finely chopped nuts. This will give 1/4 cup of sandwich spread.

Devised Cheese Sandwich Spread.
1/4 pound mild cream cheese
1 small onion
3 canned pimientos

- 1 tablespoon butter
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, minced
- 1/4 pound liver
- 1/4 cup cream

Cottage Cheese Spread.

- 1 cup well-seasoned cottage cheese
- 1 cup finely chopped peanuts
- 1 tablespoon mayonnaise
- 1/4 teaspoon salt

Combine all ingredients. Use either white bread or Boston brown bread.

Cheese and Dried Beef Spread.

- 1/4 pound American cheese
- 1/4 cup drained canned tomatoes
- 1/4 cup butter or substitute
- 1/4 pound dried beef, chopped

Melt cheese in top of double boiler. Add tomatoes gradually, stirring occasionally. Add butter and mix well. Store in refrigerator.

Chopped Meat Spread.

- 1 cup leftover meat, chopped
- 1 teaspoon mustard
- 2 finely chopped hard-cooked eggs
- Chopped pickle or vinegar
- Mayonnaise to moisten

Mix all together. Spread generously on buttered bread.

A fruit salad all quivery and delectable with fruit makes a perfect foil for a sandwich luncheon and gives your menu plenty of variety:

*Date and Orange Salad.
(Serves 4)

- 1 package orange-flavored gelatin
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1/4 cup cold water
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 12 pitted dates, quartered
- 2 oranges, sectioned
- Lettuce
- Salad dressing

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add cold water and lemon juice and chill to the consistency of thick syrup. Fold in dates and orange sections. Pour into lightly oiled mold and chill until firm. Serve on lettuce with salad dressing mixed with lemon or orange juice, or both.

ancing Russians a Problem for Finns

Russian armies continue to advance in the face of desperate German resistance, the diplomatic situation in Finland is tense. Russia and Finland are still, technically, at war. Finland is faced with the alternative of capitulating on Russia's terms, or possible disaster if the little country becomes a battleground for the opposing Red and Nazi armies. As a result, for peace Russia has been reported as insisting that the Finns should accept the escape of Nazi divisions in Finland.

Who's News This Week

By Delos Wheeler Lovelace

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—Little bespectacled Henry Pu-yi, puppet emperor of the Jap-bolstered realm of Manchukuo, passed his 36th birthday in what the Tokyo radio described as the "best of health," and it begins to look as if the historians would credit him with at least a decade in office. He'll reach the 10th milestone early in March. His two previous tries were much briefer.

Son of Prince Chun Wang, younger brother of Kwang Sun, former Manchukuo emperor of the Chinese, Henry first found himself in the role of ruler when he was only four years old. The throne was that of all China that time. The Dowager Empress Tzu Hsi was his backer then, and she smuggled the frail boy into the palace and into office one dark night. Her coup held good until China became a republic in 1912. Then Henry lost his job. He regained it fleetingly in 1917, but then the Chinese said "no" for keeps.

Things weren't too bad for him, though, even after that. He studied the palace to live in and a nice fat income to live on. When Marshal Feng seized Peking, now Peiping, all that ended. That was in 1924 and Henry fled straight to the Japs.

Both Henry and his beautiful wife once learned to converse in English. If anyone has ever told him that the first 10 years are the hardest, he probably is skeptical today. Or maybe the Japs haven't let him know about what happened in the Marshalls.

IN THE last great war comforting statistics came alive among Americans newly arrived in France to do their share in the heavy fighting of the Survival Chances summer and Of Wounded Have autumn of Been Up 4% 1918. No one bothered to trace their source, at least no one known in this corner. Everyone was glad to take them, as was, because of their reassuring conclusion that, even though you were wounded, the chances were 93 out of 100 that you would live to flash your wound stripe back home.

Now here is practically the same percentage on the official word of Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, surgeon general of the army. He says that in the last war 74 per cent of our wounded died. He mentions the figure to emphasize how much better off the wounded are in this war. Only 3 per cent die now.

The general has commanded the army's doctors since last June. He reached that ultimate goal of all commissions in his corps after 30 years of service. Fifty-six now, born a Marylander, he was graduated from the State University of Maryland and made a first lieutenant in 1913. Like most good doctors he follows the advice he gives all patients and controls his weight.

His special field is surgery with a particular leaning toward orthopedics. And he should be a handy man to have around these times since many of the 97 who survive out of every hundred wounded will be greatly helped by operative reconstruction of hurt joints and bones and tendons.

THE Reds destroy Old Russia's myths, but a thousand years from now new ones will crop up, and one maybe will center upon the lively, hard-drinking Marshal Already Peasants Vow That Budenny Is Supernatural Semeon Mikhalevich Budenny, who certainly does not lessen his chance of immortality by presenting to Stalingrad the historic sword sent by Britain's King George. It seems to be a little more than human in him to have risen from a cavalry sergeant major under the czar, surviving all the purges of the revolution to become one of the Soviet's best loved national heroes.

Budenny is 68 now, a stocky, black-eyed comrade whose stories are endless and whose enormous moustaches spread under his broad nose like wings. He is a Don Cossack and in the town of the revolution his war cry was, "Proletarians! To Horse!" Born a peasant he fought the Japs in his youth and had grown into an old professional soldier when the Bolsheviks came along. He joined them.

His wife also joined them; but when she accidentally killed herself while cleaning a rifle, he swore that he never again would marry a soldier. So he took an actress for his second wife, but she is a helpmeet, too, and tutored him through the Moscow Military academy from which he graduated with honors 13 years ago.

Besides the people's approval he has been honored, among them the Order of Lenin, the Order of the Red Star (received four times), and at least one town has been named for him.

Now, when every patriotic citizen is doing about all he can for the war effort, no one has the time to ramble around and gather up the news. So, we are inviting you to be your own reporter for the News.

We want to know of any interesting happenings of your community—when your boy was home on furlough; when he had a promotion; what branch of the service he is in; when he lands safely over seas, and anything else that you can tell us that would be news.

We want to know about you and your neighbors, your school and your church. We want to report your serious illnesses, your deaths and your births.

We can only do this if you help us. Each week a larger number of readers are helping in this way. Won't you join the group? Often a penny postal card is enough. And—remember—each bit of news carries a bit of home to nearly 500 homesick boys all over the world, each week.

BANKHEAD RECEIVES LETTER OF THANKS—

Hon. John H. Bankhead
United States Senate
Washington, D. C.

My dear Senator Bankhead:

On behalf of the millions of farmers who are members of our organizations, we wish to express deep appreciation to you for your able and brilliant leadership in behalf of the Bankhead-Stegall bill, continuing the Commodity Credit Corporation and prohibiting consumer subsidies in lieu of fair prices.

Your valiant, unwavering leadership and the constructive actions taken by the Congress on this vital issue have given inspiration and courage to farmers throughout the Nation to carry on their titanic task of producing record food supplies, despite the many handicaps confronting them.

The great mass of American farm people are behind you in this crucial struggle to safeguard not only agriculture, but the Nation, against an unwarranted, unnecessary, and dangerous system of consumer subsidies, which would open the flood-gates of inflation, wreck the faith of the rank and file of our people in our dollar, and jeopardize the maintenance of our democratic form of government.

We believe that Congress, in rejecting this subsidy system, is reflecting the true sentiments of the great majority of the American people.

Assuring you of our continuing support on this fundamental issue, we are

FOLKS & THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Can't everybody go across To fight the lousy Hun, But all of us can come across With lots, and lots, of mon'. Contribute to your Red Cross. You'll find it lots of fun, The very dollar that you give May save somebody's son.

We heard on the street Saturday afternoon, while Tom McCord was auctioning off War Bonds, "That fellow shore has got ball-bearing tonsils."

Day after day more of our young wives go to far places to be with their soldier husbands while they are stationed on this side. We are just wondering how many of the couples will come back home to Clanton and how many will make new friends and new acquaintances there, and when this war is over make their home in some other town or city. When the wife and kids are with a man, that place is home. When a man has his family with him, there are few ties to the "old town". We're glad to see the families reunited, but we also hope that when they finish this thing, they will all come back to Clanton to resume their interrupted lives.

Henry Yeager, a young deaf mute, was in to see us Saturday night. Henry is a fine looking young fellow and is in search of a job. He can drive a truck; lumber, coal, or what-have-you; and prefers it either here in Clanton or down at Montgomery. What with the shortage of help now, it looks like there ought to be plenty of places right here in Clanton that he would fit in nicely. In case you are interested in him, you may leave word here at this office and we will get in touch with him. And, oh yeah, he has had experience in dairy work, shoe shop, bakery, and painting, either with brush or sprayer.

Speaking of the morale of the American soldier in the South Pacific and their unflinching sense of humor, one returned soldier said that the boys were writing messages on the bombs before they were dropped. One of the boys must have had a brain storm when he wrote: "Have you heard this one,—It will kill you."

Of all the foolish and ridiculous mail that comes to a country editor's desk, we received the worse last week. It came direct from the Office of War Information at Washington and was a full 8 page newspaper in colors, supposedly sent out to aid newspapers in publicity on "prevent waste" drives but in reality, worth about as much to a weekly newspaper as a 1941 calendar—and not that much if the calendar has a pretty picture on it. The whole thing is a conglomeration of nothing, and to produce it, must have cost plenty. It's a wonder the newspapers have the fortitude to carry on the publicity they do in the face of such waste and extravagance.

Robert A. Seabourne and Marvin Marcus were in to see us the other day. Marvin is the high-knocker out at Gragg Field, and Seabourne is our new Civilian Instructor out there. He has had 16 years flying experience and about half of them instructing. He had been all over the country barn-storming when the war started and since that time has been instructing young eagles in Primary Training at Avon Park, Fla., and Jackson, Tenn. 64 of his boys are now in combat service. He and the wife will live out at the field. And, too, he's quite a parachutist. Has a dog that's a parachutist. We forgot to ask him if Mrs Seabourne was a parachutist.

This twin calf business seems contagious. Comes Felton Pierson, who lives on the Walter Popwell farm, with two more heifer calves to the one cow. Says Pierson, "The Lawd sho mus be on our side, givin us so many calves." Well, all we can say, the "Lawd" sho wasn't on the poor old cows side.

Lt Cecil Blow has received a promotion. We received a notice today from India where he is stationed and here is what it says:

"Somewhere in India,—Cecil Blow, 28, of Clanton, Ala., received notification one day this month that he had been promoted to a first lieutenant, and the next day he celebrated by going out and getting himself one Japanese aircraft "damaged" in action over Burma. Blow, whose wife lives at Clanton, was commissioned at Luke Field, Ariz, on Feb 6, 1943. He is a veteran of many missions with a fighter-bomber squadron "somewhere in India."

We told Cecil when he left to be sure and get one for us, and we hope that this one was it. We hope that this Japs Rising Sun has set, and Lt Blow did the setting.

Folks just don't see any interest in the war. We never have seen no voters so prone to see any are. Even in race, those opposed to the war would rather see just yet. All realize they knows more than an about the world situation and can guide us to a lasting peace, when the

Financial Statement

Dec. 31, 1943

BROWN-SERVICE INSURANCE CO., Inc.

HOME OFFICE BUILDING
Birmingham, Alabama

THE figures appearing in the financial statement on the following pages give a picture of a strong financial institution that is amply able to discharge its obligations to its policyholders. The charts indicate the satisfactory growth that the Company has experienced.

This financial statement and these charts, however, are not the whole story. They are only the last chapter in the book. If the other chapters were written they would tell the story of the service being rendered to our more than 900,000 policyholders by our more than 500 agents, superintendents and managers; they would tell the story of the satisfactory manner in which this Company has served, and is serving, the people of Alabama; they would tell the story of the more than 10,000 funerals provided in 1943 by funeral homes under the direction and supervision of this Company with the full cost of each funeral paid for from the proceeds of a funeral policy; they would tell the story of the satisfaction of beneficiaries with the way in which these funerals were handled. It is not possible to write these other chapters, but the concluding chapter as shown by the financial statement and by the charts is proof that Brown-Service Insurance Company is rendering a service that justifies the confidence and continued support of our people.

Sincerely yours,

Frank P. Langford

But now I need you, for a fight To fix things up and make 'em right So men can work and live and pray, In what we call the U. S. way. So I and millions left for war, To finish off this newest chore, Yet while we're gone, its in the mill, A few at home are out to kill Our right to exercise franchise, Through politics and even lies Designed to keep us from the polls, Though votin's done from deep fox holes.

But we have'nt beaten super Huns, With bayonets and planes and guns; We've beaten, too, the tricky Japs, Who thought all Yanks were braggin' saps.

These victories none can deny, Though each in turn caused some to die. An' GIs will never fail, No matter where the troopships sail. All liberties we will defend, At home, abroad, until the end; Then we will best the rats who say: You cannot vote election day.

GOVERNOR SPARKS URGES ALABAMA SCHOOLS TO RESUME COMPETITION

MONTGOMERY --- In an open letter to Dr. L. N. Duncan, president of Auburn, and Dr. Raymond R. Pate, president of the University of Alabama, Gov. Sparks has suggested that the two schools resume athletic relations severed nearly 40 years ago.

The last Auburn-Alabama football game, a 6-6 tie, was played in 1907. Rivalry between the two institutions was keen and feeling intense, resulting in cessation of athletic competition between them. In recent years the old feeling has largely vanished, and a tone of respect and friendship today marks relations between Alabama and Auburn, but suggestions for resumption of athletic relations have up to now produced no result.

ONE-THIRD FOURTEENS LESS THAN TWENTY-FOURS

Nearly one-third of all the babies born in Alabama in 1942 were born to young women between 20 and 24 years of age, inclusive, according to information received by the State Department of Health from the Bureau of the Census.

Births reported during the year totaled 71,136, and of this total 22,687 were to women who were more than 19 but less than 25 years of age, according to the Census Bureau statisticians.

Work shoes which constantly get wet with perspiration will not crack and rip if they are given an occasional oiling.

The total supply of the principal feed concentrates for the 1943-44 crop year is expected to be 169 million tons, or 2 per cent below the supply for the preceding year.

Allied Bombers Range Into Germany, Blasting Major Production Centers; Nazis Concentrate Armored Strength To Hammer at U. S. Beachhead Lines

WHAT THE GOVERNMENT OWNS

(PERCENTAGE OF PRODUCTION FACILITIES)

RECONVERSION:

First Steps

No sooner had Bernard Baruch submitted his report on postwar planning than President Roosevelt acted on two of the seven suggestions, establishing offices for the disposal of surplus war materials and the training and employment of veterans.

However, one of the most important recommendations dealing with quick settlement of canceled war contracts to give manufacturers, etc., working capital with which to switch back to civilian production, waited on congress, where Senators George (Ga.) and Murray (Mont.) introduced legislation on the matter.

Although reaction to Baruch's report generally was favorable, congress hit the President's speedy action on several of the recommendations, declaring he sought to place authority on disposal of surplus war goods and vets' readjustment in his own executive hands instead of agencies established by the house and senate.

CONGRESS:

Tax Veto

Having labored for months on the new $2,500,000,000 tax bill only to be spanked by President Roosevelt for their efforts because he claimed it failed to provide increased revenues in keeping with huge government war expenditures and offered certain industries unwarranted concessions, congress angrily considered repassage of the measure over PDR's veto.

In declaring that the bill failed to raise sufficient money, the President said that many quarters considered his request for even 10% dollar bills as too low. The President also objected to provisions of the measure favoring mineral producers, the lumber industry, natural gas pipeline and commercial air lines whose tax subsidy on air mail would be extended. The President also stood for a doubling of present social security rates.

Said Georgia's Sen. Walter George, chairman of the senate finance committee: "... I do not think it is right or just to increase individual rates. The greater part of the increase must of necessity fall on the so-called white collar class."

Subsidies Stick

With the President's veto of congress' anti-subsidy provision upheld by the house, the way appeared clear for final passage of a bill extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation until June, 1945, and continuing the CCC's subsidy program estimated to cost from 750 to 800 million dollars in 1944.

Although opposed to consumer subsidies during a period of record national income, congress favors the CCC's price-support of farm commodities, and so is expected to extend the agency's life to preserve this brace for agriculture. However, congress did turn down War Food Administrator Marvin Jones' bid for an additional 500 million dollars, to be used as an emergency price-support fund in case of a sudden end of hostilities.

In addition to CCC subsidies, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is expected to spend about 500 million dollars this year on "rollbacks" reducing retail prices for meat, butter and flour.

SECOND FRONT:

Bombing Prelude

Seeking to reduce maximum German opposition to U. S. and British invasion armies which will swing into Europe, the Allied air forces threw the full weight of their growing strength at Axis industry. Ranging far into Germany, RAF heavies blasted historic Leipzig's single-engine fighter plane factories and Bismarck's twin-engine aircraft plants, while swarms of U. S. Fortresses and Liberators pounded air frame and Focke-Wulf parts factories at Brunswick and Posen.

Third Round

With two heavy armored enemy assaults on the Allies' Anzio beachhead beaten off, U. S. and British troops girded themselves for a third and shorners of whirling, exploding shells which pockmarked their 100-square-mile holding.

To the southeast, bitter mountain to mountain fighting in the Cassino sector slowed, as both forces built up, recoiled in subsequent fierce counterattacks by U. S. and British tanks and infantry.

Back at the beachhead, the Germans concentrated armored strength for successive stabs into the Allies' lines, which gave way under the shock of the enemy's first charges, but recoiled in subsequent fierce counterattacks by U. S. and British tanks and infantry.

PACIFIC:

Tojo Sees Trouble

With Japan's outer ring of defenses crumbling and its own northern islands under bombs and shell-fire, hand-picked, respected Premier Hideki Tojo took over the job of chief of staff of the army and gave the position of navy chief to his cabinet member, Adm. Shigetarō Shimada.

In explaining the move, Tojo said: "At present, the empire is literally standing at the crossroads of a rise or fall. At this time the key to certain victory is to establish still closer relations between the high command and state affairs."

Even as Tojo spoke, U. S. air, naval and ground forces were clearing up Jap opposition on the far western Marshall Islands, within easy bombing range of the great Jap sea base of Truk, where Tojo admitted Yankee Adm. Chester Nimitz' fleet and air wing sank 18 ships and destroyed 125 aircraft in a sensational raid.

SPAIN:

U. S. Puts on Squeeze

In an effort to limit Gen. Francisco Franco's aid to Germany, the U. S., picking up where Britain left off, has been putting the squeeze on Spain by restricting trade between the two countries.

Although Franco has met the U. S. and Britain halfway by releasing all but two Italian vessels which had been tied up in Spanish ports and offering to limit shipments of war-vital wolfram to Germany, the U. S. announced that it will extend a ban against exports of oil to Spain through March, and will also discontinue any American citizen belonging to Franco's Falangist party, which is charged with advocating restoration of the old Spanish empire.

Franco

RUSSIA:

Ease Threat

With the vanguard of Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's First Ukrainian army deep inside of prewar Poland and German troops strung out far along his two flanks, the Russians sought to ease the threat to their own rear by whittling down the Nazis on the southern flank.

First major objective in the Reds' drive was the iron ore, copper and coal center of Krivoy Rog, meaning "Curved Horn," which the Germans overran in August, 1941, and wrecked before surrendering it to the Russ.

With the German lines holding in northern Estonia, the Russ shifted the weight of their attacks farther to the south, driving for Pskov, from which railway lines radiate throughout the Baltic states, offering the Nazis important arteries for reinforcements and supplies.

LIVING COSTS:

Attack Estimates

Pressing its argument against wage stabilization limiting wages to a 15 per cent increase over January, 1941, AFL-CIO officials joined to declare that actual living costs have risen 43 per cent since then and not 24 per cent, as claimed by the government's bureau of labor statistics.

Members of a special presidential committee investigating methods for estimating living costs, the labor officials said the bureau's figures are not accurate because they do not include the prices of many foods in their averages, and ignore upgrading, deterioration and the elimination of low-cost goods.

Although declining to comment until receiving the committee's full report, the President revealed that a previous impartial investigation showed that the bureau's figures were considered accurate for large cities, but failed to reflect varying costs in different parts of the country.

Advise Plow's the Thing

To plow or not to plow? If that's the question, Iowa State college advises farmers to plow until such a time as the problems of eroded fields and weed growth of sub-surface tillage can be solved.

Iowa State agronomists offered farmers their advice after five years of their own intensive experimentation, during which they found:

1. Plowed seed-beds produce high yields; it is easier to plant and cultivate corn on plowed ground, although machines have been manufactured which will operate through trash; weed control becomes difficult when crop residues are left on top and not plowed under.

Sub-tillage serves to conserve soil and water, the agronomists said, and offers possibilities for saving labor and costs.

OIL RESERVES:

Sufficient, Says Trade

Taking issue with Interior Secretary Harold Ickes' statement that America's proven oil reserves represented only a 14 years' supply, the American Petroleum Institute declared that even with wartime production to meet 70 per cent of the Allies' needs, there was only a decrease of 18% million barrels in total U. S. reserves in 1943.

As of December 31, 1943, U. S. reserves approximated 20 billion barrels, the Institute said, including 1,484,786,000 barrels added during the year through new discoveries and expansion of estimates of existing fields. Production in 1943 aggregated 1,503,427,000 barrels, thus leaving the deficiency of 18% million barrels of oil withdrawn without new replenishments of a similar amount.

Famous Pennsylvania Sun Oil-man J. Edgar Pew said: "... The oil industry with an adequate and fair price for its products, will be able to meet this nation's requirements... from these sources of supply for many generations to come."

BUTTER PRESERVER

Successful experiments with a complex organic acid have shown that it will keep butter, lard and cheese fresh ten times as long as is usual under present methods of preservation. A Chicago company is producing the acid for use by the armed forces. It is a crystalline extract from desert fungi, called "trichothololactic acid," abbreviated to "NDGA." The acid is tasteless and does not affect the color of the fats, but its presence prevents food from becoming rancid.

Washington Digest

Demobilization Committee Completes Initial Report

Congressional Group Provides for Action by Legislation Rather Than Executive Decree; Small Business Gets Break.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

At a recent White House press and radio conference, the President, in talking of certain measures he had recommended to benefit men and women leaving the armed service, explained that long before the demobilization of the fighting forces actually begins, many veterans are "demobilized" who, for military or other reasons, are returned to civil life. One million have already been discharged and the process continues, while others are being taken into the service.

To some degree this process is paralleled by other forms of demobilization and congress has realized that the machinery for reconverting the American economy to peacetime operation must be set up immediately. One group, a special committee on postwar economic policy and planning of which Senator George W. Norris has headed, has finished its first report which deals with "cancellation of war contracts, disposition and sale of surplus property and industrial demobilization and conversion."

Quite aside from the content of the report, the document is important for three reasons: First, it provides for action by legislation rather than by executive decree, and envisions a board whose first responsibility is to congress rather than to the Chief Executive. (An important step in returning to the natural processes of democracy interrupted by the war.)

Second, it has been written with a realization that in the re-shuffling of industry, small business must get a break. It is quite probable that Senator Murray, who has taken the lead in this subject and whose wings, will contribute considerably to the bill which will be introduced to implement the purpose of the report.

Non-Political Expert

Third, and very important, is the fact that the report was coordinated and probably largely written by a paid, non-political expert, hired out of the committee funds as its counsel. Similar assistance is always utilized by the tax committee where highly technical subjects are involved, and it has long been the feeling of Senator George and others that one of the great weaknesses of congressional procedure is the lack of expert staff assistance for this type of work. The coordination and collating of the information brought out in the hearings and the contributions of the various committees, and the facts and opinions resulting from the investigations and the special knowledge of the individual members.

As a small group of us newsmen and women sat in the committee-room and questioned Scott Russell, the counsel, we were impressed with his grasp of the subject and with the way he separated political opinion from the factual content and the interpretation of the various paragraphs as he read them over to us or we questioned him concerning them. Russell was a former district attorney in Georgia and he was also president of one of the largest businesses in the South, the Bibbs Manufacturing company. Gray-haired, but young looking, and vigorous, with an easy common-sense approach, Russell gave you the feeling he knew what he was talking about.

Business and Government

But regardless of the merits of this particular case, it seems to me rather significant that the thinking leaders in congress, of whom there are always many, realize the importance of getting (to use a somewhat showy expression in its best sense) "more business into government"—business in the sense of businesslike and efficient procedure, not the bias of any particular business.

I have gone into some detail in previous columns in regard to the importance of small business in the American economy. I will only say here that Senator Murray, although not a member of this committee, was called in for consultation, and undoubtedly a part of his legislative thinking will be incorporated into the bill which I imagine will be introduced before the session is adjourned. Already the giants are battling. Efforts are being made by the big manufacturers to assure themselves that when converted war industries resume their peacetime work, they will not be thrust into competition with prewar industries which can make the same product.

The report of this committee recognizes this danger and sets the need of handling the sale of surpluses in such a manner that they will not flood the market so that the regular producer will have to meet an unnatural competition.

The report of the committee visualizes the need of regulating such conditions and there are many which must, be foreseen and met.

I will not go into the details of the report which is a straightforward statement—he who runs may read it without encountering the usual "what-ifs" and the other impediments which many legal documents contain and which makes them quite safe from the danger of perusal by the layman.

Board Recommended

Briefly, a board is recommended. The President would appoint the administrator, subject to confirmation by the senate. The administrator would pick his own staff, not representatives of any group but men of special ability, fit to represent the United States as a whole, men chosen for their outstanding qualifications. The board would report to congress, a congressional committee would keep its eye on the reports and its members would sit in at the board meetings.

The board would not be an operating agency. It would be purely administrative, making use of the existing government agencies.

It would be called the Office of Demobilization. For the duration, it would be a subsidiary of the WPB; afterward, it would be supreme in its field.

The importance of this action, as far as the general public is concerned, is this: it represents one of the first steps of congress looking toward taking back its policy-making powers which, of necessity, have been delegated to the administrative branch and does so in a most vital field of endeavor. It is pointed out that these policy-making powers as applied to conversion may affect the economy of the nation for many years to come. For instance, as Russell put it in the interview—congress doesn't want any one man, or any one agency, to decide such vital issues as whether the government remains in the rubber making business, whether we shall have a large merchant marine or a small one.

Important Points

Briefly here are some of the points which the committee recommends:

1. That demobilization should be so handled as to preserve free enterprise.
2. That full employment be assured.
3. That government-owned or controlled plants be disposed of in a way as not to affect the national economy adversely.
4. That disposal of government-owned plants should be in line with American foreign policy, with the prevention of monopoly, with the encouragement of full competition and small business.
5. No plants or surpluses disposed of where their existence is vital to the national economy or such disposal affects it adversely or under conditions which would make it impossible for the small business to acquire them.

And this word of wisdom is added: The shutting down of factories, the stoppages of work, and the employment of workers, through delays in contract settlements, will cause far greater loss of revenue to the government—to say nothing of general economy—than could possibly be saved through the legal force pre-audit of contractors' claims.

In other words, "the law's delay" will be expensive. It will be interesting to see if the lawmakers themselves cause unnecessary delay in this undertaking. Intelligent and unselfish consideration and action are the keynotes to the just realization of this practical example of planning.

HIGHLIGHTS... in the week's news

SKIM MILK: By vote of the senate, 46 to 4, the way is now open for the bill which would permit to call their product "dry milk solids." The change was embodied in a bill approved by the house, which alters a provision of the Pure Food and Drug act. Senator "Most people think of skim milk as something you feed to hogs."

FRATS: The army's decision to curtail its specialized training program will have a seriously deleterious effect on collegiate fraternities, according to the chairman of the national interfraternity conference war committee. He said that some 300 fraternity houses valued at $7,500,000 will probably be tenanted, which will mean a loss to the societies owning them.

Butter Preserver: Successful experiments with a complex organic acid have shown that it will keep butter, lard and cheese fresh ten times as long as is usual under present methods of preservation. A Chicago company is producing the acid for use by the armed forces. It is a crystalline extract from desert fungi, called "trichothololactic acid," abbreviated to "NDGA." The acid is tasteless and does not affect the color of the fats, but its presence prevents food from becoming rancid.

BRIEFS... by Baukhage

Today an apple a day keeps the doctor away, but in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, cocoa was considered the proper tonic.

"Dress fashions for girls—Japanese style, 1944—are to be streamlined in a new styling of graceful, wartime uniform, according to the Jap education ministry." What? No pin-ups?

Although 1944 food production in the United States is expected to be greater than in 1943, military and lend-lease requirements in 1944 also will be greater. The U. S. food supply for civilians may even be smaller in 1944 than last year, according to the department of agriculture. However, civilian stocks may be upped if conditions permit tapping the government reserve.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lieut. Col. Frank Kuriz, who was pilot of the grisled old Flying Fortress known as the "Broom," which crashed from Clark Field, site of that fatal day when the Japs struck in the Philippines. Old 99, a Flying Fortress, is struck down before it can get off the ground. Kuriz and his crew—his boys—lying in irregular lines. They had been killed as they ran for shelter. He counts them, pale each on the back, and talks to them as if they were still alive. Then he goes to where Tex is lying, at the end of the sprawling line, and makes a promise.

CHAPTER II

"We weren't licked; it was only the beginning, and from now on we would get to work, all of us, and win. I told him that whatever plane they gave me later, Old 99 would be flying right in the formation, and on my own. I would always be with Old 99's wing lights beside me, and know that she was protecting me with her crossfire, knocking down Zeros that tried to climb onto my tail."

Yes, maybe that's where the story begins.

The 19th Bombardment Group consisted of thirty-five beautiful shiny new Flying Fortresses, of which Old 99 was one—we had picked her out at the Bataan airfield. The 19th was the southernmost of the line. Of the fortress series, they were D models—then the latest and finest in the business. About a dozen of our thirty-five were down at Clark Field on the southern island of Mindanao. The rest were at the main bomber base, Clark Field, about forty-five miles from Manila, which was the headquarters of General MacArthur, the Commander in Chief.

Our immediate Air Corps commander, General Brereton, was constantly visiting us at Clark.

"On November 27 General Brereton put us on the alert. He had received the same State Department warning that the Japs were in the Philippines—that war might be days or maybe hours away. Within the limit of what we had, the Air Force was ready for it. The General was making all the reconnaissance he could, and had picked his targets in Formosa, from where we knew the blow would come. Our machine guns were in place and loaded.

"As fast as our facilities would permit, our shiny aluminum Queens were getting their coat of dull war paint, and I was notified that Old 99 was scheduled to get her camouflage on December eighth.

"That's a date you were in the Philippines will never forget. With you it's December seventh, but don't be confused, for it's really the same day, only because the Philippines are on the other side of the international date line, we give it a different number.

"The Japanese struck at Pearl Harbor at exactly 7:35 o'clock in the morning Honolulu time. At that same instant it was 4:35 o'clock in the morning of December eighth, and the Philippines—a few hours before dawn reached us. I was asleep in the nipa shack which was the officers' quarters at Clark Field.

"I got up at seven as usual, and, stumbling in sleepily to shave, snapped on my portable as I always did to get the early morning news broadcast by Don Bell in Manila. By the way, one of the first things the Japs did when they entered the town, two weeks later, was to shoot the poor devil. In even more rapid-fire style than usual he told us the big news—that the Japs had hit Hawaii.

"I gulped breakfast, and then all the pilots rushed over to operations meeting in the squadron's operations tent, where Major Don Gibbs went over the situation with us. You can see him now, trim, alert, boyish-looking fellow, twenty and years—if he'd lived out the war he would surely be a brigadier general by now. He was as shrewd as I was modest. It was his second tour of duty out here, and he knew the lay of the land.

"Well, gentlemen, this is it," he said. Then he stepped over to the open flap and faced us. "If they've hit Hawaii they can't miss hitting us. You can't tell you, however, if the town, but it will come. I can tell you where it will come from. Here he raised the canvas flap with one hand and pointed up to the north. "It will be from right over that hill," he said.

"We looked at the hill, tree-clad, velvety, beautiful in the sunrise. Beyond it was Iba Field. Still farther was the China Sea and then came Formosa, the black forbidden hunk of land that had looked down on the week before.

"As we left, Gibbs said: 'You're on the stand-by. Orders will be coming through fast all morning.' Then I went back to Old 99. She was one of the few which hadn't been loaded with bombs. She had been scheduled for camouflage that morning. Only the orders that now came seemed conflicting as those final hours slipped away.

"First came one countermarching the camouflage. Seemed something was afoot, and they couldn't wait for it. Instead we were to load bombs, so we taxied over toward the ammunition dump. Then Bill Cooke, who was to be running back and forth all morning with conflicting orders, came screaming down the field. 'Take her back to the hangar; they want the camouflage finished by all means!'

"Presently came another order for me and two other planes of this 30th Squadron to unload our bombs and insert cameras. Nothing more than that, but it was clear they were preparing us now for reconnaissance over Formosa.

"I didn't then know that our little field only reflected what was going on at Manila Headquarters, where our Air Force General Brereton had been up before dawn and was at a big conference all morning. Of course it's very easy to be wise after the event.

"And of course, even though Pearl Harbor had been attacked, our American Congress had not yet declared war, and perhaps it was too great a responsibility for our Philippines command to strike back when someone might argue that war did not exist technically.

"General Brereton knew our position at Clark Field was so dangerous that if we did not at once strike at Formosa, we could probably never strike at all. He wanted permission to make a reconnaissance flight over there, so we could at least see if the Japanese were making preparations to strike us. Sure, if we had to hit Pearl Harbor, it would be only a minor neutrality violation to fly close enough to Formosa to take a few pictures.

"Consequently the turnaround on this wasn't complete; Headquarters had already decided that we were to go on the offensive. The turnaround was only a matter of time.

"The operation tent was crowded with about forty pilots and navigators waiting for briefing to begin. As we waited, I snapped on my radio and we all listened to Manila. This time Don Bell was really peaking it across in his excited delivery. Yet we didn't know that the precious minutes had all slipped away and only seconds were left.

We didn't know that General Brereton had just given the go-ahead to our photographic expedition over Formosa, to see if just possibly the Japanese might be making preparations to attack us. We didn't realize that General Brereton had already rushed to the telephone, and was even at this instant clicking the receiver, trying to get through to us with this order.

"Now Don Bell was saying that bombs were being dropped on Clark Field—he was broadcasting from the top of one of Manila's tallest buildings, and from there he could see big plumes of smoke rising from Clark Field.

"We all smiled at this. We didn't know that he, from Manila, could see around the little hill over in the direction of Iba Field, and that these plumes of smoke were from burning Japs.

"The next second, Lieutenant Lee Coats, who was standing nearest the tent flap, stepped to the opening. We watched him look up. "Navy, hell! Here they come!"

"We turned over tables in the confusion of piling out of that tent, but we're not yet frightened rats, we're still human beings, still organized.

"There they came, the drone ringing right over the hill as Don Gibbs had predicted they would—in an enormous V of V's, three V's in all and about twenty-five Mitsubishi bombers in each V, at about 18,000 feet of altitude—coming right at us.

"I heard a scuffling and looked around to see that I was alone except for Lieutenant Glenn Rice—he'd been detailed as photographic officer and was wandering away with his camera to the edge of the V's. The rest had all taken shelter in a big drainage ditch near by.

"I stood there because I thought it would be five or ten seconds more before they came to their bomb-release line, and I ought to see the glint of their bombs as they came over as they came out of their bomb-bays—they seem almost to pause under the plane before they start down—several seconds surely before I saw that glint, and then would be the time for the ditch. Meantime I wanted to see what kind of pattern this formation planned to lay down over this field, just as, many times before—back in the dry bed of Muruc Lake in California, our practice bombing range in the Mojave Desert—I'd watched a formation of our own to see how good they were.

Star Dust

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

BEING a chaperon on "Blind Date," the Blue network show, has its hazards. Veronica Lake's parents were chaperons for an evening, and, to add an extra flip, the program's sponsor had arranged for handsome cabs to take the servicemen and their girls from the radio studio to the Stork Club. A crowd of fans were milling around, waiting for another glimpse of the "Blind Date." One of the girls, holding the cable off and leaving Mrs. Keane, who is as shy as her famous daughter, helpless inside. Everyone ran, screaming "Runaway!" but a cool-headed Anzac soldier, used to emergencies, stopped the horse before damage was done.

Andrew Stone, producer-director of "Sensations of 1944," thinks so well of his idea that he plans to produce one "Sensations" each year for the next three years; Eleanor Powell of this year's edition will be the central figure of each one.

The desire to remake "A Farewell to Arms," that touching love story of World War I, struck both Warner Bros. and Paramount. Warners wanted it for Ingrid Bergman and Humphrey Bogart, which would have been better than the combination Paramount set up—Ingrid Bergman and Ray Milland. Paramount owns the story; therefore it will be their picture.

Craig Reynolds, the first Hollywood actor to don a uniform in World War II when he enlisted in the marine corps in September, 1940, will return to the screen as a result of a contract signed with RKO. Engagements in the European and South Pacific theaters of war, he was awarded the Purple Heart and two presidential citations. Retired with honor as a first lieutenant after being badly wounded, he can now walk with the aid of a brace and with scarcely a trace of a limp.

RKO is building up a good, substantial stock company, to have plenty of talent ready for its enlarged production schedule. Recent additions to the list of male players—Bert Moorhouse, Sherry Hall, Sammy Blum, Frank Mayo, Larry Wheat, Jason Robards, Chester Carlisle, Wheaton Chambers and Alan Ward. Looks as if the shortage of actors won't worry that studio any.

Warner Bros. have lifted suspension of their contract with Dennis Morgan, and booked him to play opposite Ida Lupino in a romantic comedy, "The Very Thought of You." And he and Irene Manning, the romantic singing team who costarred in "The Desert Song," will do another screen musical together. They'll be reunited in "Henrietta the Eighth," a musical comedy.

There's a new reason for the spirited marching of American sailors these days. The boys are "hopping" it to the rhythm of Alec Templeton's band compositions. The star of the CBS "Carnival" received a request from the navy department for a group of five martial selections, and they have been photographed for distribution here and overseas.

Not for nothing have Warner Bros. made all those biographical films. They've learned that pictures of that class have brought in the largest amounts of mail in the past, so a special bureau has been set up in the fan mail department before the "Adventures of Mark Twain" is released. They figure that Twain's popularity will result in a veritable landslide of letters.

ODDS AND ENDS—Dickie Moore, child star of yesterday, is now 18, and is called while at work at RKO on "Are These Our Children?" "Heavenly Days," starring Fibber McGee and Molly, is being shown at RKO. "The Day That's Started New York" took Mrs. Sinatra a month to get a maid. A member of Bob Ripley's large stable of animals is the polar bear, the scrawled letters that come to the Believe It or Not expert. Each month Tom Conroy gets about 100 missives from people, asking him to find missing friends, solve mysteries, etc. He's the detective in the "Falcon" series.

Red Cross Asks $200,000,000 To Cover Wartime Needs

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Confronted with responsibilities of unprecedented proportions, as the war enters its most crucial stage, and with a staggering task ahead in the post-war period, the American Red Cross opens its 1944 War Fund appeal March 1, confident that the American people will respond to the limit of their ability.

President Roosevelt, president of the American Red Cross, Norman H. Davis, chairman and active head of the vast organization, and Leon Fraser, national War Fund chairman, join in urging the people of this country to help Red Cross reach its national objective of $200,000,000 because of the vital part it must play within the next twelve months.

Chairman Davis, in opening the campaign will stress the fact that with the decisive stage of the war at hand, the Red Cross must assume a greater burden than ever before, and at the same time must provide aid to servicemen being returned in ever-increasing numbers.

Red Cross operations over the entire world during 1943 have dwarfed its activities during the first two years of war.

An even greater burden will be placed on Red Cross services in 1944. Thousands of American men and women are now in Red Cross service with U. S. troops at home bases and overseas. Field directors, hospital, club and recreation workers are with American armed forces in virtually every command, Mr. Davis asserted.

Both in Europe and in the Far East, Red Cross workers have either gone with invasion forces into new combat areas, or have followed within a very limited time.

On the home front, the Red Cross has broadened its service tremendously. Field directors are serving in every sizable military establishment and camp throughout the country, and recreation and social service workers are located in Army and Naval hospitals.

One of the most important and necessary war-time Red Cross functions has been the collection of human blood for plasma. Thirty-five blood donor stations are now operating.

The dramatic story of the Red Cross Blood Donor Service, through which thousands of soldiers and sailors have been saved from death, began in February, 1941, when the Surgeon General of the Army and Navy asked the Red Cross to procure 15,000 pints of blood. Last year more than 3,700,000 pints of blood were collected for the Army and Navy. This year the goal is more than 5,000,000 pints.

With major battles of the war yet to come, the Army has asked the Red Cross to supply many millions of surgical dressings. American men wounded in battle will depend acutely on the vast Red Cross surgical dressing production program.

Numerous other Red Cross home operations, such as Prisoners of War packaging centers, where more than a million parcels for war prisoners are prepared each month for shipment overseas, are supported by citizen participation in the Red Cross War Fund.

So extensive is Red Cross service during this war that every American civilian can contribute something to at least one of its functions. To continue this gigantic work, all Americans must assume their share of the responsibility of carrying on this far-reaching service.

The $200,000,000 quota will enable Red Cross to alleviate suffering and pain at home and abroad, and to carry on its vast military welfare service.

What's Doing At Isabella High

The Isabella Cagers have been literally 'going to town' for the last two weeks, as is evident from their record of four games played and four games won. This is exclusive of Tuesday night's game with Billingsley, which was played after this was written.

On Tuesday night the Mustangs licked Plantersville 29 to 18 in the local gym. Incidentally, the girl's team, (bless their hearts), came out and defeated the Plantersville girls at the same time, after having taken a dose of the same medicine earlier in the season.

On Wednesday night, the 16th, the Isabella boys went down to Billingsley where they chalked up a 11-point win, with a score of 29-18. At the same time, Isabella's Bs defeated Billingsley's Bs 18 to 13.

Again on Thursday afternoon in the Isabella gym, the Calera boys attempted to break up this winning series but failed by a quite decisive 31 points. James Owen was top scorer for all of these games, with a total of 33 points in all.

The Mustangs played a return game at Calera on Thursday of last week handing them another pasting to the tune of 29 to 9. They had previously beaten Maplesville by a decisive score.

Thus, you have a brief resume of recent unreported games. Friday afternoon of this week the Isabella Cagers journey to Selma to the district tourney, where they tackle Centerville at the outset. Watch for the results in the next week's school news.

Margarene Henley recently was chosen as school representative in the Birmingham News-Age Herald oratorical contest. Competing with her in the school eliminations was Jesse Culp. Margarene's oration is entitled, "A High School Student Sees the Postwar World." She will represent the school in the county finals. We wish her luck.

Some lucky damsel will be crowned Queen Isabella and her lucky male.

CARD OF THANKS

Our hearts were saddened and broken indeed when we received the message of the accident and death of one of our very best friends, Macey Jones.

Those who knew Macey longest, loved him most, for to know him was to love him. His friends were numbered by his acquaintance. The confusion of flowers expressed the sentiments of his admirers. There is much praise to be given him because of his tender love for others and his willingness to help them at anytime to the extent of his ability.

He wore the crown of patience through the years he toiled on, and those hands that rest forever, are the hands that made his home.

Some day in the future, we know not when or where, God will call us to leave this sinful world. If we have lived as Macey lived, Christ will claim us for His own and we shall rejoice with His chosen loved ones around the Great White Throne.—Written by Joe T. Cox, and family. 1tp

BELIEVES IN OLD-AGE PENSIONS 100 PER CENT

C. REESE MULLINS

I think the old people, both men and women of this entire country should receive at least $300 per month after reaching the age of 60 years. While our pensions to the old people as I understand are about average of 13 of our Southern States and we appreciate what our Governors and Legislators have done for the help to our aged people, yet, the present relief is not at all adequate to meet their actual necessities. What we need, in my opinion is Federal Legislative Pensions throughout our whole country. There are many old farmers, ministers, teachers and others, some of these today blind, and others can hardly see their way as they totter along. These old people have worn their lives away in their different fields of labor and today in dire need of help to sustain the actual necessities of life, in their last and declining years I say give them at least $300 a month and do it now. Give us more Federal Pensions from Washington for the old age and stop creating any more Bureaus. Yours for Old-Age Pensions.—C. REESE MULLINS.

BRIEF FARM NEWS

Good news for Alabama farmers in their fight to meet war food needs is contained in the announcement by the WPB that approximately 200,000 tons of potash salts are now being allocated for fertilizer use in the United States, Porto Rico and Hawaii.

Alabama farmers sold a total of $39,681, 094 worth of farm products on 21 active curb markets during January.

Thousands of tons of the new southern cabbage crop will be dehydrated this spring, says the WFA. This year the Armed Forces will take nearly 6,000,000 pounds of dehydrated cabbage and 2,000,000 pounds will be shipped abroad under lend-lease.

service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C. are what we want, arms, ammunition, and a command. The command is what we want, arms, ammunition, and a command. The command is what we want, arms, ammunition, and a command.

have a quarter of a million men in France, and they are willing, able and anxious to bear arms. They are willing, able and anxious to bear arms. They are willing, able and anxious to bear arms.

is no question about the army and the effectiveness of the army in France, in all of the countries for that matter. There is no question about the army and the effectiveness of the army in France, in all of the countries for that matter.

is no question about the army and the effectiveness of the army in France, in all of the countries for that matter. There is no question about the army and the effectiveness of the army in France, in all of the countries for that matter.

did it at very little expense, and it was not a big deal. It was not a big deal. It was not a big deal. It was not a big deal. It was not a big deal.

long ago, word came to a group of these French guerrillas. They were told to move over to a certain point. They were told to move over to a certain point. They were told to move over to a certain point.

Then the provisional government (the word "government" in the European sense) would call it the "cabinet" with an executive head) would be chosen by the assembly. The national committee would cease to be the executive body.

Every attempt is now being made to carry out the preliminary plans for procedures in the spirit, if not exactly in accordance with the letter, of the French constitution and law. There are, however, many practical difficulties which arise.

occupied French territory as it is liberating the people, and of creating the machinery for the final plebiscite which will decide the permanent government.

Great Difficulties

The committee itself works under great difficulties. Many of the members are utterly inexperienced in politics and they have responsibilities much greater than a normal governmental body would have. They must serve as an administrative agency, they must serve as a quasi-legislative body, and they must likewise plan regulations governing procedure in the interim between liberation of France and the time when a free election is held.

The recent meeting of the assembly (February 29) began the long and complicated consideration of the plans for the provisional government. One typical plan suggested can now be described in some detail although, of course, it is likely to be modified as a result of the discussion in the coming weeks and months, and in the application thereafter.

It covers, roughly, two phases. First, is partial liberation. Just as soon as the Allies have taken over a portion of France and the military organization moves forward, the French committee would place in charge under this plan. Immediately municipal officers would be selected, councils for each municipality. When an entire province has been taken over, each municipality placed in charge under this plan.

Finally, the day comes when Allied troops march down the Champs Elysees and across the Seine to the Place du Palais Bourbon. Then the ancient building which housed the chamber of deputies of the Third Republic, will open its doors to the new assembly. By this time, it will probably represent at least two-thirds of France.

Second Step

After the second step of the plan, now considered, will be taken. The assembly will have reached, depending on the populations liberated, some 400 members.

Then the provisional government (the word "government" in the European sense) would call it the "cabinet" with an executive head) would be chosen by the assembly. The national committee would cease to be the executive body.

Every attempt is now being made to carry out the preliminary plans for procedures in the spirit, if not exactly in accordance with the letter, of the French constitution and law. There are, however, many practical difficulties which arise. Take the question of woman suffrage. Under the French constitution, women are not permitted to vote. However, at present, with most of the men away in the army or as deportees in Germany, the women make up the majority of the population. Therefore, it would be desirable for them to vote in the ballot in order to get a true representative opinion of any locality.

TO OUR Poor Health

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

INCREASING WEIGHT

It is gratifying to see how the medical profession is now interested in weight—normal weight, overweight and underweight. No longer is the physician satisfied just to look at the height and weight tables hanging on the wall of his office. He "sizes up" the patient and decides just what the weight should be for his or her type of build. Naturally, the slender or wiry type must weigh less than the standard or average weight for height and the heavy or stocky type must weigh more.

However, when the wiry type is more than five pounds less than he should be and one of average build is 10 pounds less, there must be a reason. Just as overweight has its disadvantages, so also has underweight, though not quite to the same extent.

When the degree of underweight is such that it is noticeable to the family and friends, it is usually found that other symptoms or signs are present also—weakness and thin blood. Therefore, the physician while prescribing a tonic and an increase in food, will immediately search by a thorough examination for some cause of the underweight.

The first step is to investigate the amount and kinds of food eaten daily, that is, the total amount of calories and how much of this total amount is made up of fat-forming foods—butter, cream, egg yolks, bread, sugar, potatoes. Also to the amount of fruits and leafy vegetables eaten because of their minerals and vitamins. A lack of the vitamin B1 foods may reduce the appetite for all foods.

The next step is to learn the daily habits of the underweight as to the amount of rest and sleep and exercise and work. Lack of sleep can prevent gain in weight even more than lack of food.

If the underweight eats enough of the right kinds of food, gets plenty of sleep and rest, and is not overactive, the physician then makes a thorough search for infection. In a great many cases infected teeth, tonsils and sinuses are sapping the strength and causing loss of weight; in others a more serious infection may be present such as tuberculosis, cancer or pernicious anemia.

With the removal of any infection, increasing the fat and starch foods, seeing that the underweight gets enough of the outdoors to give him a natural appetite, and seeing also that more hours of sleep and one or two rests daily are taken, will cause an increase in weight.

Surgery on Brain May Restore Sanity

I have spoken before of the satisfactory results obtained by Drs. G. W. T. Fleming and W. McKissock in various types of mental diseases by removal of part of the brain substance.

In the British Lancet these two physicians report the results obtained by this operation on 15 additional patients. There were 12 manic-depressive cases, one had obsessions, one a double personality, and one was violent and depressed in spirit. Of the 12 patients with melancholia, seven had made a complete recovery, one has shown considerable improvement, but the other four have shown little improvement. The patients with obsessions has completely recovered, the double personality patient is more quiet, and the violent depressive case is more easily handled. Several of the patients have found complete "peace of mind" after the operation.

There is apparently but small risk by operation; there were no deaths in the 15 cases. All these cases had received no help from other forms of treatment.

In the same issue of the British Lancet, Dr. E. L. Hutton reports the results obtained on 50 mental patients who underwent this operation—prefrontal leukotomy. There were two deaths, only one which was directly due to operation. "Not a single patient is recorded as being worse after the treatment than before; and even the patient with the least satisfactory results is found to be quieter, less impulsive, and easier to handle."

"Leukotomy—removal of part of the brain by surgery—converted many patients suffering from supposedly hopeless mental disorders into contented and useful members of society."

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

SINCE his return from his recent overseas trip Joe E. Brown has been the talk of New York—being modest, he's told the people fortunate enough to hear him, things that he should say to the entire United States. He has traveled more than 100,000 miles, entertained more than two million men, on all fronts. The man is terrific. It's no wonder that a psychiatrist who followed him through hospitals in the South Pacific reported a 71 per cent improvement in the patients' condition. He is men everywhere—in the front lines, on ships, in canteens.

JOE E. BROWN

His new radio show, on the Blue network, is a quiz show; too bad he's not doing an additional one, so that the public could hear what he told newspaper people.

The "vicious circle" that's supposed to be show business isn't so vicious for Xavier Cugat, who became a movie highlight after repeatedly starring on the bandstand of the New York Paramount theater. Now that he has a handsome contract with Metro, Cugat has been awarded with a ten weeks' personal appearance contract, at $12,500 per week—at the Paramount theater, where he started to fame!

Lauritz Melchior, Metropolitan tenor who scored such a hit clowning with Fred Allen on the air, has signed for his first motion picture—It's Metro's "Thrill of Romance," featuring William Powell, a swimmer. He'll play an opera singer.

"All the other fellows razed this chap," said the society who'd just come out of Halloran hospital. "He sat down on the side of my bed and played cards with me and talked, and was swell. I didn't know who he was then. Found out later he was Frank Sinatra."

We won't see Rosalind Russell in "Sister Kenny," after all that preparation, because it's been indefinitely postponed. But it's going to be too hot for her assigned to "Roughly Speaking" instead, because that's a perfect story for Bette Davis.

James Cagney has started his personal appearance tour of U. S. army and navy bases in the European war theater; expects to remain abroad for three months. He rehearsed six weeks with a dance coach before leaving Hollywood, on a cavalcade of American dancing from George Primrose to Fred Astaire.

Shopping for lingerie with his wife, Geoffrey Barnes, head of the ominous voice on "The Mystery Theater," yielded to the temptation to use his radio voice on the elevator operator. Barnes says he never had an easier time getting out.

Next time you hear Cary Grant in a radio play, picture him acting out all the dialogue as if he were before the camera. When he's out of a scene he walks into the wings, mingles with the supporting players, and contributes to the off-stage sound effects.

After finishing the hilarious "The Miracle of Morgan's Creek" Preston Sturges left Paramount; now he's gone into partnership with Howard Hughes, who'll be his financial backer. That combination should produce some startling pictures!

Dimitri Shostakovich's Eighth Symphony will be given its first performance in the Western hemisphere over the CBS network on Wednesday, April 2, by the New York Philharmonic symphony. Bill Downs brought the symphony back from Moscow.

SODA you can use and depend on

SHIPS RETURNING from other missions, are bringing natural soda from Chile—for this year's biggest of all food production jobs. It is soda you know all about—can store and handle easily—can depend on for top and side dressing. How much will there be? That's hard to say, but last year Chile sent 1,000,000 tons to U. S. farmers and think what that would mean this year.

● Properly applied, 1,000,000 tons of Chilean Nitrate would produce 250,000,000 bu. of oats or 100,000,000 bu. of wheat; 125,000,000 bu. of corn or 4,800,000 tons of forage crops; 6,000,000 tons of vegetables or 2,500,000 bales of cotton and 1,100,000 tons of cotton seed.

Natural Chilean Nitrate, always a big factor in food production, is absolutely vital this year—enough and in time for all essential needs.

MORE CORN PER ACRE

Attention:

Cotton Farmers, Dairymen, Poultrymen Hog Growers, Cattle Producers!!

Let's grow more corn in Chilton County so we can produce more milk, meat, and eggs needed by our armed forces and for the people in this country. The best way to produce more corn is to increase the acre yield. More corn means more food and feed

HERE ARE RECOMMENDATIONS OF OUR COUNTY AGENT FOR INCREASING THE CORN YIELD:

1. LAND: Plant corn on good crop land. Do not try to grow it on thin, badly eroded, or droughty land.
2. PREPARATION: On well-drained soils, the land may be bedded and rebedded on corn planted in water furrow. Turn winter legumes two weeks or more before corn is to be planted.
3. PLANTING DATE: The last two weeks in April, in general, is about the best planting date. Avoid extremely early planting dates because corn grows off slowly and requires more work. Avoid extremely late plantings because they seldom make good yields.
4. VARIETIES: Central Alabama—Whatley, Mosby and Paymaster.
5. FERTILIZERS:
 - (a) Corn requires no fertilizer if following a good crop of winter legumes (15 to 20 pounds of green tops per 10x 10 feet square in average growth of legumes in field).
 - (b) Corn following cotton or other crop receiving 500 to 600 pounds, or more, of fertilizer should be side-dressed within 35 to 40 days after planting with at least 225 pounds nitrate of soda or 120 pounds of ammonium nitrate.
 - (c) Corn not following winter legumes or a well-fertilized crop should be fertilized with 200 to 300 pounds of 4-10-4 or 4-10-6 at, or before, planting and side-dressed 35 to 40 days after planting with 225 pounds of nitrate of soda or 120 pounds of ammonium nitrate.
6. SPACING: Space to give about 10 square feet per plant. This can be provided by planting 3 feet apart in 3½ foot rows, or 2 feet apart in 5 foot rows, or 2½ feet apart in 4 foot rows.
7. CULTIVATION: Cultivate early, Frequently enough to control completely weeds and grass and lay-by early.

Experiment Station tests for more than 25 years and experience of thousands of farmers throughout the state show that year after year 25 to 30 bushels or more of corn per acre can be made by following these recommendations. Chilton County's corn yield is only 12.5 bushels per acre. This is too low. Let's increase it in 1944.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Russ Announce Finnish Peace Terms; Jap Defense Posts Crumble in Pacific; Allied Bombers Hit Fortress Europe, Blast Nazi War Plants, Installations

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Russia—German troops are shown moving back from eastern front in thick, Russian mud. (See: Russia.)

EUROPE:

Pound Plane Plants

Thousands of Allied bombers roared over Hitler's vaunted Fortress Europe striking Nazi war industries and defense installations while U. S. and British troops slugged it out with the Germans below Rome.

In an effort to cripple Nazi resistance to second-front operations and hammering of European industry, the Allies' big heavies continued to pound at German fighter-plane factories, while squads of lighter bombers darted over the English channel to the northern and western edges of the U. S. and British positions, while both sides brought up reinforcements for the mountain fighting around Cassino.

At the Anzio beachhead below Rome, Allied troops traded stiff blows with German armored forces punching at the northern and western edges of the U. S. and British positions, while both sides brought up reinforcements for the mountain fighting around Cassino.

SOLDIER VOTE:

Cosider Compromise

Congressional wrangling over the soldier vote resulted in the offer of a compromise proposal under which men and women in the service could use the blank federal ballot with only the name of the party designated if the governor of their state certifies its use.

Before any service personnel could use the federal ballot, however, they must swear that they tried to obtain an absentee ballot from their state by October 1.

Proposed by Representatives LeCompte (Iowa) and Bonner (N. C.), the compromise sought to reconcile those who insist on the states' rights to supervise election laws and others who declare that because of difficult battle conditions a simple ballot should be provided.

RUSSIA:

Finnish Terms

As it was reported that the Finns were prepared to move as many as 1,500,000 people to Sweden if peace negotiations with Russia fail, Moscow publicly announced its terms to Finland.

Terms included: 1. Internment of German troops and ships in Finland; 2. Restoration of boundaries of 1940 peace; 3. Return of Allied prisoners; 4. Discussion of partial demobilization of Finnish army; 5. Discussion of Finnish reparations for war damages; and 6. Discussion of control over northern Finnish territory.

As Russo-Finnish peace talk stepped in tempo, the Red army continued its drive westward toward the Baltic states of Estonia and Latvia.

U. S. Aid

With its great industrial centers of Stalingrad, Kharkov, and Stalino, etc., laid in rubble and its vast agricultural belts overgrown, Russia's dependence upon the U. S. for continuing effective resistance against Germany was glimpsed in figures released on American aid to the Reds.

Since 1941, lend-lease assistance to Russia included: 7,800 planes; 4,700 tanks and tank destroyers; 170,000 trucks; 35,000 jeeps; 25,000 other vehicles; and 177,000 tons of explosives.

Other assistance: 2,250,000 tons of food; 6,000,000 pairs of boots; 9,000 tons of seeds; 1,350,000 tons of steel; 384,000 tons of aluminum and other metal; 740,000 tons of oil and gasoline; 145,000 tons of refinery equipment; and tire-making machinery with 1,000,000 ton capacity.

VITAMINS: Because of mounting demands, preparations of vitamin A have been sent to Russia in allocation to insure equitable distribution. The present rate of consumption will soon eat into the reserves.

IRON ORE: What is termed the "greatest known mass of hard iron ore in the world" in Gatu peak in Brazil, will soon be yielding iron for American and British factories.

MORE MEAT:

Ease Rationing

With production of meat at federally inspected plants reported at 1,665,000,000 pounds for February and with storage plants bulging with meat stocks, civilians' share of the huge supply was increased by OPA's reduction of point values for pork and beef.

Because of the valuation of all stamps at ten points and the use of ration tokens, OPA figured that housewives will be able to buy about 6 per cent more meat in March and April.

As OPA announced the point cuts, the nation's stockyards reported the second lowest cattle receipts since last July, with predictions that the smaller volume will be felt in consumer channels in coming months. Hog receipts went into their usual seasonal decline.

FARM WAGES:

Face Stabilization

Because of heavy bidding for available agricultural labor, farm wages during 1943 when citrus and asparagus growers competed frantically for pickers, piece work wages paid in other areas tended to draw employees from canneries to the field.

"This year labor will be scarcer and wages will tend to rise on the farm," Ham said. "Growers will be eager to prevent the wages rising beyond reason, and it will be important to keep the farms from robbing the canneries of their help and also from plucking one another's employees. I think wage limitations will be imposed in many states."

CIO:

Red, Lewis Says

Organizer and chief of the CIO before pulling out of it because of differences over political policies, United Mine Worker Boss John L. Lewis declared communists were in control of the CIO's membership.

Said Lewis, whose UMW recently applied for readmittance into the AFL after bolting the CIO we picked up a lot of communists . . . as we grew . . . But if I had not . . . left the CIO in 1940 . . . the communists would have been weeded out . . . long before now. Instead . . . Philip Murray (CIO chairman) is today the prisoner of the communists . . . through the tactics of his executive committee . . . Sidney Hillman (head of the CIO political action committee) is just as badly off . . .

Answering big John L.'s charges Murray retorted that he was "neither a prisoner of Lewisism nor communism."

BURMA:

Break Trap

Trapped for three weeks by Japanese units attacking from all sides, the fifth and seventh Indian divisions finally were relieved by Allied combat units as heavy fighting continued in Burma.

As Admiral Louis Mountbatten's Southeast Asia forces thrust through the dense mountainous jungle along the eastern Burmese border, gains were recorded in the north, where Chinese troops under command of U. S. Gen. Joseph Stilwell fought to open a supply road to Chungking.

By relieving the Indian divisions, the Allies held their footing along the Nyaung-Udon pass, gateway to southern Burma from India.

U. S. JAPS:

Demand Rights

Restoration of their rights as citizens and equal opportunity for service and advancement in the military forces were demanded by Jap-Americans of the Granada, Colo., internment camp.

Asking that they be accorded their constitutional privileges, the Jap-Americans demanded that they be allowed to travel and live wherever they choose, with any resettlement policy including adequate government protection and financial aid.

The government also was asked to help distinguish the difference between loyal Jap-Americans and the people of the Japanese empire.

TRUCKS

By April or May production of trucks for commercial use should be in high gear, a survey of Detroit companies reveals. More than 2,500 units for commercial use were made in January, and it is estimated that 3,000 were turned out in February.

One big manufacturer stated that he had to produce 12,000 units for a lend-lease contract. Another plant located in Cleveland reported that it built 385 trucks in February for civilian use and that this would be increased to 600 by May.

Who's News This Week

By Delos Wheeler Lovelace

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—In November, 1917, when the United States had been in World War I for seven months, the navy sent a ship to Annapolis for a young man in a yard and a graduate course in electrical engineering and he'd helped build the battleship Pennsylvania before going to sea in her. The powers that be figured that he'd make a top-notch electrical superintendent. The only person displeased about the whole thing was Raymond Amos Spruance himself. In fact, the only thing that delighted him was that he managed to wangle a couple of months' shore leave in 1918.

This time it has turned out the way he likes it, and President Roosevelt recommends that this same officer, now 57 and a vice admiral, be promoted to admiral for his success as commander of the mighty assault force that just trounced the Japs in the Marshall Islands. The admiral's a man who shuns the limelight, but talk to navy men and they'll tell you he's got to be a tactician. He plans his moves meticulously, and carries them out with skill and daring. He and Vice Admiral Fletcher drove the Japs back at Midway. Spruance himself had charge of the conquest of the Gilberts.

He packs a tremendous amount of energy in his medium build, and he drives himself and the men with him hard when the heat is on. His rugged face has been weathered by many a face breeze. His blue, flinty eyes are those of a born commander. The Spruances are a family of four. His wife and daughter live out on the Pacific coast and his son, true to the tradition, is an officer on a submarine.

QUITE likely Mrs. George C. Marshall is doing a little extra listening these days. The thoughtful chief of staff of the Army of the United States is States talks to his problem. Mrs. Geo. C. Marshall's wife as to a little more in Italy he may be talking more than usual.

It is to be noted that the general talks his problems to, and not with, Mrs. Marshall. Unlike some Washington wives she pretends to have no expert knowledge in her husband's field, even the edges of it. Her role is that of audience while the sometimes harassed general thinks out loud. For this role she is nicely fitted. She used to be a Shakespearean actress and early learned to show a lively, but silent interest while Mansfield and others reeled off the long, magnificent speeches of the Bard.

For both the Marshalls this is their second marriage. He met her on a boat when she was a Baltimore lawyer's widow, met her again on land, decided he had done enough reconnaissance and found she felt the same way.

A slim wife, hardly up to her husband's shoulder, with modish gray hair, she is finely proportioned for the roles of Portia, Juliet and Rosalind. These were among her favorites. Ophelia was one of her favorites, too, but that can hardly be of any present help.

GEN. Alexander A. Vandegrift, commander of the 1st Marine Corps, marks the first birthday of the women's reserve with an all-encompassing "well done," and a smile lights up his face.

Col. Ruth Streeter and the Marines Have No Regrets eyes of Col. Ruth Cheney Streeter. Those are the very words she has been waiting 12 months to hear. She knew that at the start the leathernecks, almost all of them from Missouri as far as her organization was concerned. Now the stamp of approval is as emphatic as the skepticism was real, and the director of the reserve is justly proud.

A year ago if this action-loving wife of a lawyer could have had her way, she'd have been ferrying planes overseas. She had learned to fly at 45 and held a civilian pilot's license, and it seemed pretty safe for her to set Washington thought 47 too old for the Ferry Command.

Her year in the marines has erased that disappointment.

She admits she was startled when the marines commissioned her a major in January of 1943 and set her to heading the sister group to the WAVES. She had found time from running her home in Morris-town, N. J., and bringing up her four children to participate in welfare and defense work, but this was something else again. She received her second promotion in a year last January and now she far outranks her three sons in service, two in the navy and one in the army. Only her husband and her daughter are not in uniform.

Red Cross Field Men Tackle Yanks' Problems Overseas

One of the very important functions of the American Red Cross is the direct communication it affords between the fighting man and his people back home. Here Red Cross Field Director John L. Barnes (left), of White Plains, N. Y., gives a message to Sgt. William J. McDonald, Jr., of Mamaronock, N. Y. Picture was made in Sicily outside a straw Italian hut with the rear headquarters of the 1st Division near Mt. Etna.

On Masera Island, up in the Persian Gulf, where there is not a single tree standing and the wind blows across the island ceaselessly, Red Cross field men brought fishing tackle, books and writing paper to service men. Most welcome gift from the Red Cross was clippers for hair cutting—the boys had been without a barber for months.

In Persia, a Red Cross Field Director was able to locate a soldier's mother whom he hadn't seen for 25 years. In Africa, Red Cross field men flew in Army planes, hitch-hiked in supply trucks, bumped in jeeps over bombed convoy routes, through blinding sand storms and glaring sun to help men with personal problems and emergency communications, and to deliver magazines and books, cigarettes and chocolate to isolated posts and bases.

In Italy, Red Cross field men accompanied the troops in on the invasion.

In India, a sergeant was sentenced to the guard house for disorderly conduct. His officer couldn't understand the boy's behavior. He was a nice kid—he'd never gone to pieces before. The officer asked the Red Cross Field Director to see him. The Red Cross man discovered a very worried boy. His wife had not been receiving his allotments, she wasn't well and needed an operation. She thought the soldier must have cancelled his allotments and a misunderstanding had arisen between them so that she was no longer writing him.

The field man got in touch with the Red Cross chapter in the boy's home town immediately. It took care of her. (This space contributed to Red Cross Drive by the Yellow Front Stores)

Give the boy the first chance Long Distance

It means a lot for a boy in the service to talk to his friends and family back home. Usually the best time he has to do that is in the evening.

How about giving him a break by not using Long Distance in the evening except in emergencies?

THE ADVANTAGE OF A WHOLE MILK MARKET IN CHILTON COUNTY

By Ben Mitchell

Stanton, Ala.

(Winner of First Place in Stanton Community Group)

Some advantages of a whole milk market in Chilton County is that farmers will have more barnyard fertilizer to put on the land to build up the soil, and can raise more food for the cows and for themselves. They will plant cover crops such as lespedeza and kudzu and other cover crops to build up the soil and keep it from washing.

The people will have another cash income for the family, they can buy more War Bonds and Stamps, and can buy more cows and better breeds of cows. They will have more milk to sell, more milk for the family to drink and more butter fat.

People that have a car can send the milk by the truck to sell it, and they can stay at home and work on the farm. They can use the gasoline for other purposes. The people that do not have a car can send the milk by the truck.

Boys and girls working around the milk will learn how if it is done and will be a dairymen or woman when they grow up.

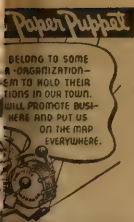

People will take better care of their animals by putting them under a shed when it is raining and will get more milk and will have less disease.

People will save their milk and sell it before they will pour it out on the ground or waste it in other ways.

It will bring along another occupation for the county. It will take less labor. People who usually churn the milk will be free to work on the farm because labor is a problem now. A whole milk market will cut out some little crops that do not help out in the War Effort.

War Bond District 13 Goes Over Top

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Pattillo asks that we explain that the cause of the county going so far over its quota when the chairman and members of the War Finance Committee had repeatedly said that we were short several thousand dollars, was that citizens of the county buying bonds elsewhere in the state but giving credit to this county, which of course could not be checked on through the local banks and post offices.

War Bond District Thirteen, composed of Chilton, Dallas, Marengo,
Perry and Wilcox counties, rolled up
E Bond sales of $1,442,969 against an E Bond quota of $1,165,000 during the Fourth War Loan campaign to achieve a record of 23.86 per cent of sales above quota, according to Ed Leigh McMillan, chairman of the War Finance Committee for Alabama.

John P. Furniss, of Selma, is manager for this district. He was assisted by J. B. Beard, of Selma, chairman of the district Agricultural committee;
J. G. Melvin, of Selma, chairman of the district Banking and Investment committee; and D. P. Culp, of Clanton, chairman of the district Educational committee.

Final tabulations of figures show the counties in the district had the following E Bond quotas and sales during the Fourth War Loan: Chilton, $279,000 and $324,370; Dallas, $381-000 and $531,863; Marengo, $283,000 and $292,977; Perry, $121,000 and $170-660; and Wilcox, $101,000 and $123,093.

Total quotas and sales of all Fourth War Loan securities in the counties were: Chilton, $465,000 and $569,024;
Dallas, $1,650,000 and $1,860,280; Marengo, $466,000 and $633,313; Perry, $262,000 and $297,364; and Wilcox,
$259,000 and $279,768.

County chairmen, under whose leadership these records were achieved, are:
Chilton, J. C. Pattillo, of Clanton;
Dallas, Charles L. Dill, of Selma;
Marengo, Thomas H. Boggs and W.
W. Reddick, of Linden; Perry, O. S.
Nichols, of Marion; and Wilcox, W. J.
Jones, of Camden.

District Five, composed of the counties of Limestone, Jackson, Madison, Marshall and Morgan, won top honors on E Bond sales in the state by exceeding their E Bond quota 40.82 per cent. District Ten (Barbour, Colfer, Dale, Geneva, Henry and Houston) came second with sales of 40.61 per cent above the E Bond quota, and District Four (Colbert, Franklin, Lauderdale, Lawrence and Winston) placed third with 39.49 per cent.

To District Five will be presented the Alabama flag offered to the district exceeding its E Bond quota by the greatest per cent. This flag, appropriately inscribed, will become a part of the permanent archives of the Alabama National Guard.

Sales of E Bonds in Alabama were $42,247,155 against a quota of $34,000-000 to win the state seventh place in the nation in E Bond sales above quota and second place for states east of the Mississippi River. Total sales of all securities in the state were $122-
912,427 against a quota of $93,000,000.
Every county in the state exceeded both its total and its E Bond quota.

Seed Peanuts Are Now Available

By M. R. Glascock
County Agent

The 1944 support price for oil peanuts is now $150.00 for U. S. No. 1 Spanish peanuts; an additional $10.00 increase in this price is expected soon.

Plant peanuts for oil in 1944 to furnish Chilton County boys food and ammunition. Give the boys everything they need to get it over and get home sooner. Peanuts for oil is the most valuable War crop that a Chilton
County farmer can produce.

Spanish and Runner Seed Peanuts are now Available at the Chilton County Exchange. These seed have been tested and passed by the State Department of Agriculture.

Farmers planning to plant oil peanuts are encouraged to plant five or more acres. This acreage will make it possible for the picker to set-up on your farm and eliminate the confusion and extra expense often caused by the necessity of hauling a small crop to the picker.

Thorough soil preparation, correct fertilization, and thick spacing are all essential for large peanut yields. Plant peanuts after cotton or other row crops that were heavily fertilized. If this isn't possible, fertilize peanuts with 400 pounds of 0-14-10 per acre.
Plant Spanish peanuts in two foot rows three to four inches in the drill (60 lbs seed per acre). Plant runners in three foot rows six to eight inches in the drill. (40 lbs seed to acre).

Farmers not prepared to produce peanuts for oil are encouraged to plant peanuts for hogging off. Hogging-off peanuts is a soil building practice as well as a labor saving seeding practice. Corn yields on farms following a crop of hogging peanuts are increased as much as over seeding vetch or Austrian winter peas.

Get your peanut seed early and plant as soon after April 1 as possible to help your boy or your neighbor's boy have the food and ammunition to to protect himself with.

Old Favorites In Wartime Roles Please Family

Apples and cheese are old favorites in this pie. The crust is single and baked ahead of time. Only a small amount of cheese is required for topping. The pie may be served hot or cold.

What are your fondest memories of home? My guess is that it's the wonderful aroma of baking day in mother's kitchen!

Baking is fun and the results are more than gratifying. Not only do you enjoy the food immensely in the process of making, but there's great pleasure in placing a pie, muffins, coffee cake or whatever, that you yourself made, in front of the family.

Ovens should be checked frequently to assure success in baking. Follow baking temperature and time carefully: they'll help you get good results.

How about an apple pie tonight? Don't say you don't have time because this is as simple as Simon.

If you have ready-made-up pastry in the refrigerator, then it will be simpler than ever to whip up this pie and surprise the family: *Apple Cheese Pie.

(Serves 6)

1 cup sugar
1/4 cup water
3 to 4 tablespoons lemon juice
1 quart peeled, sliced apples
Baked 9-inch pastry shell
1/2 to 3/4 cup grated sharp American cheese

Combine sugar, water and lemon juice in saucepan and bring to a boil. Then add sliced apples and simmer, covered, until apples are soft, stirring occasionally. Arrange apples in baked pastry shell and sprinkle grated cheese over top. Place under broiler to toast cheese topping, or serve without toasting, if desired. Serve pie warm or cold, as preferred.

Since cocoa is now obtainable in limited quantities, perhaps you might like to indulge in that favorite of cakes:

One-Egg Chocolate Cake.

1 1/2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons water
5 tablespoons semi-sweet chocolate or 4 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
4 tablespoons shortening
1 egg
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and soda. Cook 2 tablespoons sugar, water and cocoa for 1 minute, stirring constantly. Cream shortening and remaining sugar together. Add egg; beat well. Add sifted dry ingredients. Add chocolate mixture, milk and vanilla. Bake in small layer cake tin or one square pan in a moderate (350 degree) oven 20 minutes for layer cake; 30 minutes for loaf cake. Frost with Seven Minute Icing.

Tea-Time Cake.

(One Cake 10 by 7 by 1 1/2 Inches And 2 Small Loaves)

1 1/2 packages fast granular yeast
1/2 cup tepid water

Lynn Says

Handy Hints: Berries and fruits will keep in perfect condition for days if stored in refrigerator, spread on a platter with a piece of parchment or waxed paper covering them completely.

Strong flavored foods stored in the refrigerator should be wrapped carefully, or would you rather have your chocolate pudding taste of onion and your beefsteak of cantaloupe?

Try a dash of ginger with chocolate icing. It's delicious.

When you don't use all your pimiento from a can, place it in a glass jar, and cover with paraffin.

- 1 teaspoon syrup or sugar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1 1/2 cups lukewarm peach juice
- 1/2 cup lukewarm water
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 1/2 cup currants or raisins
- 5 tablespoons melted shortening
- 1/2 teaspoon cloves*
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon*
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg*
- 4 to 5 cups sifted flour

*If these spices are not at hand, use 1 teaspoon vanilla extract for flavoring.

Favor the yeast into the tepid water, add the 1 teaspoon syrup or sugar, stir and let stand 5 minutes or until yeast is thoroughly softened. Put the salt and remaining sugar in the mixing bowl and pour in the peach juice and water, mixed. Add the yeast mixture and 2 cups of the flour. Beat until smooth, then blend in the beaten egg. Stir in the washed, dried currants or raisins, which have been lightly dusted with flour, and add the melted, but not hot, shortening. Sift the spices with 2 more cups of the flour and add to batter, mixing well. At this point the dough should cling to the mixing spoon. It may be necessary to add more flour.

Sprinkle 1/4 cup flour on mixing board, turn the dough onto the board, cover and let rest for 10 minutes. Knead quickly and lightly until dough is smooth and satiny. Put into a lightly greased bowl, turning the dough around in the bowl until all sides are coated with fat. Cover and set to rise in a warm place until double (about 1 1/2 hours).

Sprinkle the board liberally with flour, turn the dough onto the board, and divide in halves. Cover and let rest 10 minutes.

Your family appreciates hot breads with its dinner, and these apple muffins with bran are just the thing for hearty appetites. Serve with Swiss steak and vegetables.

To make coffee cake: Pull one-half of dough into oblong shape and finish rolling with rolling pin until about the size of pan to be used for baking. Place in the greased pan. Cover and let dough double (about 1 hour). Brush top with egg white, diluted with 1 tablespoon water. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until done. Cool, uncovered, on a rack.

To make 2 small loaves: Divide remaining half of dough into two parts and shape to fit small greased pans, filling them about half full. Cover and let rise until double. Brush tops with egg white. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes. Cool, uncovered, on a cake rack.

JESUS CRUCIFIED

LESSON TEXT: Mark 15:22-27, 29-30.
OLD TEST: He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.—Isaiah 53:5.

The crucifixion of Christ brings us to that darkest of all days in the history of the world, when wicked men with cruel hearts and hands crucified the loving Son of God. But, thanks be to God, it was also the day when bright hope shone forth for sinful humanity, for in His death Christ bore our sins upon the tree, the veil was rent, the old sacrifices were set aside, and the "new and living way" was opened into the "holiest by the blood of Jesus" (Heb. 10:20).

The cross is not just an ornament to decorate the steeple of a church, or to adorn a man. It speaks of the black horror of the cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" But it also tells of our God, who so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son as its Redeemer.

What does Calvary mean to us? It means that—

I. The Saviour Died So We Could Live (vv. 22-27).

The details of the crucifixion are of deep interest to every Christian. We stand with Luther and weep as we see Christ's unspeakable agony, not only of body but of spirit, and we cry, "God, why hast thou forsaken me?" But it also tells of our God, who so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son as its Redeemer.

There would be less careless, selfish living if we would often to the story of the death of Christ and recognize the loving, sacrificial devotion of Christ.

Equally heart-searching is the message of the cross to the unbeliever. He knows he is a sinner (Rom. 3:23); he knows that "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23), and he knows that "neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). Here at the cross he meets that one "who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness; by whose stripes ye were healed" (1 Pet. 2:24).

II. The Son Was Forsaken So We Could Be Accepted (vv. 29-30).

Awful was the railing and mocking which our Lord endured on the cross. It must have made His devoted, loving heart well-nigh break as He saw the scorn of the very ones He died to save.

Yet it was as nothing compared to that moment when He who knew no sin, "was made sin for us" (II Cor. 5:21). Bearing the awful load of the sin of the world He knew the bitter agony of being forsaken by the Father. He turned His head away and we hear that saddest of all cries, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

We cannot fathom the full meaning of that hour, we dare not attempt to explain it, we can only accept it and thank God that because He did become sin for us we may be "made the righteousness of God in Him" (II Cor. 5:21). He died that we might live. He was forsaken that we might be "accepted in" Him "the beloved" (Eph. 1:6).

After the darkness, however, comes the light. He died not as a martyr, a vanquished gladiator defeated in battle; no, there was victory.

III. The Veil Was Rent So We Could Enter (vv. 37-39).

The death of Jesus was not the pitiful weakening of a human martyr. Here was the Son of God, crying with a loud voice (v. 37), giving up His spirit to the Father (Luke 23:46), declaring that the work of redemption was "finished."

As a visible indication of that fact, and as a declaration that the old dispensation of law had given place to the new dispensation of grace, God tore the temple veil in twain. Only He could have done it.

No man could have torn this sixty-foot long, twenty-foot wide, and inch-thick curtain, and note that it was torn from top to bottom. This was the act of God. This veil had hung in the temple to keep all but the high priest out of the Holy of Holies, and he entered with fear and trembling but once a year as the representative of the people.

Now all this is changed. We have now, "brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil."

Therefore, "let us draw near with a true heart and full assurance of faith" (Heb. 10:19-22).

GROUND GRIP TIRES

THAN WITH ANY OTHER MAKE

WHEN a product wins and holds customer-preference year in and year out you know its leadership is established on merit. On every score, by every yardstick of value, it has met and passed the test of critical public appraisal.

Since Firestone developed the first practical pneumatic tractor tire 12 years ago and put the farm on rubber, farmers have shown an ever-increasing preference for Firestone Ground Grip Tires. Their point-for-point superiority is known wherever farm tractors roll. That's why farmers, today as always, use more Firestone Ground Grip Tractor Tires than any other make.

FOLK & THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Sherman was right, as has been said many, many times, War is Hell. Was in town Saturday morning when 20 or so of the boys left for Fort McPherson. It is awful, of course, when young boys are called to the Colors, or for that matter, anyone is forced to offer his life because a chosen few disagree or decide to throw the world into turmoil, but what we started to say, even morose is it brought to mind when family men are called; grown boys and girls waiting for the bus to take "daddy" away.

Speaking of going away, Bill Minor, former manager of the Yellow Front Store, asked us to give his thanks to his friends and customers. Bill was one of the boys who left Saturday morning. He says he appreciates all that has been done for him and he will be back as soon as he can wind this thing up and be ready again to serve them.

Right here we want to throw a posy to Leroy Martin. "Pee Wee" has worked long hours as Red Cross Service Chairman, and brother, if you don't think that's a job just try it some year. It'll take you that long to get started. Pee Wee is in the draft age limit. He is doing a far better job right here on the home front than he could ever do in uniform. Just in case you think it would be easy to fill his shoes, start looking around for somebody. —No, they're not here. That's the way we found it too.

J. M. Culp brought an egg into the News office the other week that was a ju-ju. It was nine inches around the long way and seven inches the short way. Mr. Culp says that it was the work of a white rock who was just trying to do "her bit" for her country. You know, some of us could take a lesson from that old hen. Not lay an egg, of course, but do something BIG for our Uncle Sam like donating to the Red Cross Drive and helping the county meet its quota.

Most appreciated letter this week comes from Pfc. Julius C. Adams. Tells us how much he appreciates the paper and how badly he would miss it if it failed to show up each week. Things like that are what make a country Editor keep going. Lord knows it couldn't be the money he makes out of it.

Jim Parrish got a letter from his son last week. He says things are going just fine. Hasn't a kick in the world. Eating regular, sleeping sometimes, resting never, but still alive and glad of it. He's on the beachhead, just South of Rome. He and his buddies have thrown back the German hordes time, and time again. You know, these Americans are a little "sot" in their ways and don't like to be pushed around.

Wonder did you ever think of how much paper plays a part in this war and for that matter, in your every day life? Here is a little item we "snitched"—we believe that the word—from a magazine or somewhere. No, we take that back, it was sent us by the government, urging folks to cut more pulpwood to make paper from. Anyway, here 'tis:

From the day a soldier goes to war, he is dependent on paper. From his his draft card to his honorable discharge, his records are kept on it.

His rations are packed in it; his cartridges are wrapped in it; his shoes are lined with it; his letters are written on it.

His barracks are built with paper wallboard, paper roofing, paper insulation.

He shoots at paper targets, eats from paper plates, drinks from paper cups. His battles are planned, his orders are issued on paper.

Literally, he lives, trains, travels and fights, with paper his indispensable ally.

And, of course, his "honorable discharge" will be handed to him on a piece of paper—after a beaten Axis has signed the peace terms—on paper.

Got a letter this week from Dallas Dickinson, who is in England. Dallas changed his address and wanted us to see that he got his paper regular. Among other things that "nigger" wanted to know if we were still dodging the Draft Board, and urged that we come on in before it was over. Just wait until that son of Ham gets back, we'll bust his yellow brains out with a shooting-stick so help us. He'll think the whole German army busted right in his face. We'll show him how to write smart letters to his "white folks."

And by-the-way, while we're about it, let's welcome to Clanton Mr. and Mrs. Holliman. Mr. Holliman is the new manager of the Yellow Front Store. He hails from Columbiana where he has been managing a Yellow Front Store. He was for five years over at Maplesville with the same company. Clanton is fortunate in having Mr. and Mrs. Holliman, may their stay be long and pleasant.

C. REESE MULLINS WRITES

CHAIRMAN McCORVEY ABOUT ILLEGAL VOTING IN PRIMARY

Hon. Gessner T. McCorvey,
Chairman State Democratic Executive Committee,
Mobile, Alabama

My Dear Sir:

I noticed your article in the Montgomery Advertiser of recent date, and note what you had to say about some frauds you thought had been pulled off in some of our southern counties in this grand old State of ours, that we love so well.

I want to congratulate you on the stand that you are taking in this matter, and say to you that I endorse every word that you had to say. This practice of fraud must be put a stop to, unless we want war in the Democratic Party, and our Party to go on the rocks. If there was ever a time when we should all pull together, and let every fellow have a square deal, and no friction in our Party it seems to me that it is now.

Now Mr. McCorvey, I want to know if you think that any candidate for State, District, or any of the county offices in the state, would be honor-bound to support the nominee in any of the Democratic Primaries, when the nomination was secured through fraud.

In my opinion, they should not, and I believe you will agree with me. Let's stop this hellish practice of fraud in our elections. It must be done, as I see it, to save the principles for which the party stands, and that our boys are fighting and dying for on the battle fields today. It seems to me that if this practice of fraud is allowed to continue we are going to have to change the form of our announcements, and say, Subject to a FAIR Democratic Primary Election to be held on a certain date.

Awaiting your reply, with much interest, I will say that I am an old-line Democrat, war-bred, and died in the wool. I hope to live to see the day, when the political waters of Alabama politics, will be purified, and the lambs can lie down with the lions without being eaten up alive.

Yours Most Truly,

C. REESE MULLINS

Hon. C. Reese Mullins,
Clanton, Alabama

Dear Mr. Mullins:

Owing to the great rush in which I have been living here lately, with the time for the qualification of candidates in our Democratic Primary drawing to a close, today is the first opportunity I have had for acknowledging receipt of your greatly appreciated letter of February 24th.

I note your inquiry as to whether or not, in my opinion, a candidate would be honor-bound to support the nominees of the Democratic Primaries when the nomination was secured through fraud, and in reply to your inquiry, I beg to advise that it occurs to me that a candidate should go ahead and support the nominees of the Party, as per his obligation, and in event he thought that any of the nominees had secured their election by fraud, then contest the election. If he could prove fraud the nomination would be withdrawn and he would not be called upon to vote for such a candidate. In other words, I don't think any of us can very well afford to take the position that we believe certain elections are crooked, and therefore we are not bound to support the nominees in Forty-two year old Thomas Macie Jones, who died as a result of the accident at Lay Dam, was one of those persons whom to meet was to like. Acquaintanceship almost inevitably developed into friendship because Macie was a friendly man—jolly, even tempered, and above all a man of high morals and a square shooter.

The numerous men who have worked with him on various construction jobs can testify to this. They are the men who were associated with him on the construction of the No. 1 plant at Gorgas in the early 1920's where he was electrician's helper and electrician; at Cherokee Bluff and Upper Tallapoosa in the middle 1920's; at Chickasaw where he was electrical sub-foreman during the construction of No. 1 unit and electrical foreman during the construction of the No. 2 unit, and at Lay Dam where he had been since July, 1943. As a workman and as a supervisor, his fine qualities won for him the respect and regard of all. A conscientious, level-headed, capable, thorough workman, he had the complete confidence of his employer. As a man he was a person to be admired. His untimely death leaves a void in the hearts of a host of friends. All who knew Macie can appreciate the great loss which his death means to his wife, Mrs. Lila L. Jones; their three year old son, Tommy, and their infant daughter, Betty Jane, and to Macie's seventeen year old son, Thomas Alford. To them sympathy of the sincerest nature is expressed.

best described as "the salt of the earth." He was born at Clanton, Alabama, October 15th, 1886, and in the 57 years of his life he achieved that greatest of all wealth, the respect of all who had occasion to associate with him.

His interest in his home and family was great. He and Mrs. Vinson had made their home a model for the neighborhood in which they lived near Clanton. The neatness with which he kept the grounds around it exemplified the thorough manner in which he performed his duties.

He was employed at Lay Dam on October 1, 1925, as a helper; later became governor man, and in October, 1931, was made a turbine operator which post he filled at the time of his tragic and untimely death.

His presence will be sorely missed not only by his fellow-workers and his many friends and acquaintances, but particularly by his wife, Mrs. Clara Mae Vinson and their son and daughter, Horace and Mae. Our deepest sympathy is extended to them and to the many to whom William Jerome Vinson's death represents a heartfelt loss.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to take this means of thanking our friends for the many kind deeds during our bad luck of losing our home by a storm. We can't express our thanks and appreciation for what the people have done for us.

May God's richest blessings rest upon each and everyone—Mr and Mrs Obie Dennis.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our thanks to our many friends for their service and assistance rendered during the recent illness and death of our wife and mother. Also thank Dr. Franklin and Dr. Robert Eiland for their faithful medical service. May God's richest blessings abide with each of you—F. I. Popwell and children.

SODA you can
use and depend on

SHIPS RETURNING from other missions, are bringing natural soda from Chile—for this year's biggest of all food production jobs. It is soda you know all about—can store and handle easily—can depend on for top and side dressing. How much will there be? That's hard to say, but last year Chile sent 1,000,000 tons to U. S. farmers and think what that would mean this year.

● Properly applied, 1,000,000 tons of Chilean Nitrate would produce 250,000,000 bu. of oats or 100,000,000 bu. of wheat 125,000,000 bu. of corn or 4,800,000 tons of forage crops; 6,000,000 tons of vegetables or 2,500,000 bales of cotton and 1,100,000 tons of cotton seed.

Natural Chilean Nitrate, always a big factor in food production, is absolutely vital this year—enough and in time for all essential needs.

Watch Your Kidneys

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. If your kidneys sometimes lag in this important job, you may feel tired, nervous, not as active as Nature intended you should be. It's not always serious, but it's important that you move impurities that, if retained, can poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headaches, attacks of dizziness, or you may wake up nights with aching in the lower back or under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and energy.

Other signs of kidney or bladder trouble are: frequent urination, burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that your present treatment is wrong. You need a good kidney medicine. Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a reputation for popularity. They are recommended by grateful people everywhere. Over. Ask your neighbor!

Their Needs Over There May Delay Your Getting Telephone Service Over Here

Telephone Switchboard in Dugout in New Guinea

Here at home we have restrictions on telephone service, so that our men at the front may have what they need in telephone equipment.

BECAUSE metals and other communication materials are so badly needed in war, it is becoming more and more difficult for the telephone company to fill service requests. In fact, facilities are now insufficient to meet the demands for service. So unless you qualify as an essential user — one whose telephone usage is essential to defense or public health, welfare or security—we regret that you may experience delay in getting service.

When facilities are available, they must be employed first for essential users. Then, from any facilities remaining, others will be served in their regular order. We will be glad to take your application for service, but a reasonable time may be required to determine if service can be furnished.

Everything possible is being done to lessen the effect of wartime restrictions on telephone service. And we look forward to the time when materials will be available, and we can again furnish the service you want when you want it.

FOLK & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Easter will be upon us right away and if you want to do yourself and your Dry Cleaner a big favor, start early having your "Spring Cleaning" done. Should you wait until the last few days to send your clothes to him—there is no guarantee that you will get them back before Easter. Remember the day, April 9, and help the Cleaner and help yourself. Send the things to him in plenty of time to get them done before the last minute rush. He'll appreciate it by doing you a better job.

You know, we're proud of our help now. Vernon Payne, our nephew, has been working in the office for the past three years. He is 15 years old. He makes up practically all the ads in the News. He can make-up the paper too if necessary. He can run the linotype machine in a pinch. He has been around a newspaper plant the most of his life. Our other worker is Ezell Cooper. Ezell is 14. He runs the presses, helps set the type, makes-up and does practically all the feeding. Any one who says the present generation is going to the dogs when you can depend on a boy 15 years of age and a boy 14 years of age for all your help; and those two boys do their job the way these two boys do theirs, will have us to contend with. We'll put our "force", considering age and experience, against any weekly newspaper force in the State, or elsewhere, when it comes to getting the job done. Who said that? Us—we don't do nothing. Just carry the kick and dodge the bill collectors. And oh yeah, both our boys go to Chilton County High School: one in Junior III, and the other in Senior I.

Have you seen the beautiful azalia in Mrs. Polk's yard? It's really worth seeing. And as usual, Jim and Katharine Wade's yard is as pretty as ever with the same flower. Gas rationing what it is, (and we're not politicking) we don't get around much anymore, to see the pretty flowers in town like we used to. It will be a gallon or two of gas well spent if you will take a ride around the town the first chance you get and see them.

This talk about Clanton not being the prettiest town it used to be, along the highway, we do not like. A traveler was heard to say this week that this was the dirtiest town that he had seen since he left the Tennessee line. Clanton has been known throughout the State and South, for many years, as being the most progressive town: hereabouts, and remarks like the one we heard, are not flattering. Can't our property owners do something about this situation? You know, pretty soon, a dirty rumor like that might be taken literally, and then where would we be? Like some characters—right in the middle of a dirty story, wouldn't we?

Clyde Mims was an investor of the Investors Syndicate. Monday morning he got a check from the company. In picking up the envelope that contained Clyde's check, the stenographer had picked up two letters at the same time and sealed the flap on his envelope to the back of another envelope—thus sending two letters stuck together, and for the price of one. In the first place, that left Clyde's letter with the check in it, open. The other letter addressed to Frances Gerald Healey, of Montreal, Canada, was stuck tight. A check for ninety-eight dollars and some odd cents was in the Healey letter—take our word for it. Clyde, however did the right thing, as always, and immediately mailed the check and letter to the gentleman in Canada. What's worrying Clyde is, if the fellow in Canada is worrying over his check like he was, there's about seven or eight sleepless nights that he would have missed if that careless stenographer had not been in such a hurry and tried to seal those letters two at a time.

We don't know this party that writes in the Scottsboro Progressive Age, but she was strictly 'on the ball' this past week when she wrote the Modern Mother Goose Rhymes. Just to prove it, we're copying a few:

If little Red Riding Hood lived today The modern girls would scorn her, She only had to face one wolf, Not one on every corner!

The moon was high
The road was dark
A perfect place
To stop and park
I gave a sigh,
I gave a moan
I cursed by fate—
I was alone!

Well, What'cha know—
Wonder what kind of town this Scottsboro is.

LETTER FROM ENGLAND TO MRS. ARTHUR COX, JR.

This letter was received by Mrs. Arthur Cox, Jr., from a war minister in England where Corp., Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Cox, is stationed. A. L. Wheeler, 54 Imber Rd. War Minister Wiltshire, Eng.

Dear Mrs. Cox:
We have come to know your hubby quite well. He has for a good while now been coming into our home and no longer do we look upon him as one of the boys from overseas. We just look upon him as a friend and brother in Christ. At times you must feel anxious and probably wonder how he is getting along, thus his letters that I get really tell me all, that of course is only natural, and no doubt you are like so many other folks. So thought perhaps that a few lines from us would help you. We have got to know Arthur very well indeed, we have told him that our home is open to him at anytime he cares to call in, we are very happy that he has accepted our invitation so we keep him very often. It must be a great comfort to you to know your hubby is a Christian and not only that, but he is anxious to do service in the cause of the Master. At the church the folks have got to know Arthur and much appreciate his faithful words of testimony. His chief delight is to be in the company of fellow Christians. He must be a great example to the boys in the camp. How we wish more of the boys were like him, we feel very sad at times when we see some of them in the conditions we do, also seeking for pleasures which will have sad results.

Your heart must be greatly cheered when you realize that you have no anxiety regarding Arthur, concerning these things. He often speaks of you and the baby, so much so that we feel that we know you. Let us continue to pray, asking God that it may soon please him to bring to naught the vain imaginations of men. So may there come the happy day of peace.

Arthur is very happy to know he has a praying wife, one who remembers him before the Throne of Grace. It is just there we are nearer to each other than anywhere else. Mrs. Wheeler and I send to you our sincerest Christian greetings. May God bless and keep you, trusting the time will not be long before this war is over so that you can look forward to the home coming of your hubby.

Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler

To Users of Electric Fences

Electric fences properly built, and with dependable controllers to govern the current flowing through them, are a convenience. However, some electric fences are a hazard; many people have been killed by coming in contact with "home made" electric fences and other types which are unsafe.

If you have an electric fence look at the controller box today. If it does not have on it a label stating "Approved by Board of Fire Underwriters" switch off the current to the fence immediately. Do not permit current to enter the fence again until you have replaced the controller box with one bearing the Board of Fire Underwriters' approval. Do this for your protection, and the protection of your neighbors.

We don't like to discontinue service to a customer. However, when we learn of electric fences in use which carry more than approved voltage or do not have controllers which bear the approval of the Board of Fire Underwriters, then human lives are endangered and we are forced to immediately discontinue service to premises to which such unsafe fences are connected.

VERNON W. MIMS WRITES FROM SOUTH PACIFIC
South West Pacific
Feb. 25, 1944

Dear Editor and Friends;
Please allow me space in your paper for a short letter.

I am a citizen of Chilton County and I have been receiving your paper for a year or more. This is my hometown paper, sent to me by my sister. I am always glad to receive it, as I like to know how my friends on the home front are getting along, and what they are doing to help win the war. Everyone seems to be doing their share. I have been overseas for 26 months in the Southwest Pacific. I think the men who have been over two years will get relieved soon.

I have noticed in the paper that a fighter plane has been named after Miss Mary Ellen Higgins and she is now employed at Gunter Field. The plane that was named after Miss Higgins is doing it's share to help win back the Peace to America. I wish to congratulate Miss Higgins and her two brothers in the service.

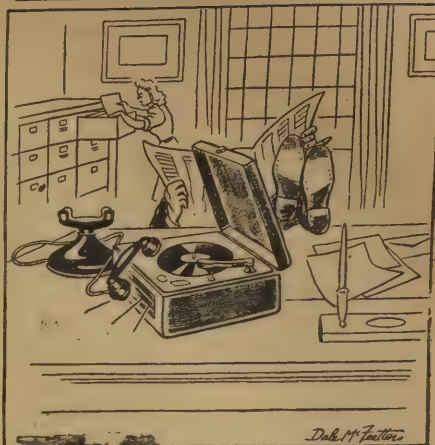

I would be glad to hear from my friends there, or anyone who cares to write me. About one-third of the fellows here are from Alabama.

I enlisted in the Coast Artillery in 1940—have been in the service for 3 years. I hope to be back with my mother and father and friends soon. I am sending my address if anyone wishes to write to me. I have been in a few air-raids here.

Yours very truly,
Vernon W. Mims.

Natural nitrate of soda shipments from Chile are arriving on satisfactory schedule. Close to half a million tons are already here, delivered or ready for delivery. Another 200,000 tons are expected and every effort is being made to get it here in time for this season's crops.

If shipping estimates hold, there will be about as much Chilean nitrate for top and side dressing as last year. But because all of it is being distributed under the government's allocation program, it may be impossible to supply all sections in the same proportions as last year.

If you cannot get Chilean nitrate when you want it remember the inconvenience is only temporary—one of many dislocations due to war.

Chilean nitrate is here in substantial quantity, but, like every good soldier, it goes where it is told and when it is told by the government.

Admirals may be admirable, but that isn't where the word comes from. It comes from an old Arabic word "amir-al" meaning "commander of." That's what the Admiral is, the top-ranking officer in the Navy. Top-ranking cigarette with our Navy men is Camel—the favorite, too with men in the Army, Marines, and Coast Guard, according to actual sales records from their service stores. Camels are a top-ranking gift, too. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and

The services were rained out Sunday and Sunday night, but we know somehow it all happened for the best. We hope lots had planned on going if the weather had been better. Activities of the Timber Production War Project, set up to increase the output of forest products, have resulted in the production of an estimated 385,000,000 board feet of essential wood products.

The Job Ahead

By Rufus T. Strohm

Dean, International Correspondence Schools

AFTER the war, more than ever before in our history, industry and business will need men and women with specialized knowledge and technical skills. A speaker at the recent meeting of the American Vocational Society in Chicago predicted that within a few years America would need twenty times as many technicians as we have today.

Our plant facilities have been greatly increased to meet the demands for war materials. To maintain capacity production in peacetime will require technicians able to convert the plants to a different type of use and to develop the manufacture of completely new products. This work will call for broad basic knowledge and for technical skill of the highest order.

Much of the technical advance which this country has made during the war has been shared with other nations or duplicated by them. In the competition for world markets when peace comes, therefore, we shall have to rely upon our technicians for fresh and continuing advances, if we are to hold our world leadership.

Furthermore, we must have enough of them to train the men released from the armed forces into skilled workers who can be absorbed by the mechanized industry of tomorrow.

For these reasons, the postwar prosperity of the nation will depend in great measure upon men with technical "know-how" both upon their ability and upon their number.

This means something personal to every worker. What you do with the job you have now will determine the job you have ahead. This is true at any time for you as an individual, but it is true now in an added sense for you as an American.

The job ahead for you—the job for which you can now be fitting yourself if you wish—is a part of the job ahead for your country. How well you are able to do your part will help determine whether this nation wins or loses the peace.

You Women Who Suffer From HOT FLASHES then CHILLY FEELINGS

If you—like so many women between the ages of 38 and 52—suffer from hot flashes, weak, dizzy, nervous feelings, distress of "irregularities", are blue at times—due to the functional middle age period in a woman's life—try taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once. It's the best known medicine you can buy that's made especially for women.

Pinkham's Compound is famous to relieve such distress. Time and again—it helps build up resistance against such annoying symptoms. It also is a fine stomachic tonic.

Thousands upon thousands of women—rich and poor alike—have reported benefits. Time and again, Lydia Pinkham's Compound has proved some women's happiest days often can be during their "40's". Follow label directions. Worth trying!

Red squill is the safest rat poison, but food poisoned with red squill must be kept out of the way of children and animals.

Moist time is here. Cleanliness, sun and air brushing, washing, and dry cleaning of the woolen garments will prevent moth infestation.

A tablespoon of kerosene thrown into a barrel of water holding water that is not used for drinking will destroy wigglers which hatch into mosquitoes.

Acid Indigestion

Relieved in 5 double your gas, acid stomach, heartburn, indigestion, flatulence, no laxative, no griping relief—takes no time to get it. Double your money or get it at all drug stores.

KEEP ON BAKING THE WITH WAR

CANDIDATE FOR THE OFFICE OF Chilton County Treasurer

I want to say now, that I hope we can have a fair partial election. I want to say to all the voters of our both men and women that I am sure the most of you by this time that I am a candidate for this office. I have former letters in our County Newspapers and from our community in both of them.

As much as I would like to see you all in person, Election to be held here on May the 2nd and 30th, impossible to do this on rationed gas. I am taking this of reaching you all through our papers and saying, though in person, here and now, that I am reasonably my election and if elected I will give the office my attention and not make the office a side-line.

I feel competent to attend to this office and worthy consideration. I shall feel greatly honored to have your vote and influence in my behalf.

This letter will appear in this paper until the election. I feel it is my personal appeal to those I will not be able to see in person.

Yours most truly,
C. Reese Mullins

- 1 HANG up your suit as soon as you're out of it. A broad-shouldered wooden hanger is best.

Flying Cross Awarded S-Sgt. James Rasco

Memphis, Tenn. — The Distinguished Flying Cross, for extraordinary achievement in battle, was awarded to S-Sgt. James S. Rasco of Jemison, Ala., at a ceremony held Monday afternoon at Kennedy General Hospital, Memphis, Tenn. Sgt Rasco is a patient here, convalescing from wounds received on a bombing mission in the Pacific theater. The award was presented by Brigadier General Royal Reynolds, commanding officer of the hospital. Sgt. Rasco is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rasco of Jemison.

The Sergeant, gunner on a B-17, was a member of a gallant crew, every one of which was cited for bravery after the fight they put up over the Bismark Sea on March 2, 1943.

On a mission to bomb an enemy convoys, the plane's crew decided to continue into action, even though supporting aircraft had not arrived at the rendezvous, their own lower turret gun was not working, and it was known that enemy aircraft were in the vicinity.
The B-17 attacked the convoy of 15 enemy ships, through intense anti-aircraft fire. Although the B-17 was badly damaged, the never-say-die crew was able to bring it safely back to base.

During the fight Sgt. Rasco suffered a shrapnel wound in the left elbow for which he is receiving treatment at Kennedy General Hospital. He was at home on a 30-day furlough in January, two years to the month after his induction into the Army.

MERCHANTS OF JEMISON WILL CLOSE

The Merchants of Jemison, Ala., will close their places of business each Wednesday at noon, beginning April 5, and continuing through the month of August.

SPIRIT OF LAY DAM

This Bomber, named by the children at the Lay Dam Grammar School, is seeing service now against the enemy. The school earned the honor of naming the ship for having the highest per capita average of any school in the county in the purchase of War Bonds and Stamps. They also won the privilege of naming two fighters.

This is the Boeing Flying Fortress, the famous high-altitude, daylight precision bomber which is operating in war theatres throughout the world.
The Boeing Fortress has four engines and a wing span of approximately 104 feet. It has a top speed in excess of 300 miles an hour, carries a bomb load up to ten tons, has a service ceiling above 40,000 feet, is heavily armed with 13 50-calibre machine guns, and is capable of operating over a long range. The Flying Fortress was designed and developed by the Boeing Aircraft Company, with plants located in Seattle and Renton, Wash., Wichita, Kans., and Vancouver B.C.

PASSENGER TRAFFIC REACHED RECORD-BREAKING HIGH

More than half of all passengers using any form of public transportation between cities last year rode on the country's 23,474 highway buses, the National Association of Motor Bus
Operators announced today.

Passenger traffic on intercity buses reached a record-breaking high of 963 million in 1943, according to the association's findings. This total represents a gain of 39.1 per cent over 1942 and is two and one-half times the riders of any peacetime year.

One-hundred and seventy-five of the nation's major bus lines accounted for 783 million of last year's passengers, while smaller operations contributed another 180 million. Reports of the larger operators show that while they carried 42.1 per cent more passengers, their operating mileage increased only 11.3 per cent.

The figures are based upon conservative projections of Interstate Commerce Commission reports which have been completed through November, 1943, of U. S. No. 1.

Blackeye Peas: Purchases will be made in carload lots, cleaned and bagged, f-o-b. cars at country shipping points, at the following prices until June 30, 1945: U. S. No. 1, $5.75 per

A Letter To The Women Of Alabama

General Eisenhower has said that he hopes to defeat Germany in 1944. His hope is based upon this one qualification: Every American will do his or her full duty. Thus far this condition has not been approached. This was not declared against men alone and if the women of America as well as the men do not come through with full support, then the men still fighting in Europe will know that they are there because of the personal motives of those they are trying to protect.
When the people here at home understand these facts they will not fall short in their efforts.

Craig Field itself needs at least seventy intelligent women for the WAC now. Very soon we shall need more as qualified men are sent overseas for combat duty. These men are going to be sent overseas regardless of whether we can replace them. But the women recruits to replace them must be secured by our own efforts and they must be obtained from this part of Alabama. We particularly need clerk-typists, teletype operators, stenographers, librarians and dental technicians but there are 235 different kinds of jobs Army women can perform.
In many of these it has been said that one woman can do as much work as two men. But if you do not already have the skill, the Army will train you in useful peacetime occupations.

Recruits in the Woman's Army Corps may choose their branch of service within the WAC. They may choose their initial assignment to a station.
After basic training at Des Moines or Fort Oglethorpe they will be sent to the station of their own choice for on-the-job training.

Those women who can qualify and wish to serve their country are requested to telephone the Craig Field Recruiting Officer, Selma 2100, Extension 342. She will make arrangements for them or any member of the clergy or any interested parents to visit the WAC Detachment to see how they live and how they work.

Is your Country worth serving? Are you worthy of your Country? I believe so.

Chairman Heard Makes Report On Red Cross Drive

Since last week's report your Red Cross workers have done some good work. Last week it looked like we would fall short in the sum of about $1,500.00 from our goal of $8,100.00.
This week by estimating every community, to do as well as they did on last year's War Chest Donation, we will still be about $750.00 short on our Red Cross quota of $8,100.00, this year.

Therefore, we urge every community to put forth its best efforts. Give everybody an opportunity to give, and tell them why larger donations are necessary. See that your community goes over the top. DO IT NOW!
WE CANNOT PUT THIS WORK

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS

Quick Pickup . . . Cookies and Milk
(See Recipes Below)

Fill the Cookie Jar

Sometimes I think the cookie jar is the favorite piece of equipment in the American home—especially in the kitchen. At least it's the most popular, and that's not just among the youngsters for many a time the oldsters make the path to the cookie jar just as often as the children.

If there are cookies in the house, then it's the kind of a house that spells "Welcome Home," for cookies are not just delightful to have, they often take the edge off hunger when it's most necessary—after school, or after a meal to give it the finishing touch.

Cookies aren't hard to make. They last longer than cakes. They take less ingredients, and they go much further. Keep a list of favorites on hand that will keep the cookie jar filled no matter how popular that jar is!

Save Used Fats!

Oatmeal and peanut butter have long been popular ingredients in cookies, but here they are together—guaranteed to be doubly popular:

Oatmeal-Peanut Butter Cookies.
(Makes 4 dozen)
¾ cup peanut butter
3 tablespoons shortening
¾ cup brown sugar
¾ cup granulated sugar
¾ cup sifted all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
¾ cup water

Cream peanut butter and shortening; add sugars gradually, creaming entire mixture. Stir in sifted dry ingredients and water. Add the uncooked oatmeal. Chill dough. Roll dough thin on lightly floured board and cut with cookie cutter. Dough may also be rolled and chilled and sliced ¼ inch thick.

Bake on a greased baking sheet in moderate (350-degree) oven for 10 to 12 minutes.

If partitioned cookies are desired, frost with powdered sugar icing when baked and decorate with candied cherries and nuts.

Hermits Bars.
¾ cup butter or substitute
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
¾ cup milk or coffee
1 cup baking molasses or sorghum
4 cups sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon soda
2 teaspoons baking powder

Lynn Says

Make Cookies! It's fun to make cookies when you have the "know-it-all" right at hand. Make it easy for yourself by following these simple directions:

Start heating the oven before you actually make the cookies so all will be in readiness when you pop the sheets in the oven.

Assemble all the equipment needed. Assemble and measure the ingredients.

Prepare cookie sheets next. If cookies contain much fat, sheets need not be greased. Pans for bars should be buttered, lined with waxed paper, then buttered again.

Shortening creams best at room temperature. It should not be melted as this injures texture and flavor of cookie.

Eggs are usually well beaten before adding to the shortening and sugar. If the quantity of eggs is small, they may be added directly to shortening and sugar.

American Seed Raisers Grow Record Crops To Meet Unprecedented Wartime Demands

S. Producers Must Make Up for European Imports Now Cut Off

A remote outpost of New Donia a sergeant bellows the door of a mess hut, "Murphy, how about those tables?"

Coming right up, Sarge!" Private Murphy moves at a clip from the camp garden, with fresh vitamins and fruits in the form of sweet tomatoes and string beans for evening meal.

The scene is not as fantastic as it sounds, even in the middle of a war according to the War Food Administration. It's a fact that Uncle Sam is sending many hundreds of thousands of vegetable seeds to all parts of the world with the armed forces. Over a permanent camp is set up and other factors are favorable to who otherwise would get of the bulky, perishable vegetables themselves raising the things they know and liked from home.

Land. Great Britain's growers, who once looked to the European seed market to answer most of their needs, faced a serious shortage. Seed requirements had increased in accordance with a 50 per cent acreage increase, while the accepted sources of supply diminished. Russia suffered a dangerous domestic seed source loss when Germany invaded the Ukraine. And other areas were in similar difficulty.

As a natural result, production of almost the entire load of vegetable seed for world needs was assumed by U. S. seedsmen.

What those growers accomplished is history, and the prospect for 1944 is for a still further increase in acreage and in yield.

The 1943 vegetable seed harvest was the largest in United States annals, latest figures showing production of 355 million pounds. This is a 81 per cent increase over the three-year (1939-41) pre-Pearl Harbor average of 198 million pounds.

Very few American farmers grow vegetable seeds as their only cash crop. However, many give vegetable seeds first place, particularly in the Pacific coast states. A government survey has shown that production of 29 out of 48 seeds topped the 1942 record harvest for a total increase of 21 million pounds over the 334 million pounds harvested last year.

Beans, peas and corn accounted for 331 million pounds of seed in 1943, 6 per cent more than the 1942 production of 313 million pounds. The figure for small or light seeds, such as beet, carrot and cucumber, totaled about 24.1 million pounds last year, 16 per cent more than the 1942 crop of 20.8 million pounds. The harvest on these small seeds fell below expectations due to a smaller yield per acre for 27 of the seeds and a total harvested acreage 16 per cent less than was intended.

Yields Multiplied.

Phenomenal increases in acreage yields on some seed were recorded. Brussels sprouts, with an increase of 371 per cent, led the list. Other large increases were 228 per cent for okra, 228 per cent for mustard, 194 per cent for kale, and 172 per cent for alfalfa.

Total crop production for 1943 exceeded 1942 by 27 million pounds, 358 per cent for dill, 343 per cent for mangoldwurtzel, 213 per cent for okra, 202 per cent for kale, 185 per cent for Chinese cabbage, 172 per cent for chichory, 165 per cent for carrot, 153 per cent for onion, and 150 per cent for leek seed. Greatest increase in total production probably will be recorded for broccoli, cabbage, romaine lettuce, pepper, kohlrabi and parsnip seed.

Larger acreages of most kinds of vegetable seed, 30 out of 48, helped offset decreased yield per acre of a majority of the crops. Biggest reductions in acre yield were reported for cabbage, 40 per cent less than 1942; broccoli, 56 per cent; pepper, 70 per cent; parsnip, 73 per cent; kohlrabi, pumpkin, chichory and cauliflower, each 78 per cent less.

Is Came From Europe.

Vegetable seeds were produced entirely in continental France to 1939. When the outbreak of last year's war, the country's other supply lines, production of cabbage and cauliflower from Denmark and Hol-lands such as clover are a source of natural nitrogen, farmers know. More seed needed for cover crops in seed estimates show.

and North Dakota also considerable drop in pro-

Enough seed for five tons of tomatoes is in the little pile on the scales. According to the department of agriculture, one ounce of seed can grow into that much, if carefully cultivated, as is the practice in Europe.

1943 was 423,391 acres, with 80,824 acres covering the small or light seeds and the remainder in garden beans, peas and corn. These figures compare with 397,294 total acreage in 1942, and 77,900 acres in the light seeds.

Production of certified seed potatoes last year set a new record, 42 per cent higher than the 1942 record crop. The harvest totaled 29,044,868 bushels, compared with 20,491,817 '42. This represents more than 6 per cent of the U. S. production of all potatoes, and is nearly 2 1/2 times the 10-year average (1932-41) of 12,619,399 bushels.

Hay and Cover Crop Seeds.

Seed for forage and cover crops is receiving more attention than usual this year. The 1944 conservation program emphasizes cover crops to help increase production, with a consequent need for more seed.

Harvest of legume and grass seeds will be encouraged in 1944 under the provisions of the Conservation Practices Program of the Agricultural Adjustment agency. Payment of $3.50 for each harvested acre will be allowed up to a maximum of 25 acres on any farm. Seeds included are legume and grass seeds with the exception of timothy, red-top, Austrian peas, Kentucky blue grass, cowpeas and soybeans.

The clover seed harvest, taken as a whole, did not fare so well. Red clover seed acreage was expanded 15 per cent, with an estimated production of 1,442,900 bushels, 11 per cent more than the 1942 crop of 1,262,100 bushels. Acres harvested were upped to 1,279,600, an increase of 189,300 acres over 1942. Yield dropped from 52 of a bushel per acre to 49 of a bushel.

Timothy seed, with an estimated 1,489,600 bushels, dropped 11 per cent below the 1942 harvest of 1,670,500 bushels of seed. The decrease is reported due to a smaller acreage (394,000), since yield per acre of 3.8 bushels is only slightly less than the 3.94 bushels for 1942 and is more than the 1932-41 average of 3.21 bushels. Harvested acreage for seeds was smaller in all important states except Wisconsin and Pennsylvania but acreage cut for hay was larger than the previous year, apparently because of a greater need for timothy hay than for the seed.

More Lepsedera.

Lepsedera seed production totaled 159,920,000 pounds, a 67 per cent increase over the 1932-41 average of 95,564,000 pounds, but 6 per cent smaller than the 1943 crop of 170,500,000 pounds. A 9 per cent reduction in yield per acre more than offset a 9 per cent increase in planted acres. Yield was only 196.5 pounds, due to summer and fall drought, as compared with 216.6 pounds in 1942. Total acres were estimated at 814,000.

The harvest during the coming season of increased amounts of grass and legume seeds, vegetable seeds and of seed crops in general is highly desirable, says the War Food Administration. It will raise the national seed supply and provide for increased domestic farm production to meet expanding war requirements for food and fiber. And it will provide seed to help meet the needs of the Allies and of the liberated countries as they are freed from Axis control. Making as much seed as possible available to European farmers when that phase of the war ends, will aid them to rehabilitate their land so that they can grow more food and fiber for themselves, thereby lowering their requirements for farm commodities from the United States.

Belt this year will be Sudan grass seed. Some states such as Illinois, Kansas, Montana, Iowa and the Dakotas, have so far had so little rainfall that grasses which help to hold the topsoil will be in unusual demand. Sudan also provides good grazing. Wells are reported dry in many states, with dust already blowing in Iowa and Kansas. Two million pounds of Sudan seed are already scheduled for import during 1944, and an increase in domestic production is being sought by WFA.

JACK BENNY'S feeling that he hadn't been given adequate publicity, and that Bob Hope and Jimmie Durante had, brought up a reminiscence about Hope. Someone said that Hope works at it—that, if he sees four soldiers standing on a street corner he grabs a pianist and does a show for them. "Back in 1938," said somebody else, "Bob was doing a summer fill-in show, and we never could find him when we'd scheduled interviews, because he'd be off somewhere doing a benefit. He did benefits for churches, for clubs, for everybody who wanted him. He thought we were crazy to expect him to spend time on a newspaper interview when he could be working hard, for nothing, for someone else."

WINE colored tulips appliqued on a pink linen frock will delight you and your admirers this spring! Make the dress in any material—a dark color takes a light applique—a pastel color takes a bright applique.

Pattern No. 8587 is in sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18 and 40. Size 12, short sleeves, requires 3 1/4 yards 36-inch material; 3/4 yard for tulip appliques.

In pressing hems, press from the bottom up. Pressing around the bottom of the skirt stretches the hem out of shape.

When the glaze begins to wear off wicker rolls and they lose their grip, a light sandpapering with coarse sandpaper may help. Use sandpaper with discretion, of course, and then wipe off with a damp cloth.

Soft soap is all right if it works. And this time it does. Nails and screws are much easier to drive if rubbed over a cake of soap first.

A girl's skirt can be made out of a pair of men's pants that are worn out in the seat. Use the bottoms of the pants for the top of the skirt and the top of pants for bottom of skirt. This makes a four-gore skirt.

No one likes greasy soap, and now we've a double reason for not wanting it—our country needs the excess grease. One way to serve both purposes is to allow the soap to harden and cool after making, then skim grease off while cold. Reheat—the results are good soap and no excess grease. And—do not forget to bring your excess fats to your meat dealer.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Window screens, rust-proof and flexible, that will roll up like shades are among the rubber products promised for post-war service by E. F. Goodrich technicians.

In 1942, automobile graveyards wrecked 2,043,000 cars. It is estimated that 1,196,000 cars will have ceased their rubber-wearing activities in 1943 through the medium of the wrecker.

Don't forget the spare in rotation first, for rubber not in service ages more rapidly than when in actual use.

At least 16 Latin-American countries have soil and climatic conditions suitable for the growing of rubber.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

FOLK & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Reading about those Japs over at Fort McClellan who refuse to fight for this country reminds us of the words coined at the beginning of the war—Love It, Or Leave It. It seems these Jap-Americans do either, so the Army has but one alternative—charge them with treason and shoot the buzzards.

We had one of our best friends tell us this week that he could tell every time we passed his house by the odor. But look, our old Ford is an oil-burner and maybe it was the car.

Suppose its alright to make mistakes like they do in Washington, but has they stopped to think—WE will pay for THEIR mistakes.

A letter comes today from Clark Headley. He's in India. Says that obscene language being forbidden in the U. S. Mails he will be unable to tell us of his love for India. He suggests that we just let the Indians keep India, and as for him, he'll take the Coosa River and Hatchett Creek about this time of year, and fight it out down there with the crappies.

One fellow we know tells of some German prisoners in Camps, breaking crates of eggs and pouring out their milk by the quart and such stuff as that — just to spite the United States. Do you think the guards of War Camps in Germany would stand for such waste as that? We imagine that it is hard for the guards of men like that to play according to the rules and the Lord only knows what keeps them from shooting the man, down who pulls a stunt like that.

That was nice publicity that the Foremost Dairy at Thorsby got last week in The Alabama Magazine. Also did right well by our new County Agent, Red Glasscock. The magazine devoted a double-spread to the Thorsby Condensary. They are planning on a formal opening along the last of April we believe. Their payroll there has reached $7,500.00. And that ain't hay.

The hat is off to our Band Director, J. F. Burton. Last week he was trying to get some Twirling Drum Major-Adjudicator Sheets donated for his coming Drum Major Contest. These sheets are for the Judges to use in judging the individual's score. Well, at the time we were pretty busy and asked him if the composition was very heavy. He said that it was, but if we would furnish the stock and let him use our presses and materials he would print them himself. We agreed. Mr. Burton came to work Saturday morning about ten o'clock, worked all that day and up into the night. Came back Sunday morning and worked until late Sunday night. He finished up Monday morning. He has worked very hard to get these sheets for his Band pupils and as he says, "There are other things to do in directing a band besides just directing." We can say this for Mr. Burton, above all things he is no quitter—he sets his goal and then has the determination to work to it.

The cavalry recruit was instructed to bridle and saddle a horse. Ten minutes later the sergeant-major came along for his mount and found the recruit holding the bridle close to the horses head. "What are you waiting for," he asked. "For the horse to yawn," answered the recruit.

Comes a letter, V-Mail, from Willard Tucker and the South Seas. Says this Jungle fighting isn't what it's cracked up to be, but there's a job to do and he is doing his part of it. Good boy, Willard, may the best men win. That could be nobody but you boys—the salt of the earth, and don't ever think the folks in your home county back here in Alabama aren't

New Truck Program Announced By ODT

A new program designed to gain full utilization of heavy duty over the road trucks by requiring empty and partially loaded trucks to register with the Office of Defense Transportation in order to get a full load before making a trip has been launched by the ODT, effective Monday, March 27.

Under the new program, registration facilities will be established at all ODT District Offices; there are three in Alabama (Birmingham, Montgomery and Mobile); 24 in the southeast; and 142 throughout the nation.

Common carriers registering partially loaded trucks may be directed to accept and transport freight registered in the District Offices, or if the truck is empty, the common carrier may be required to lease it to a contract carrier or another common carrier. Private and contract carriers will not be required to register partially loaded trucks, but must register empty trucks.

The District Manager may direct that the empty trucks be leased to other carriers.

In the event a carrier's empty or partially loaded truck is not near an ODT Office, he is still required to communicate with shippers or other carriers in the vicinity if he is a common carrier and with other carriers if he is a private or contract carrier, for the purpose of acquiring a capacity load or leasing his empty vehicle.

Tank trucks, certain truck operations conducted by farmers, vehicles whose total weight and normal loads combined do not exceed 12,000 pounds are exempt from the order.

Reports may be made by telephone and callers have been requested to ask for "Traffic Registration" when reporting to the District Offices.

Who Profits Most from L & N Service?

In the 94 years of its life the L & N has aided in the enormous development of the South and welded together a wide expanse of Southern territory.

Its contribution in taxes to the support of government, including schools and highways—its purchases as well as those of its employees—its movement of traffic in peacetimes and its essential service in wartime—all have insured to the great benefit of the general public. It now moves a ton of average freight—coal to cologne—one mile for less than one cent, the price of sending a post card.

Who got the lion's share of its 1943 gross revenues—the greatest year in its history? Read the astonishing figures:

$77,500,000 to 33,000 employees as wages and salaries
$68,000,000 to National, State and Local Government as taxes
$34,400,000 to industry for materials and supplies
$8,350,000 to bondholders as interest
$8,190,000 to stockholders as dividends

Note that 8,000 L & N stockholders in 47 states received in dividends only about one-ninth of what went to the workers, and about one-eighth of what was paid in taxes. Does any other private industry come so nearly to being of the people, by the people, for the people?

The immediate purpose of the Old Reliable is to help in winning this ghastly war. It is already looking forward to postwar improvements and modernized service. It asks no selfish favor but only treatment equal to that given its competitors—and in keeping with its public usefulness.

GRAZING CROP SUGGESTIONS

To economically support Chilton County's increased numbers of live-stock and to prepare for a future in-crease, make preparations now to feed them on the farm.

The suggestions given below are offered as aids in maintaining livestock productively and cheaply:

1. Complete Spring seeding of pasture. Top dress established pastures with phosphate or basic slag.
2. Prepare land for kudzu setting immediately and set crowns as soon as ground settles. Kudzu crown orders though AAA are being received faster than crowns can be dug. Where possible, dig crowns on the farm or on a nearby farm. Top dress established stands of kudzu with phosphate or basic slag.
3. Get seed of soybean, sudan grass, or cow peas for temporary grazing.
4. Prepare land and obtain seed for sericea.
5. Seed annual lespedeza on small grain and other good hay producing areas in March.
6. Prepare peanut land for fall and winter hog grazing.
7. Many pasture plant and legume seeds are very scarce, get seeds on farm as soon as possible.

Grain Crop Suggestions for March:

1. Make every acre of corn produce every bushel possible. Follow experiment station recommendations for variety, planting dates, fertilizer and cultivation of corn.

Bulletins giving detailed information on above are available at the County Agent's Office. Call or write for your copy. Pre-War (1927-1936) cost of producing corn in Alabama is $1.31 per bushel. Increasing per acre yield of corn will eliminate this too high cost of production expense.

2. High yields of grain sorghum have been produced in Chilton County following oats. Get Hegari or other

Farm Draft Deferment Not Dependent On AAA

Auburn, Ala. — Alabama farmers are not required to execute 1944 AAA farm plan sheet in order to be eligible for draft deferment or to receive rationed farm machinery.

"We have received information from various States indicating a general impression that farmers will be required to execute a AAA Farm Plan Sheet in order to be eligible for draft deferment as an essential agricultural worker, or to get consideration by Farm Machinery Rationing Committees for needed machinery," says A. W. Jones, AAA administrative officer, in a letter to county agents, county committeemen and county administrative officers.

"AAA farm plan sheets are designed to give farmers information relative to food needs created by the emergency of war; to give the War Food Administration an indication of farmers' intentions toward meeting this need; to point out to farmers the materials, seeds and services offered by the AAA that will be of help toward meeting these food production goals; and to assist farmers in planning the maximum production of the needed food crops and livestock which each farm is best prepared to produce."

"Although the information on the AAA farm plan sheet may later be referred to by County War Boards in connection with applications for draft deferment or by Farm Machinery Rationing Committees in considering the relative needs of farms for rationed machinery, it is by no means a requirement that the AAA farm plan sheet be executed in order to establish eligibility on the part of any farmer for draft deferment, or rationed farm machinery."

grain sorghum seed for late May or early June planting.

The present increased numbers of livestock on Chilton County farms can be profitably held only through carefully planned feeding practices. Keep them grazing as long as possible and supplement the pasture crops with home grown grains.

If there is enough closet space, the housewife will save time by hanging shirts on coat hangers instead of folding them up as they are ironed.

A few grains of salt added just before coffee is served brings out the best flavor.

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

A close relative of mine thought to be very nice to an Aunt who was in need, and just before Christmas she wrote her that she was remembering her with a check. When the letter was completed she pulled a blank check from her pad and placed it in with the letter and sealed the envelope. A few days later she had a letter of thanks from the Aunt saying, "Your check came all right, but you failed to fill it out and it was worthless to me." She had sent her a check to be sure, but it was not filled out and not signed, and it carried no help. That is the way that we send the most of our prayers to the Throne of God. We fail to sign them with our faith and they are no good to God or to any one else.

When travel was scattering in the early morning hours the old bridge keeper would close the gate and take a nap. He was called so often until he formed the habit of answering, "Coming Sir," in his sleep. Being called many times and answering, "Coming Sir," and never appearing, the traveler pushed open the door and rolled him out of bed. "I beg your pardon," said the old man, "I must have answered in my sleep," and so he had. This same thing is true of many who hear the call of the Gospel. They answer by habit, "Coming, Lord," and they never come. The sleeping habit in the church is hindering much the call of the Gospel.

When Governor Hughes was beginning to plan the passage of his anti-race track, gambling bill, he was warned by one of his friends that he would be ruined politically and that his name would be defamed by the opposition who would stop at nothing in order to hurt him. The grand old Governor replied, "There is only one man in this world, gentlemen, who can harm Charles E. Hughes and that man's name is Charles E. Hughes." You may get the idea that men can ruin you, but if you keep yourself, there is no power on earth that can reach your own heart. Governor Hughes knew that he was right, and he dared to do right. From the contest he came out a finer man than if he had feared and then gave under.

In a lecture room of the New York University there arose a din that rumbled and cracked like huge machinery and the students rushed out to learn the cause. Dr. Free, their interesting and well-loved Chemist and Physicist, informed the disturbed students that the noise that they had heard was only the sound that some young weevils were making as they ate their way out of some wheat grains; noises that he had amplified by a new device that he had made. He informed the students that the purr of a cat magnified on the same scale could be heard for three thousand miles. If a man can magnify the gnawing of a weevil in a grain of wheat so that the noise will disturb a student body beyond a brick wall. Do you think it impossible for God to hear us when we speak?

A lady informed me that she and her husband were riding along in their car and came to a bridge that was condemned. It was very dangerous, but they were in a great hurry and thought that they could not go around. In desperation the wife told her husband to drive on and she would close her eyes until they were over the bridge. This woman was so much like many people of today, who know that certain ways of living are dangerous indeed, but they close their eyes to the danger and drive on. Some may pass over in safety, but the vast majority go down when they drive over a condemned way of life. It is better to go around when a bridge is condemned.

Passing a man washing a window I saw him scrubbing hard on a badly soiled place, but the stain would not come off. He put more soap on it and scrubbed the harder, but still it was there. After watching him for a few moments I remarked, "Sam, that stain is on the inside of the window." After going on the inside and giving one stroke with his mop the stain was gone. When you find soiled places in your character, you may scrub it with New Year resolutions, and apply the soap of morality, but the only way to make clean your heart and life is to clean up the inside. Nothing but the blood of Jesus Christ can wash clean the stain spots of sin.

EDIBLE SOYBEANS EASY TO PRODUCE

Auburn, Ala. — Results of experiments at the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station indicate that it is easy to grow edible soybeans if the same methods are used as in growing other varieties of edible beans.

For best yields soybeans should be planted before the middle of May although later plantings have been successful in the Gulf Coast counties. Usually soybeans are resistant to insect attack.

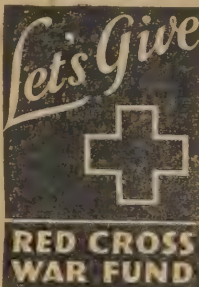

The best varieties for Alabama are Rokusun, Tokyo, Seminole, and Cherokee. These are intermediate and late varieties.

NO CLOSED SEASON ON FARM FISH PONDS

Auburn, Ala. — "There is no closed season on catching bass or any other fish in privately owned farm ponds," reports A. M. Pearson, wildlife specialist of the Alabama Extension Service. The State law closing the season on bass fishing in public waters does not apply to privately owned ponds.

Research conducted at the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station has shown that there is no justification for any closed season in farm ponds, says Mr. Pearson in advising owners of private ponds to "catch them when they are biting best."

Private waters are defined as any body of water wholly on lands held in fee or in trust, or under lease by any one person, firm, corporation, or club and include impoundments that are wholly on lands held in fee or in trust or under lease by any one person, firm, corporation, or club, and regardless of the extent of the impounded stream provided such stream is non-navigable.

NOTICE

Take Notice. On and after April 3rd, 1944, the dog ordinance of the City of Clanton, Alabama, will be enforced to the letter. All dogs found running at large will be taken up and impounded, those that cannot be caught, if the owner can be ascertained, they will be prosecuted for allowing said dog or dogs to run at large.

CANDIDATE FOR THE OFFICE OF
Chilton County Treasurer

I want to say now, that I hope we can have a fair and impartial election. I want to say to all the voters of our County, both men and women that I am sure the most of you know by this time that I am a candidate for this office, from my former letters in our County Newspapers and from my announcement now in both of them.

As much as I would like to see you all in person before our Election to be held here on May the 2nd and 30th, it will be impossible to do this on rationed gas. I am taking this method of reaching you all through our papers and saying to you as though in person, here and now, that I am reasonably sure of my election and if elected I will give the office my undivided attention and not make the office a side-line.

I feel competent to attend to this office and worthy of your consideration. I shall feel greatly honored to have your vote and influence in my behalf.

This letter will appear in this paper until the election as my personal appeal to those I will not be able to see in person.

Yours most truly,

C. Reese Mullins.

Tomato Plants

Raised from the best certified seed that can be bought. This means the seed is produced under the supervision of experienced and qualified seed-breeders. They are rigidly selected and bred for earliness, productivity and uniformity in size, shape and color.

We grow our plants in sterilized soil—a precaution many growers do not take because it means added labor and expense. We do this to insure your getting the very best quality plants—the kind you can make better, bigger crops and more money with.

Please remember these facts! Our vegetable plants are NOT hot-bed grown. We do NOT use bottom heat or keep our greenhouses hot. We have double top ventilators and continuous side ventilators. By opening these ventilators, it is like having the plants outside. Our plants are air-hardened and grown cool. They get strong sunlight. They are NOT hot-house plants, because we keep our greenhouses cool and well ventilated.

Although our plants are better grown, and worth more than ordinary plants, our prices are low. (See prices below).

Another advantage is that when you get your plants from us, you are sure they are fresh, and have not been heated or chilled or dried out or delayed in shipping. Any one of these is very injurious to plants of any kind, especially tomato.

We invite you to come and see the plants we are raising.

We sell them in large or small quantities—by the dozen or by the thousand.

We are sold out of onion plants but have plenty of fine, frost-proof cabbage plants for sale at 35c per 100; $2.75 per 1,000; 5,000, $2.50 per thousand; ten thousand or more, $2.00 per thousand.

Everyone knows that plants pulled from the ground and planted right away live and grow better.

Tomato plants are 10c per dozen; 65c per hundred; $3.50 for one thousand; five thousand at $3.25 per thousand; ten thousand or more at $3.00 per thousand.

Come and see our plants. See for yourself how fine they are. We will grow about a half million tomato plants, Super Marglobe and Rutgers — Marglobe ready now — Rutgers ready in about three weeks.

SWEET POTATO PLANTS

Place your order with us now for Improved Copper Skin sweet potato plants from certified seed. We are growing about three hundred thousand of these plants. Will start pulling about April 15th. We will sell these plants at market price.

Come on, folks, let's raise more food for victory! Get your plants from us and raise more per acre with them.

Belated Birthday Gift

For Sister Is One Zero

BOUGAINVILLE!—Marine Fighter Pilot James M. Pughe, Craig, Colo., was too busy fighting Japs to send his sister a present for her 17th birthday so he did the next best thing. He shot down a Zero.

"I know it will make my sister, Mary Elizabeth, happy when she hears I shot down my first Zero today," remarked First Lieutenant Pughe shortly after he returned from a fight with Zeros over the big enemy base at Rabaul.

"Shoot down a Jap plane for me," I got her one for a birthday present."

A member of the Hell's Angels, a marine fighter squadron, Lieutenant Pughe was in a 51-plane sweep over Rabaul when he made his first contact with Jap airman.

Lieutenant Pughe gave up a law career in 1942, leaving George Washington university, Washington, D. C., to become an aviator cadet. He won his wings in May, 1943.

BUILDING MATERIAL

FORCES, SAYS WMC

Alabamians who contemplate construction this year of anything from chicken coops to homes might as well forget about it, unless they can build from scraps they already have or prove that their needs are greater than those of the armed forces.

Non-essential civilian uses of lumber are out, according to Frank W. Rasor, of the Timber Production War Project, and even war needs cannot be fully met unless more workers are secured without delay.

The normal weekly output of the 556 Alabama Mills which have closed due to shortage of workers totals 12,714,000 board feet, according to W. T. Rasor. The 1,228 mills still in operation are doing their best, he asserted, although short of manpower.

"Which means," said Mr. Rasor, that Alabama, third largest lumber producing State in the country, exceeded only by Washington and Oregon, must have more workers or fail to meet war needs for lumber."

For that reason the Timber Production War Project, of the U. S. Forest Service, joins with the War Manpower Commission in urging all who are free to do so, and can work in lumbering to apply for work immediately to the nearest lumber or pulpwood operator or see the nearest War Manpower Commission Employment Office.

"Thanks largely to the farmers of Alabama, who worked in the lumber industry during their off season, Alabama led the South in lumber production in January of this year. Alabama produced 170,192 feet of lumber of all species, Georgia coming second with 136,136 and Louisiana a close third with 135,681 board feet.

"But now, farmers must work at their own trade. True, many are patriotically devoting days when they cannot farm to lumbering, but that's not enough, for more recruits are necessary.

"There are literally thousands of war needs for lumber and the more successful we are on the fighting front the greater will be the demand for lumber."

Where the PULPWOOD SHORTAGE hits the farmer

Over 1/4 of all pulpwood is used in packaging farm products

THE FARMERS of this country responded patriotically to the appeal for more pulpwood. They cut wood because their country needed it. Few of them stopped to think that their own business of food production was threatened by the pulpwood shortage. Already there have been cases where packing plants were unable to accept perishables because they could not get packing materials; and the distribution of food may be seriously upset this year unless the pulpwood shortage can be overcome.

So the farmer who cuts pulpwood is not only helping his country meet a serious wartime shortage; he is also adding to his income, improving his draft deferment status, and helping to provide for the packaging and distribution of his own farm products. Cut your pulpwood now!

THIS IS THE SOUTH'S RESPONSIBILITY

Most Southern pulpwood goes into packaging materials. Southern pine is particularly suited to making strong, tough wrapping papers and container boards, vitally needed not only for our armed services but also by our home food production program.

Sulfonamide Use

Treat Common Colds

are opposed to the routine use of sulfonamides in the treatment of common cold but favor their use in a few selected cases as a means of preventing a severe secondary infection," Russell L. Cecil, New York; Maj. Norman E. Medical Corps, Army of the United States, and Wilson G. M. D. New York, declared in the Journal of the American Medical Association. Their statement is an outcome obtained in a study to determine the effects of sulfonamides on the bacteria in the nose and throat of persons suffering from a cold, and to ascertain, also, the indications for the use of sulfonamide treatment in upper respiratory tract infection that follows colds, estimating the time to be expected in such cases for recovery.

Twenty-two colds in different persons were clinically and biologically, 48 received sulfonamide 3.0 grams daily by mouth for seven days, while 24 served as controls. Following sulfadiazine, the bacteria in the nose and upper throat were killed by serial cultures. A uniform decrease in total number of organisms and a check on growth of disease-causing bacteria. The clinical course of the treated showed no striking difference from that of the controls, the three latter say, "however, there is some amelioration of the cold to be control of secondary infection."

Hardy Shrubs

Anytime During Winter

Shrubs that bloom on wood can be pruned anytime during the winter without destroying the next bloom. This pruning is done on all dead or diseased branches and by thinning. Most of the pruning should be done on the oldest branches as near and as possible. A final de-limbing can be done by cutting branches in the head of the plant. These cuts should be made about one-fourth inch above or joint.

Spring flowering shrubs should be pruned only in the one or two weeks after they are through blooming. This is to be main- tained after year.

Trees can also be pruned in the winter. All dead and diseased branches should be removed. The branches should be where they are too close together.

Narrow crotches should be maintained when it is reasonable. All cuts should be made on the trunk or branch; do not leave stubs. Care should be taken to maintain the natural shape of the tree.

Rayon Insulator

Rayon yarn has replaced insulating interior telephone wires. The properties re- quired for telephone central-office cables are stability in elec- tric characteristics under varying conditions and good properties. Experience has shown that the electrical prop- erties of rayon are its entire- ly aging properties. The covering is used today in the covering of switchboard switchboard cable wires and in the wiring of frame wires.

Chileans Draw Dividends

On School Investments

For more than six years a novel school construction program with a present record of one new school building a week has been giving Chileans a twofold return on their money. The plan enables citizens of this progressive South American republic to invest directly in schools as they might in any other enter- prise and pays them a double divi- dend in cash and in a sound educa- tional system for their children, through the operations of the federal Sociedad Constructora de Estable- cimientos Educativos.

Each of the buildings is an at- tractive, efficient, earthquake-proof structure of brick, concrete or wood, with wooden construction predomi- nating in rural areas. The design of the buildings stresses functional- ity, with special attention given to safety, durability, hygienic condi- tions and interior planning for max- imum technical and teaching ef- ficiency. Every one of the buildings, the result of several years of study of model schools in other countries, is equipped with complete medical dental facilities.

With its original capitalization of 210,000,000 pesos recently raised by law to 500,000,000 pesos, the Sociedad is preparing to better its present record of one new building a week. Three-fifths of its capital stock is underwritten by the Chilean govern- ment, while the remaining 200,000,000 pesos is offered for sale to the general public at 1,000 pesos a share. The Chilean peso is worth approx- imately five cents in United States money.

A minimum dividend of 8 per cent, for example, is guaranteed by law on their investment, one of the safest in the country. Moreover, the dividend is exempted from gross income taxes and from the Class 2 income tax of 14 per cent. In addition, the gov- ernment accepts shares of the Socie- dad in payment of inheritance and gift taxes, with a premium of 8.85 pesos added to the value of each share presented in payment of these taxes. As the assets of the Sociedad increase, the value of shares in- creases proportionately.

Comet of 1882
The famous comet of 1882, some- times called Gould's comet in honor of the astronomer who first reported it, was visible about nine months, an unusual interval. It was visible to the naked eye during September. The fact that it was not generally observed by the public over this period was due undoubtedly to the fact that it could be seen only in the early morning hours. The brightest comet of the century, it was one of a group of comets all following nearly in the same orbit. The tail was extraordinary, measuring about 200,000,000 miles in length and strongly forked at the end. It was surrounded by an elliptical filmy sheath of enormous dimensions.

Grape Varieties

Grapes with larger berries, earlier ripening habits and a vigor never before known among grapes may well be the result of breeding experiments carried on in several parts of the world. Some of these new varieties are already being grown commercially, particularly the Muscat Cannon Hall. Others have been produced in the United States and in Japan. At present most of these varieties have defects such as poor growth, irregular setting of fruit and low yields that prevent them from being accepted for commercial pro- duction, it is said.

Banana Shipping

Fast, dependable shipping is a prime essential to the banana in- dustry. The banana industry also requires a quarter of a million acres of highly improved land, bearing continuously all year around; about half-a-billion dollars of United States and Middle American investments; in every normal year pays more than six million dollars in direct re- venue to the Middle American gov- ernments, at least 30 million dollars in cash wages to employees in Mid- dle America, and at least 30 mil- lion dollars more in purchases of tropical products.

Sturdy Oaks

Sturdy oaks and hickory switches come by their fame rightly for they have real stuff in them. This is in- dicated by the fact that a cord of shagbark hickory or white oak will, when properly cured, produce more heat units than a ton of coal. How- ever, oaks and hickories have other values more important than using them for fuel wood. Trees which make good timber are the ones which should be cut for fuel. Such trees are gray birch, red maple, black cherry, pitch pine, balsam fir, hop hornbeam, black locust and oaks. The oaks and hickories are the oaks, white pines, the spruces, birches other than gray, shagbark hickory, sugar maple, beech, and cherry. Crooked or diseased trees of these good types of oaks are another matter and should be re- moved.

De-Linted Cotton Seed

Improves Spring Stand

Cotton growers, who wish to im- prove their chances of getting a full stand of cotton in the spring, should plan to treat their seed with cesaran seed oil, and that seed treatment, it is said, Farmers have found from years of experience that the treatment of cotton seed allows them to plant the crop slightly earlier in the spring and that seed treat- ment gives them relatively better stands under adverse weather con- ditions. When all conditions are fa- vorable for the germination of cotton seed, the good results of seed treat- ment are not marked.

With reginned cotton seed, there is not only quicker germination but also a gain in cotton lint. Many of the large cotton breeders are now having all of their seed de-linted so that the growers who use them may get an earlier stand.

Under boll weevil conditions, growers have realized that a good stand of early cotton pays a large part in the success of the crop. With a full crop of fruit set early in the season, boll weevil control measures pay larger than average dividends.

Corduroy Woes Long Life

To Washing Properties

Because it is highly practical, corduroy seems to have been adopted by the high school and college group as a "cool" thing for the campus year. It is being shown in dresses, jumpers, skirts, and jackets in warm colors. Of course, corduroy is no newcomer to the fabric field, nor even to the campus. The boys popularized it several years ago when "cords" were as prevalent as khaki is today.

The material drapes prettily, and wears like iron. This is good news to the girls like those when every item of the wardrobe should "wear and wear" like the famous Alice Blue Gown. Corduroy owes part of its longevity to the fact that it will wash. It can go in the tub over and over again, and if it is given the right soap and water treatment will always look lovely.

The thing to avoid is matting down the soft nap, and that is accom- plished by not wringing the fabric at any point in the washing pro- cedure. Dunk it first into lukewarm sudsy water, and keep dousing it up and down until the soil is out of the fibers. Then, without wringing or twisting, lift it into a succession of lukewarm rinse waters. After the last rinse, place the soaking gar- ment on a clothes hanger to dry.

Clothes leave a mark on the nap, so they should not be used. The water that runs down to the bottom of the garment should be blotted up with a cloth or towel from time to time until the dripping stops. Another method is to roll the whole dripping dress in a soft towel before placing it on a hanger. This is more practical if drying is done indoors.

Observe Precautions in Keeping Medicine Chest

Keep the medicine chest out of children's reach, or keep it locked. Label all medicines plainly. Read directions carefully. When measur- ing medicines, remove the cork, wipe the neck of the bottle, measure the medicine, and wipe the neck of the bottle again before replacing the cork. Pour medicine from the side of the bottle opposite the label to keep the label clean.

Write on the label the date you bought the medicine and how it is to be used.

Keep poisons in specially shaped, dark bottles and use stoppers dif- ferent from ordinary ones.

"Spring clean" your medicine chest twice a year and throw away old medicines. Liquid drugs evapo- rate. Pills and tablets deteriorate with age.

Prescriptions which have been used during an illness should not be kept indefinitely.

Ring Rot Control

Experimental work indicates that disinfection of the cutting knife aids very materially in preventing the spread of potato ring rot. Two kinds of material, B.K. solution and boiling water have proved effective. Several growers have constructed cutting tables with rotary knives which run continuously in the dis- infecting solution. In addition to the benefit derived from the control of ring rot, some growers report de- creases in the amount of blanking by the use of this method of cutting. The picker type planter was found to spread the disease much more than the assist feed type. This was true for both whole and cut seed.

Seed growers should use extra precautions to avoid the disease. Known sources of infection are: (1) used sacks brought onto the place for field bags, seed bags or bags in which seed is to be sold; (2) potato machinery borrowed or purchased from other farms without proper dis- infection; (3) workmen's gloves and knives used at one farm and then another; (4) infected cellars and bins; and (5) potatoes brought onto the farm from other farms.

Save Lambs

It is as important to save lambs after they arrive as it is to make careful plans for lambing time.

It is suggested that the flock should be looked at first thing in the morn- ing during the lambing season, about twice during the day, and the last thing at night before retiring. It may even be necessary to spend some time during the night with the flock.

For the first day after lambing, the ewe should be given only fresh water and hay. She should then be gradually put on a feed of about 10 pounds of grain mixture per head daily and all the good legume hay she will clean up. A green winter pasture should be provided, where- ever practical.

The lambs will start to graze and eat grain and hay when a few weeks old. If they are not getting enough milk, they should be given a grain mixture in a creep. A mixture of two parts of corn, two of oats, and one of cottonseed meal is satisfac- tory.

Officer Output Is Cut

To Tenth of High Mark

WASHINGTON.—The army's of- ficer candidate schools, with a total of 246,000 graduates, have been re- duced to a monthly graduation list of 2,500 to 3,000 with a further cut in prospect, Undersecretary of War Robert F. Patterson reported. The schools, which gave enlisted men an opportunity to win officers' commis- sions, reached a peak of 23,000 gradu- ates in December, 1942.

Between June, 1942, and Novem- ber, 1943, almost 15,000 of the gradu- ates were enlisted men selected in the combat areas and sent home for training. In addition, four officer candidate schools were established overseas and have graduated about 2,500 men; three of these schools have been suspended, however, and the one in Australia is the only over- seas OCS still operating.

In addition to OCS graduates, theater commanders overseas have given commissions directly to about 10,000 enlisted men, warrant officers and flight officers and a number of civilians, and the army in the United States has commissioned directly about 9,000 enlisted men and 5,000 warrant and flight officers.

Of the 26 officer candidate schools one operating in this country, seven have been discontinued and four are no longer accepting candidates.

Real Buck Private Is

'Captured' in South

CAMP ROBINSON, ARK.—When "prisoners of war" were lined up before examining officers in an in- tra-regimental field exercise of the 66th division, one wary "prisoner" was asked to identify himself.

"Buck, Private, 31342151, sir," he replied.

"Soldier," growled the officer, "there's nothing to prevent you from giving your correct name, rank and serial number."

But apologies were due from the officer, the "prisoner" was Buck Private after all—Pfc. Arthur L. Buck of Company E.

He Shows He Has Grit

On Infiltration Course

FORT DEVENS, MASS.—A recep- tion center officer really took a bite out of the live fire infiltration course. He was crawling under a barbed wire entanglement on the course when it happened. He opened his mouth to take a deep breath and just then a land mine—simulating artillery fire—went off right beside him. Up into the air shot his set of false uppers.

He floundered around under the barbed wire and finally located the teeth, shoving them back into his mouth, dirt and all. After that it took a lot of grit to reach the finish line.

Salt Meat

To get the right amount of salt in curing meat, swine specialists suggest that you use a mixture of 8 pounds of salt, 3 pounds of sugar, and 3 ounces of saltpeter per 100 pounds of meat. It should be cured for four to six weeks, depending on the size of the pieces to be cured. They also suggest that cuts be made smooth, as rough and ragged cuts cannot be properly wrapped for fu- ture storage and skipper protection. Growers who wish information on butchering, cutting and curing pork should write for a free copy of Ex- tension Circular No. 232 to the Agri- cultural Editor, State College, Raleigh, N. C.

Half-Million Workers

Needed by Canneries

WASHINGTON.—Food produc- tion requirements in 1944 will ne- cessitate recruiting an army of 500,000 cannery workers in 25 fruit and vegetable producing states, Paul V. McNutt, director of the War Manpower commis- sion, said recently.

Cannery food quotas are larger this year than in 1943, McNutt said.

Sparks Knocks Federal Aid For Schools

MONTGOMERY—Opposite views on Federal aid for education were expressed by Gov. Chauncey Sparks, and Dr. B. B. Norton, State Superintendent of Education, in addresses before the recent Alabama Educational Association convention at Birmingham. They agreed in opposing Federal control of Alabama's schools, but Gov. Sparks voiced conviction that Federal aid would inevitably mean Federal interference, while Dr. Norton held that it is possible to get the aid, without.

"I oppose Federal contribution to the educational system in Alabama, except in specific form, such as agricultural extension work, vocational training and rehabilitation," Gov. Sparks told the assembled teachers. "If the Federal government were to give us $10,000,000 to be used in promoting general education in Alabama, inevitably there would follow from it Federal interference in our control. No genuine Southerner is in favor of this Federalization of our schools."

He said there is none who would be in favor of Federal aid if he thought control would be passed from Alabama to Washington. There is only the thin veil of political promise that this will not be done. Such promises are only believed by the unscrupulous. Experience denies and disputes such a promise. Inevitably, there would be interference with local autonomy which has been built upon necessity, upon experience and upon the best interests of the white and colored races."

Dr. Norton said supporters of Federal aid are opposed to Federal control and cited "safeguards" in pending legislation which he declared "would definitely prohibit Federal control of education." Instead of bringing out difficulties over segregation, Federal aid would help States to meet the requirements of Supreme Court decisions already made, and thus help insure our right to maintain separate schools." Dr. Norton said: "The absence of Federal aid constitutes the greatest threat to our system of separate schools in the face of Supreme Court decisions already announced."

While differing on Federal aid, both Gov. Sparks and Dr. Norton agreed that Alabama has made great strides in education in recent years, and cited impressive figures showing educational gains. "I wish here to express official appreciation for the measure of progress that has already come to Alabama schools under the present administration, and to state my confidence that Gov. Sparks and our State legislature will continue to give sympathetic and intelligent attention to the problems of public education," Dr. Norton said.

County Schools

Change Schedule

Monday, April 10th

To The People of Chilton County:

The Board of Education has authorized a revision of school schedules in an effort to relieve the critical farm labor situation. Beginning next Monday, April 10, all schools will open at 8:00 o'clock and close at 1:30 o'clock, war time. This will enable children to work from four to five hours after school.

The short schedule was authorized by the board after a careful study of conditions in the county. Many children were found to be non-essential to farm operation, but a large number of cases were found where school children are the only persons available for farm production. In many other farm families children are badly needed to aid their parents in cultivating large crops.

Schools will not be as efficient on the short day as they are when operating on a full schedule. Teachers are planning their assignments, and schedules so that a short day will have as little effect as possible on the school's efficiency, but some benefits from the school program will necessarily be lost by changing to a short day. This can be justified only as an emergency measure necessary during the critical war period.

Children cannot give adequate attention to school work and farm work at the same time, but conditions make a compromise between the two necessary.

Parents are urged to cooperate fully with the schools during this emergency. Children should be kept in school every day by planning farm work so that it may be done in the afternoons and on Saturdays. Lunchrooms are expected to continue in operation so that children may be adequately nourished for work in the after-school hours.

Sincerely yours,

D. P. CULP,

Superintendent

stocks in short pieces and prepare a sauce from the flour, fat, milk and asparagus water, then add the tabasco sauce and salt. In a greased baking dish, place a layer of the cooked spaghetti, then one of asparagus. Cover with sauce and continue until all ingredients are used. Cover top with buttered crumbs. Top with grated cheese, if desired. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until heated, about 20 minutes.

You'll be getting the most out of your money if you serve this low-oil chicken casserole. It's thrifty but full of nutrition:

*Chicken Noodle Paprika. (Serves 6 to 8)

- 1/4 pound medium-cut egg noodles
- 4 cups boiling water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup diced carrots
- 1/4 cup diced celery
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1/4 cup onion, cut fine
- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 1 1/2 cups chicken stock or gravy
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1/4 cup minced, cooked chicken

To the boiling water add salt and egg noodles. Cook until all water is absorbed and noodles are tender. This requires about 10 minutes. Stir frequently during cooking period. Combine carrots, celery, onion and shortening and cook for a few minutes. Add chicken stock, paprika, seasonings and chicken. Cook slowly until vegetables are tender. Pour this mixture over the cooked egg noodles, place in buttered casserole and bake 1/2 hour at 350 degrees. Whole pieces of chicken may be used in place of the minced chicken.

Vegetables herald the important coming of spring—and their use in meals should be more generous, even in the meat course itself where they will act as a meat extender:

Meat Balls in Vegetable Sauce. (Serves 6 to 8)

- 3/4 pound veal
- 1/2 pound pork
- 1 pound beef
- 1 small onion
- 1 green pepper
- 1 carrot
- 1 stalk celery
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 1/4 cup applesauce
- 1/4 cup moist bread crumbs
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 pint tomatoes
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 2 eggs
- 3/4 potatoes, diced
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper

Chop parboiled or leftover vegetables. Grind meat and mix with applesauce, bread crumbs, salt, pepper and beaten eggs. Form into egg-sized balls. Melt fat, brown meat balls, add chopped vegetables and tomatoes. Bake uncovered 25 minutes in a moderate oven.

Save Used Fats!

Asparagus and Spaghetti. (Serves 6)

- 1 1/2 cups spaghetti, broken in pieces
- 1 pint sautéed or cooked asparagus and liquid
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 1 cup rich milk
- 3 to 4 drops tabasco sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup buttered bread crumbs
- Cheese, if desired

Cook spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Drain the liquid from the asparagus, cut

An inexpensive food is the salad, but it provides the mineral and vitamin riches necessary to good health and living, and satisfies the need for change of texture and contrast in menus.

Ham Loaf. (Serves 6)

- 1 1/2 cups ham, diced
- 1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- 1/4 teaspoon paprika
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup water
- 1/4 cup mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons minced green pepper
- 2 tablespoons minced dill pickle
- 1 1/2 teaspoons dry mustard

Pour boiling water over gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add vinegar and water and allow to cool slightly. Add the other ingredients and turn out into loaf pan. Chill until firm. Turn out on platter and garnish with lettuce, endive, sliced eggs and tomatoes.

Save Used Fats!

Vegetables should be cooked until they are just barely tender—then no more. Then most of their vitamins are intact, and the color is glorious. Here's a casserole with a riot of new spring color:

Garden Casserole. (Serves 6)

- 2 cups white sauce
- 1 cup cooked new potatoes
- 1 cup cooked asparagus, cauliflower or broccoli
- 1/2 cup cooked carrots
- 1/2 cup cooked peas
- 1/4 cup yellow cheese

Make white sauce. Place vegetables in layers in buttered casserole and pour white sauce over them. Cover with finely cut cheese and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven 20 minutes.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

We were having an experience meeting in a revival that I was holding and one of the new converts arose and said, "Preacher, I am wearing the same suit that I had on when the meeting started, but I want to say that there is a different man in this suit. The street corner orator shouted, "Socialism can put a new coat on a man," and just then one from the street answered back, "Yes, that is true, but Jesus Christ can put a new man in the coat, and that is far better." Say what you will about a social reform, but there is nothing much to one of those things. Change the heart and make it new, and then society will take care of itself.

And it came to pass that a certain man drove a pump on some property that he had acquired. The water in that pump was full of poison, and in a few weeks this man and his family took sick and died. Shortly thereafter another man came along and located at the same spot and started to using the same water. Neighbors came and warned him of the poisoned water. His reply was, "Never mind, I shall paint the pump, putty all the holes and make secure all the cracks, and the water in that pump will be sweet and pure." All this was done, nevertheless the water was still full of poison and the man and his family died. Verily, verily, I say unto you, that the painting of a pump will not purify the water that cometh therefrom. Neither can a man purify himself from sin by social reforms. In the place of seeking reforms, confess your sins and have your heart purified by the forgiving grass of God.

"I have the world in my heart," con-essed a sinner to a church member. The one listening to the confession knew but little about an experience of grace within, and made this reply, "You must turn your attention toward the cultivation of your worldly nature and train your heart to take on the habits and nature of a Christian. To me that was dangerous advice. There is only one thing that can be done when the world is in the heart, and that is to destroy the world that is within. Let the sharp surgeon's knife do its work by removing all the world. As long as a Christian is free from the world, he can be God's man alone. The greatest task that Moses had, was not in getting Israel out of Egypt, but in getting Egypt out of Israel.

Do you want to know who are going to heaven? Be well assured that you are not going just because you are a Methodist, a Baptist, a Presbyterian, or a member of any other church. It is very interesting to read about the building of Solomon's temple in Jerusalem. All of the stones, all of the timbers, all of the metal work, everything going into that building was prepared before it was carried to the building itself. All things were made ready before it was brought to Jerusalem. Who are they of this world who will go into God's temple that is not made with hands? To be sure God is not going to pluck up any kind of an individual and place him in His temple construction. I can tell you who are going to be placed into the walls of God's temple in the sky. Just as Solomon submitted a blue print of the stones to the carvers at the quarry, so God has submitted a blue print in Christ Jesus of all worthy human life, and only those who carve the pattern of their lives after the man of aGalilee may expect a place in God's temple. We have to prepare ourselves for God's prepared place if we expect to get to havn at last

Natural nitrate of soda shipments from Chile are arriving on satisfactory schedule. Close to half a million tons are already here, delivered or ready for delivery. Another 200,000 tons are expected and every effort is being made to get it here in time for this season's crops.

If shipping estimates hold, there will be about as much Chilean nitrate for top and side dressing as last year. But because all of it is being distributed under the government's allocation program, it may be impossible to supply all sections in the same proportions as last year.

If you cannot get Chilean nitrate when you want it remember the inconvenience is only temporary—one of many dislocations due to war.

Chilean nitrate is here in substantial quantity, but, like every good soldier, it goes where it is told and when it is told by the government.

• NOTICE •

Beginning with bills dated May 1, 1944, the "skip-month" meter reading plan will become effective. Electric meters for residential, rural and most commercial service will be read each two months instead of monthly. Bills will continue to be sent monthly.

HOW THE SKIP-MONTH METER READING PLAN WORKS

(Skip-month meter reading begins May 1, 1944, and will gradually apply to all residential and most commercial users)

1. Meters will be read only every other month, instead of monthly.
2. For customers' convenience, bills will continue to be sent monthly. The bill for the month in which the meter is not read will be an average bill. It will be for approximately half of the actual electricity you used during the two previous months. The next month, when the meter is read your bill will be for the difference between the kilowatt-hours used for two months, as shown by the meter readings, and the kilowatt-hours for which you were billed the month your meter wasn't read.
3. Customers who do not want to be billed under the plan will be supplied with instructions on how to read their own meters, and with a postcard on which they may report their meter readings to the Company on specified dates. Their meters will be read by the Company each two months at the regular meter reading time.

Besides conserving gasoline, tires and manpower, the plan has the advantage of permitting the continuance of the convenient monthly plan of payment for electric service, under which the variation in the amount of the bill from month to month depends on the service used.

This plan is fair to all concerned, and should cause no inconvenience to customers. It is necessary to conserve tires and gasoline and to meet the growing shortage of manpower.

Thank you for your patriotic acceptance of the plan.

OPA Seeks to Ease Rationing Curbs; Nazis Retreat Toward Carpathians; High Court Approves Price Fixing; Japs Strike From Four Points in India

Leder Syndicate.—WNU Features.

Admiralty islands—While converting this newly captured Admiralty island into an American base, Doughboys and Seabees took time to turn out their wash.

RATIONING: Ease Curbs

To smoothen wrinkles in the nation's economy, OPA announced:

1. Gas rations for B card holders are to be increased by 100 miles a month to maintain the distributive businesses.
 2. Next fall, fuel oil coupons will not be dated, allowing their use at any time.
 3. To get around housewives' cashing of coupons for tokens around their expiration dates, time limits on red and blue food stamps were removed.
- War Food administration also announced that civilian supplies of butter and cheese will be higher for April, May and June, but meat stocks will be lower.

EUROPE:

New Line in East

German troops fell back toward the Carpathian mountains ringing northern Hungary and Rumania as the Reds pressed in on these Balkan states, which the Nazis sought to incorporate into their war machine to pool their men and resources for the last supreme defense of Fortress Europe.

As the new battle lines were forming in the east, Allied bombers continued to wing over the west, smashing ing at Nazi defense installations and industries to soften the invasion path and cripple the enemy's flow of supplies.

In Italy, U. S., British and New Zealand troops took a deep breath before resuming operations against stubborn German forces entrenched in the rocky rubble of Cassino, and other Nazi units ringing the Anzio beachhead, 18 miles below Rome.

Allied Occupation

What is to be Germany's fate after the war?

Much asked, London's influential Sunday Observer claimed to have the answer to the question, reporting an alleged digest of the Allies' plans for occupying the reich after the war.

According to the Observer, the British would occupy all of northwestern and central Germany to the river Oder, and Russia would take over the rest of the territory to the east. The U. S. would occupy the southwest and central part of the reich, including Bavaria and Saxony.

To prevent anarchy before establishing order, the three powers would also control Austria.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

STANDARD TIME: A bill introduced by Representative Cannon (Dem., Mo.) is intended to restore the entire nation to standard time. It has been on daylight saving time since 1942. Cannon said that he has received hundreds of protests from almost every state in the Union against the "fast time." Several states have adopted legislation to modify the law.

WOMEN'S DRAFT: The American Association of University Women meeting in Washington, D. C., went on record as favoring a draft bill for women "provided the need for such a draft exists." A nationwide poll of members taken before the delegates voted showed that a majority of the college women were willing to serve in the WACs, WAVES, SPARS if needed.

FEED WHEAT:

April Allocations

To relieve the tight feed situation and make up for the order for setting aside 35 per cent of corn stocks in elevators for processing, the War Food administration was reported to have increased feed wheat allocations for April to 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 bushels.

WFA's decision followed revelation that Commodity Credit Corporation feed wheat stocks as of March 18 totaled 115,110,000 bushels. Since last July, purchases amounted to 249,634,000 bushels.

Up to March 18, redemptions on 1942 wheat loans approximated 123,000,000 bushels, while deliveries reached 37,819,000, for a total of 160,823,000 taken off account. More than 184,151,000 bushels originally were placed under loan.

AIR TRAVEL:

Seek Expansion

With interest in the airplane heightened by the war, the Civil Aeronautics board which regulates air travel has been flooded with applications to institute new routes throughout the country when peace comes.

As of recent date, applications for bringing air service to 3,631 cities and towns over 500,000 miles of route were pending before the CAB. At present, air lines serve only 385 points over 50,000 miles.

Although conceding the development of air transport after the war, many authorities have cautioned against a disorderly expansion of the industry, which might seriously jeopardize the position of existing lines without proving financially sound to new companies. On the other hand, operation of small lines to link remote centers with major routes is considered an important step in bringing the benefits of air travel to every section.

TELEFACT

WOMEN IN THE LABOR FORCE

SURPLUS GOODS:

For Civilians

To dealers, jobbers, wholesalers and distributors, the offering of 5,000 surplus war items adaptable to civilian use for sale in New York was an opportunity not to be lost.

Offered by Bell Aircraft Company, Eclipse Pioneer Division of Bendix Aviation corporation, Eastern Aircraft Division of General Motors corporation, Glenn L. Martin company, and Republic Aviation corporation, the 5,000 items had a value of $50,000,000 and marked the first disposal of such goods, although the army has prepared larger sales. Among items quickly bought up were small metal tool boxes, stainless steel tubing, rear-view mirrors, tape and thread, tools, and several small galley stoves with built-in sinks and two electric burners.

GREAT BRITAIN:

Equal Pay

Overriding the plea of the Churchill cabinet, the house of commons voted to grant women teachers the same pay as men for equal work, but then reconsidered under the prime minister's insistence.

Opposing the move was the government's board of education president, Richard A. Butler, who declared that approval would establish a precedent for the whole civil service, business and industry.

Supreme Court:

Price Fixing Approved

To permit flexibility in price fixing, congress can prescribe certain broad standards and then delegate an agency to work out details, the Supreme court ruled in declaring the constitutionality of wartime economic stabilization.

The Supreme court also upheld rent control by a delegated agent, or administrator, on the same grounds, stating: "Congress has supplied the standard and the basic period . . . (It) does not abdicate its functions when it describes what job must be done, who must do it, and what is the scope of his authority."

In two other decisions, the Supreme court ruled that distributors of religious literature could not be licensed since licensing power might lead to their suppression, and that iron ore miners were entitled to payment for underground travel time, since the wages and hours act was not passed to allow an employer to claim all of an employee's time while compensating him for only a part of it.

TRACTOR TIRES

Other than in extreme hardship cases the War Food administration will not allow tractor tires to be substituted for steel tires and WFA's supply is now so low, WFA officials said, that any tires used for substitution would delay completion of new tractors.

Conversion of steel wheeled tractors is less important than now than either the replacement of worn-out tires, to keep rubber tread machines in use, or the equipping of new tractors with tires, officials stated.

DANNY KAYE, who is such a sensational success in his first film, Samuel Goldwyn's "Up in Arms," began his career in the group of summer camps near New York known as the Borscht Circuit. "He did everything, from waiting on tables to entertaining the guests. Then he toured the Orient as part of a troupe—says he perfected his pantomime then, since no one hearing him understood English. Next came night clubs, and such success that he was engaged for the stage production of "Lady in the Dark," which established him in the theater. A big factor in his success is his wife, Sylvia Fine, who writes his songs. Now here's "Up in Arms," which lands him at the top in films.

Charlie McCarthy would like everybody to know that 14-year-old Jane Powell is his one and only protégée. Ever since he and Edgar Berger worked in "Song of the Green Road," when Jane was made the star of the picture, Charlie's been swamped by letters from teen-age girls who want him to sponsor them. Jane's done so well in her first picture that another story, "Cinderella Goes to Town," has been bought for her.

Though Adolphe Menjou returned last November from his seven-month tour of England, Algeria and Sicily, to entertain the armed forces, he is only now returning to the screen. It took him three months to regain the 28 pounds he lost on the trip.

Vincent Lopez ("Luncheon With Lopez," three times a week), believes that American audiences not only know good music from bad, but good orchestrations from bad ones. He proved long ago that he knows what the public wants, not only in music, but in stars; Ben and Marion Hutton are two of those whom he discovered and trained. Karole Singer and Bruce Hayes, now appearing with him, are two more.

Ronald Colman's been swamped by mail as a result of his NBC show, "Everything for the Boys." From Montana came a letter from a mother, saying "Won't you put my son and your namesake, Ronald Colman Dunn on your program?" But it's the army that chooses the overseas fighters who talk to Colman.

Evidently the acting bug is catching. Now the real-life wife of "Dagwood" (Arthur Lake) of "Blondie," of screen and radio fame, is taking to the screen. She is Patricia Van Cleve Lake, and will appear in the new Republic production, "New Faces."

Jack Benny has signed a new contract with Warner Bros.; he recently completed "The Horn Blows at Midnight." But he doesn't expect to start a new film until next July—wants to make another trip overseas first, to entertain the armed forces.

A program full of youngsters without a single crackle word in its collection—that's a unique feature of the "Archie Andrews" program, heard weekdays over Mutual. The show's producers feel that growing pains should not also inflict pain on the listeners, so base the series on believable situations.

Something new in radio—a member of the Metropolitan Opera company has been cast in a regular role in a daytime serial drama. The singer is Edith Herlick, mezzo-soprano, who also sings popular music Sunday nights for television. The serial is "The Goldbergs."

ODDS AND ENDS—John Hodiak rode straight to success in "Lifeboat"—now working opposite Lana Turner in "Marriage Is a Private Affair," he's been cast for the serial starring Ann Sothern in "Maidie Goes to Reno." RKO announces that the Sister Kenny will get under way as soon as the executive office considers a story right—also that at no time did Rosalind Russell refuse to make the picture. . . That's a nice lot of Westerns that RKO has lined up—they've bought screen rights to eight Zane Grey novels. . . Amos 'n' Andy fans are cheering because "Madame Queen" is back—and she talks just as they think she should!

Because of the death of Chummy Barton, the job of watching for Napoleon to cross the Dover Strait from France to invade England has lapsed.

Barton was paid $20 a year by the town of Rye to stand on the cliffs and scan the sea, the job having been handed down for 140 years. When Chummy died, authorities decided the post was now dispensable.

prize and Mr and Mrs J R Dobbs and children are the guests of Mr and Mrs E. G. Mullins and family.

A LETTER TO THE VOTERS FROM C. REESE MULLINS

I claim that I am entitled to the Treasurers office of Chilton County, for the following reasons, over my two opponents I will take first my friend W. M. Polk. You all know that when Mr. J. E. Easterling resigned early last spring in 1943 the Mr. Polk Chairman of Our Democratic Executive Committee of this county did not call the Committee together to council as to who should have this place but proceeded to get the Appointment for himself. Do you think this was fair to the Democrats of this county? Or what do you think would have been fair in this case? And especially since soon after he became Chairman of our Executive Committee and got himself appointed on our one man Equalization Board and served on it for quite a while at a fat salary and expenses?

It seems that in Mr. Polk we have more of a Dictator for the Democratic party in this County than a fair and impartial leader and I think we have enough dictators already, higher up.

Now Mr. Polk has had the Treasurers Office practically all of 1943 and will have it all of 1944, in addition to serving on the Equalization Board for quite a while as above stated, at a fat salary and expenses. Now my contention is this, I think that in all fairness, that me or some one else should have the Treasurers Office for at least one term and let Mr. Polk rest from his labors. What do you think? Do you think that we should keep imposing on Mr. Polk to look after the Treasurers Office, when his large business requires all of his time?

Now as to my second opponent, Mr. T. W. Bryan, I don't know just what he bases his claim to this office on, unless it is adverse Possession, since he claims that he has been a citizen of this County for eighteen long years. Well, I believe this is about the same length of time that Mr. Polk has resided with us. I will say on this that I have both skinned a city block for I was here fighting for the Democratic Party, when they landed here and long before, something like twenty five years ago. We was without a Democratic News Paper in this county for quite a while and our Party was struggling for an existence. I was instrumental in getting a few Democrats together and we started up the Chilton County News. I was one among the first to subscribe and pay $400 to get our paper going again, and I had the Honor and Pleasure of naming this paper, The

Chilton County News

On a few occasions in my canvassing I have been asked how the Court House ring stood and that they was of the Opinion that they would be opposed to my election. I told them that if I had a court house ring now that I do not know it and it would be exposed. I further told them that there was one thing that I did know, or that at least I fully believed that every officer in the Court House was my friend so far as I knew, and that I did know that they had no right to be otherwise.

I have never held an office in this my Native County, not withstanding the fights and sacrifices I have made for the Democratic Party for all these years, and All my people before me. If any state made here is not including my Opponee I would like through this paper this Office because to attend to it, and or. For these reasons I would be elected at the in both of our County. I will promote I will give m attention and not so come on in the 2nd and let's e. With the best of all and a fair a I am—

For 2nd Term in the United States

Subject to the Action of the Democratic Primaries

The following statement is issued by United States Senator John H. Bankhead of Alabama:

"It would be unfortunate at this time for the United States to lose the services of Lister Hill in the United States. In addition fourteen years of service in the United States House, he has six years of experience in the Senate."

"Promotions in Committee appointments and seniority in service. Senator Hill enjoys special positions. The most effective work in the matter is done in committee. The people of Alabama are interested in having Senator Hill on the following committees: Military Affairs, Commerce, Education and Expenditures in the Executive Department of the United States. He is also Whip for the Democratic Party. Such is ex-officio a member of the Democratic Committee. Our State is ably represented by Senator Hill. His prestige that would take years for a new man to have. The Southerner's attitude on issues that are of our people, ESPECIALLY WHITE SUPREMACY, is a PERFECT VOTING RECORD ON LEGISLATION AFFECTING THE FARMERS. He has stood shoulder to shoulder with me and has voted with me on all agricultural matters. On several occasions I have had sharp differences with him on measures of great importance to the farmers. Hill has voted with me 100 per cent on all such matters, regardless of the public or private position of the President."

"I do not believe Alabama farmers will turn upon a man who holds the record that Lister Hill holds for loyalty and fidelity to their interests and their welfare. I do not believe they favor swapping an experienced and able man for a new and untried man."

"We have troublesome and distressing days ahead of us. During which our boys in countless numbers will give their very lives to win this horrible war. Men of national experience, knowledge, and influence are needed in the readjustment period following the war. Hill's experience, and other qualifications will be needed in the readjustment period following the war."

"Under normal conditions, and with Senator Hill's efficient services, there would be little opposition to his reelection. Many reports are in circulation that Lister Hill has been replaced by Bibb Graves as the 'Big Game' gone into action to replace Senator Hill. The report is widespread that NEARLY ALL THE 'BIG GAME' FUNDS, ARE FIGHTING SENATOR HILL. No personal knowledge on the subject, but the visible, by watching developments, to decide for them is a fight by the 'haves' against the 'have-nots'."

"Lister and I have stood shoulder to shoulder for the last sixteen years. I believe that Lister Hill would bring the greatest benefits to the number of people of Alabama. We are, and have been, opponents of human rights, as well as of property rights. We have struggled together through day and night filibusters in the United States Senate, to keep the white supremacy, including the established race franchise and the State control of our schools and the control of the races."

"Time has proven that Lister Hill and I can and do in all local matters affecting the interests of the people of Alabama. That is a distinct advantage to our people. Some of the other states do not possess. I feel that it is unfortunate, particularly at this time, to destroy a FULL AND VALUABLE PEOPLE'S ASSET."

"I shall cast my vote for Lister Hill."

Mold in cups rubbed slightly with olive oil and allow to chill until firm. Serve with mayonnaise or crisp lettuce leaves. Clusters of grapes make an attractive garnish. Contrast in color becomes important when putting together salads. Since we are said "to eat with our eyes first" it's important to keep the salad appetizing. Carrots, green pepper and celery are a good combination. Cooked beets, green beans and cauliflower look well together. Leave the skin on apples so they can add the bright touch of red to the salad. Nuts offer contrast in color as well as texture to fruit, vegetable or chicken salad.

Egg Salad Mold.
(Serves 6)
2 teaspoons unflavored gelatin
4 cup cold water
1 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
4 hard-cooked eggs, shredded
1/2 cup diced celery
2 tablespoons diced green pepper
2 tablespoons pickle relish
1 tablespoon diced pimiento
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon salt
Soft gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Heat over boiling water until gelatin is dissolved. Cool. When thickened, add remaining ingredients. Pour into individual molds or one large mold and chill. Serve with additional mayonnaise and garnish with endive and carrot curls.

Rhubarb Salad Ring.
(Serves 6)
1 package raspberry or lemon flavored gelatin
1 cup hot, sharp sauce
1 cup cold water
1 cup chopped apples
1 cup chopped nuts
Dissolve gelatin in hot sauce. Add water, cool and pour into a ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce. Serve Waldorf salad in center of ring. Or, make salad ring with strained cranberry sauce and serve chicken salad in center of ring.
If the salad is as good as its dressing, you will be able to use these suggestions:
Salad Bowl Dressing: Combine 2 tablespoons tarragon vinegar, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon paprika, a dash of pepper, 1 to 2 drops liquid garlic and a dash of sugar. Mix until blended and then pour in 1 cup salad oil and 1/2 teaspoon gum arabic or gum tragacanth (obtainable at a druggist's, usually). Shake or beat well and chill before using.
Peanut Butter French Dressing: Combine the following: 1/4 cup peanut oil, 1/4 cup salad oil, 1/4 cup pure cider vinegar, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon sugar, and 1/4 teaspoon paprika. Beat thoroughly until blended. This is good for simple green salads.
Sour Cream Dressing: Mix together 1 teaspoon dry mustard, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons flour, 2 teaspoons sugar and a dash of cayenne. Blend together 1 egg yolk beaten, 1 tablespoon oil and 1/4 cup vinegar and stir gradually into dry ingredients. Cook in top of double boiler until thick, remove from heat, then cool. Before serving, fold in 1/4 cup cream.

Lynn Says
Pretty, Pretty: All foods no how simple can be made appealing by attractive dressings. And remember to eat garnishes, for in most cases are as nutritious as they are if. This is especially true in case of eggs.
Use hard-cooked yolks over creamed soups. Cut hard-cooked egg whites into attractive shapes for bouillon or consommé. Use custard can be cut into attractive shapes for clear soups. The custard, using meat or bouillon cubes.
Use vegetable garnishes for vegetables very effective. Cut whites of lengthwise into five or more using a sharp knife, cut from larger end to within 1/4 of the smaller end. Open up, remove yolks and fill center with sieved egg yolk.

SAUL'S EARLY PREACHING

LESSON TEXT: Acts 9:19b-30; 11:25, 26.
GOLDEN TEXT: I am not ashamed of the gospel; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.—Romans 1:16.

"A changed man"—that oft-used expression assumes real meaning as it is applied to one who has experienced the redeeming grace of God in Christ. In a special way this was true of Paul, whose transformed life amazed those who knew him before he had met Christ on the Damascus road.

In our lesson we find him in three different cities, serving his new-found Master and Lord.

I. At Damascus—Confounding the Jews (9:19-25).

"Straightaway." What a good word to apply to the servant of the Lord. Paul did not hesitate to declare his faith in Christ, to proclaim that the One who had redeemed him was able also to save others.

It is the normal and proper expression of Christian faith to give testimony to others. That should be true of every believer. With Paul there was the added element of his call to preach, for God had ordained that he should be His chosen vessel for that purpose (Acts 9:15).

One is impressed by the prompt and unquestioning obedience of so many of Christ's followers whom we read in the New Testament. No doubt that explains their power and wide usefulness. We could learn of them.

Paul's message was Christ. He went to the Jews that Jesus was the Christ (v. 22), the One of whom their Old Testament Scriptures spoke and for whom they professed to be looking. He declared Him to be the Son of God (v. 20). They were unwilling to accept the message. They were "amazed" at Paul and "confounded" by the truth he proclaimed, but they rejected it. He told him, and he had to escape for his life. But another city must hear his witness, so we find him—

II. At Jerusalem—Disputing With the Grecians (9:29-30).

Knowing his violent persecution of the church, the disciples in Jerusalem were suspicious. Perhaps there was a measure of justification for such an attitude, but one is glad that there was present the generous, open-hearted Barnabas, ready to believe in his new brother in Christ and to sponsor him in the church.

A word of admonition to the church of today is necessary, regarding the making of a new convert or a stranger at home in the fellowship of the saints. There is no need of putting such a one into office or a place of honor, but let him know that he is accepted and believed in, and thus give him an opportunity to grow.

Paul remained in Jerusalem this time for two weeks (Gal. 1:18), going in and out, that is, in friendly fellowship. That is just what the young Christian needs, and should seek.

He also had something to make right. He had joined the Grecian Jews when they disputed with Stephen (6:9) and stoned him. Paul had agreed with and joined them on that occasion. Now by the miracle of regeneration he is a new creature and is on the exactly opposite side. Now he disputes with the Grecians, declaring that Jesus is the Christ. What a blessed change!

They refused to tolerate that word, and prepared to kill him. But the servant of the Lord was kept by Him, and delivered through the good offices of Christian brethren. How true it is that the minister must look to the brethren for that kindness which delivers him from distress and danger.

Paul returned for a time to his home city of Tarsus, but when a need of his services arose he was called out, and we find him—

III. At Antioch—Teaching the Christians (11:25, 26).

Persecution spread the believers abroad (Acts 11:19), and like the scattered brands of a beaten fire they carried the flame of Christianity far and wide. Thus the gospel came to Antioch, the third greatest city in the world of that day. A revival broke out, and Barnabas was sent from Jerusalem to be of help.

Good and spiritual man that he was (Acts 19:23, 24), Barnabas did nothing to hinder this work of God, but admonished the people to "cleave unto the Lord," that is, to follow Him closely. Would that all spiritual advisers had such a spirit and such sound judgment.

He was also wise in sensing his need of help. So he went after Paul, the very man to teach these young Christians, and to lead them out into a radiant and abundant life for the Lord.

Here it was that the beautiful name of "Christian" was first applied to believers. It is believed to have originally been a term of ridicule, but even then it was a testimony, for it declared that these believers were devoted to Christ and concerned only with pleasing and serving Him.

One thing a soldier is afraid of is a display of emotion. That's why his slang so often sounds derogatory. For example, he refers to the silver eagles on his colonel's shoulder straps as "buzzards." But when he speaks of his favorite cigarette, he says: "Camels." They're first with men in the Army as well as with Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen. (According to actual sales records in service men's stores.) And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

RUBBER

Planes fly in supplies and bring out crude rubber from Central American plantations. Weeks are saved by this method of transportation.

In building a battleship it takes 150,000 pounds of rubber. This is equivalent to the rubber used in the manufacture of more than 12,000 small passenger-car tires.

The first city omnibus lines, the forerunner of modern motor bus transportation, started operations over the streets of Paris in 1662.

Seventy-three per cent of the employees in 94 war plants depend upon their cars for transportation. Rubber is essential to their work.

which wartime increases in employment have been made possible by the work of persons who are attending school. National estimates are needed on the size of the group working or seeking work and continuing with full-time or part time school. It is also important to learn in what occupations and industries school children are working.

"The second purpose to be served by the supplementary questions is quite distinct from the first and concerns the agricultural situation. It is necessary, in planning the agricultural program, to know how many people are currently working in agriculture. Therefore, the regular monthly survey of the labor force includes supplementary questions designed to obtain information on the number of persons in each household doing any farm work and the number of such persons who are farm operators. These farm operators will be interviewed with a follow-up schedule during the last half of April.

"Information on the number and characteristics of the nation's farms and on the supply of workers to operate these farms is of critical importance at this time, when so much depends upon the maintenance of a program of food production adequate for our armed forces, for our Allies, and for the civilian population. The surveys to be conducted will supplement data on farm employment collected in the regular monthly labor force sample."

Mrs. Stapp stressed the confidential aspects of Census work, explaining that all of the information obtained will be used only in the form of statistics, totals averages, etc, and that no figures for any individual household or farm will be disclosed. He expressed the appreciation of the Census Bureau for the cooperation received from families in the local area in connection with the regular monthly survey of the labor force which, when combined with figures from the other 67 areas of the country included in the survey, provide information on a national basis about the important problems of employment, unused manpower, and the types of skills available for the country's wartime production needs.

Farm Leaders Meet With GOP Group, Outline Rural Economy Principles; Red Troops Press War on Balkan Soil

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

AGRICULTURE: Postwar Policy

Meeting in Chicago with the Republican party's subcommittee on postwar agricultural policy, the nation's outstanding farm leaders outlined their principles for a healthy rural economy.

Speaking for the American Farm Bureau, its president, Edward A. O'Neal, called for a crop adjustment system with mandatory commodity loans and price supports to be administered by a bipartisan board.

Discussing aspects of foreign trade, National Grange Master A. S. Goss advocated a two price system, with the government authorized to buy up surpluses to sell in world markets at below domestic prices, with the producer bearing the cost. As president of the National Milk Producers association, John Brandt called for the importance of only the commodities we cannot produce here.

The enlargement and strengthening of subsidies and price control measures were advocated by James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, while incentive payments to encourage production of vital foods and fibers were urged by Clyde C. Edmonds, vice president of the National Council of Farm Cooperatives.

Crops and Stock

To increase the supply of corn to essential industrial users, the War Food Administration ordered country and terminal grain elevators in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska to set aside 60 per cent of stocks. Previously, WFA ordered a 35 per cent set aside.

After a steady rise in within 35 cents of the $14.75 ceiling, hog prices took a drop with reports that the government intended cutting landed purchases of canned pork and bellies. However, it was recalled that while the government curtailed purchases during April of last year, it went back into the market heavily in May, staying there in June and July.

In supporting the 1944 potato market, WFA announced it would pay slightly higher prices ranging from 5 to 15 cents a 100 pounds above last year. From $2.05 to $3.50 per 100 pounds will be paid for early and intermediate crops and $1.85 to $2.45 for late crops.

EUROPE: Blast Balkans

Teaming with the U. S. Eighth Air Force in Britain, the U. S. 15th Air Force in Italy carried on heavy raids against Hitler's Fortress Europe, assaulting Axis supply lines in the Balkans.

As the Allied ground troops sparred with the Germans below Rome, the 15th took up the cudgels in the air, hammering at the rail network in Budapest, Hungary, from which lines radiate into Germany, Yugoslavia and Rumania. Aircraft factories to the south of the city and ballbearing plants in Steyr, Austria, also were struck.

The intensity of the Eighth Air force's campaign against western Europe was reflected in the announcement that 23 heavy bombing missions were completed in March, with an estimated 12,000 war planes participating.

MANPOWER: Turnover Smaller

While congress considered legislation to draft 4-Fs for essential war work, Manpower Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt reported greater stabilization of employment this year than in 1943 in the munitions industries.

With all younger men in industry and agriculture scheduled for induction, the congress studies proposals under which 1,000,000 4-Fs now in non-essential occupations would have the alternative of voluntarily shifting to war work or facing induction into military labor battalions at service pay. In reporting the increased stability of employment in munitions industries in January, 1944, McNutt said the turnover declined in 44 different fields, and increased in only four, principally because of layoffs in the explosives and small arms factories as a result of over-production.

PENICILLIN: A drying process originated for dehydration and preservation of fruit juices has been successfully applied to preparation of penicillin and blood plasma. 1st Prize—Best souvenir of bitter Southwest Pacific fighting is this Jay flag, captured by Marine Pvt. Charles G. Walker of Glendale, N. Y., during battle of Cape Gloucester, New Britain.

PACIFIC: Near Philippines

As U. S. air and naval forces pounded the approaches to the Philippines, embattled British troops fought against enemy advances in India.

Sailing to within 500 miles of the Philippines, a strong U. S. navy task force struck at the far western fringe of the Caroline Islands, shelling Palau, Woleai and Yap and smashing all ships in the harbors. Farther to the south, U. S. bombers leveled the big Jap air and shipping base of Hollandia in New Guinea, which lies 1,000 miles to the south of the Philippines. In one raid alone, U. S. bombers wrecked Hollandia's three air strips and fired oil and storage installations.

In India, British troops strongly resisted Jap efforts to cut their communication lines on the central front, and broke through to sever the railroad feeding Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's U. S.-Chinese forces in northern Burma.

RUSSIA: On Foe's Soil

With the Germans cleared from most of the Ukraine, Russian troops carried the war in the east to Balkan soil, crossing over into Rumania on a broad front, as that country's armies actively pitched into the fray.

Part of Hitler's military machine, Hungarian troops also took up stations at the Germans' side in the Carpathian mountains, blocking entrance into Czechoslovakia.

As the Russians carried the war to the enemy on his home grounds for the first time, Finland considered new peace terms reportedly allowing her retention of the naval base of Hangoe, and agreeing to isolation of German troops in the north.

Lend-Lease

U. S. contributions to the Russian war effort were reflected in lend-lease shipments to the Soviets from October, 1941, through February of this year.

During this period, the U. S. sent over 3,000 planes, 3,200 tanks and tank destroyers, 190,000 trucks, 36,000 jeeps and 30,000 other military vehicles. In addition, shipments included 850,000 miles of field telephone wire, 275,000 field telephones, 7,000,000 pairs of army boots and an unspecified number of locomotives and freight cars.

In all, 2,600,000 tons of food were shipped.

AIRPLANE OUTPUT: 9,118 in Month!

With output per worker rising in famous U. S. mass production technique, the American aircraft industry turned out the record number of 9,118 planes with a weight of 103,400,000 pounds in March.

Exceeding over-all production schedules by 14 per cent and the heavy bomber quota by 5 per cent, the industry topped the previous peak of 8,765 planes set in February, 1944.

Of the 9,118 planes, 86.5 per cent were combat craft of the bomber, fighter and transport class. Because of constant changes made by military technicians to keep abreast of new developments in warfare, plane output is not standardized.

SUPREME COURT:

Negro Vote

In an eight to one decision, the Supreme court reversed a ruling of 1895 by declaring that Negroes were entitled to vote in Democratic primaries in Texas.

Under a state law, political parties are permitted to determine the qualifications of their members, and the Democrats restricted primaries to whites. In handing down its decision, the Supreme court said that when activities of any organization affect constitutional processes, then the state must step in to protect the public interest.

Lone dissenter in the decision was Justice Roberts, who said that the court's reversal of its 1935 ruling could only create confusion about the stability of our institutions. The majority asserted that it was the privilege to review any previous case in which it might have erred.

U. S. TREASURY:

New Loan Drive

When America's Fifth War Loan drive gets under way June 12, the treasury will seek to raise 6 billion dollars from individuals, or 700 million dollars more than in the Fourth campaign ended last February.

The total goal of the Fifth drive has been set at 16 billion dollars, 2 billion dollars more than the quota for the Fourth, but 730 million dollars less than was actually raised.

To spur the individual bond purchases, the treasury announced it will only reveal the total of personal sales during the first half of the drive.

ARMY MEDICINE:

Fewer Deaths

Developments in medical treatment since World War I, when 156 out of 10,000 soldiers died annually from disease, have cut mortalities to only 6 out of 10,000 in the present conflict, army authorities revealed.

In addition, surgeons save 97 out of 100 wounded men admitted to hospitals, from disease, have cut mortalities to only 6 out of 10,000 in the present conflict, army authorities revealed.

During World War I, the death rate from pneumonia was 28 per cent, but now it is 7 of one per cent. Tuberculosis killed 17.3 per cent of victims then, only 1.8 per cent of patients die from it now. The venereal disease admission rate has been reduced to a third of the World War I rate.

This Is London

In London, a man, like Harry Woods for instance, might be sitting in his parlor one minute and then looking over the ruins of his bomb-shattered home the next minute.

Of his misadventure escape from death, Mr. Woods said: "I say my prayers every night and I think this has preserved me."

SIBERIA:

Russ Diplomacy

Active on the military front in Europe, Russia also busied herself diplomatically in the Far East, her most significant move being the termination of Japanese coal and oil leases on Sakhalin island in Siberia, which still had 26 years to run.

Following Japan's acceptance of a pact to curtail her fishing operations in Siberian waters, the Sakhalin agreement was the Russian payment of $950,000 to Tokyo for all property on the island, including equipment and food. Russia will deliver 50,000 tons of oil annually to Japan for five years after the war. Chinese troops allegedly operating in the far northwestern corner of the country, were accused by Moscow of violating the border land of the neighboring Mongolian republic of Russia. Once occupied by the Reds during which time they built up trade and agriculture, this northwestern corner was returned to the Chinese in 1943, but now looms as a bone of contention.

VEGETABLE FUEL

A process has been perfected to convert vegetable matter into fuel oil, gasoline, coal or any number of hydrocarbon compounds. Dr. Ernst Berl of Carnegie Institute of Technology revealed.

"From 100 long tons of Louisiana dry sugar cane, for instance," he said, "the new process will make 2,500 gallons of gasoline, 3,000 gallons of middle oils and 1,000 gallons of lubricating oils—and still give the usual eight tons or so of raw sugar."

Let's Face Facts

Container Shortage
A Primary Headache
For Farmer in 1944

By BARROW LYONS
WNU Staff Correspondent

It is the advice of this correspondent that every farmer and shipper who requires wooden or paperboard containers to ship his crop to market make arrangements as soon as he can with used container dealers to supplement his supply of new containers. It would be well to get those used containers into his possession as soon as possible.

Barrow Lyons

This advice is given because the demand for containers, both new and used, is certain to exceed supply this year. If you do not know the address of a used container dealer, hunt one up in the nearest terminal market, or if you cannot do so yourself, get your commission house to send you the address of one. The reason for this caution is the fact that for several years consumption of forest products has exceeded production, and stockpiles in most instances are at an irreducible minimum. Yes, military and industrial requirements this year will be at an all-time peak. Lumber has become one of the scarcest commodities in general trade, and it is going to be scarce.

The War Production board has announced a system for allocating lumber to each type of user according to the importance of that type to the war effort. No doubt adjustments will be made as experience indicates errors that have been made in this allocation.

Use Local Committees

Coordinating with this order, local committees under War Food administration will determine specifically what each shipper will receive within the quotas for packaging of various products which are said to be available. Quotas of containers for the less essential vegetables will be cut down on the basis of a percentage of what the shipper used in the 1942 crop season. Each shipper will be expected to offer proof of the quantity of containers used in 1942.

The general situation was outlined by R. A. Palen, chief of the Containers and Packaging Branch, Office of Materials and Facilities, WFA.

"It is impossible at this moment to know just how short of forest products we shall be," he said. "Palen, 'because it is impossible to calculate exactly what military demands will be."

"We do know that inventories have been practically exhausted. Although we expect to get some additional help in lumbering from war prisoners, this will not compensate for the loss of men drawn into the armed services, and additional numbers that will leave the forests for shipyards and industrial plants."

"There will be no relief from this situation, so far as we can foresee, except when direct war requirements decline, or men return to the woods after their release from the army and navy."

Military Needs High

"So far as machinery goes, tractors and trucks will be required in greater numbers for beaching operations and military transport, and the tires on this heavy equipment are the same as those used on guns and military trucks."

"Packaging of food requirements for the army and navy are way up, and are likely to continue very high. We shall have to move vast quantities of foods off shore for lend-lease and other governments. Of course, we must preserve a flow of essential civilian supplies—but the word essential will come to have a new meaning to most of us."

"Restricting the less essential crops that require a large amount of containers, implies getting the maximum use possible from the containers we have. However, the size of containers must be increased and lighter materials must be used."

"While the demand for pulpwood has mounted enormously, production of lumber is still not adequate. Available for essential uses is far below minimum requirements. Huge quantities of paper are now being used for waterproofing purposes by the army."

The greatest deficiency, Mr. Palen said, would be in hampers and baskets to supply growers in the Middle West, Northeast and Middle Atlantic sections, though scarcity will be felt from Florida north, including the Mississippi valley and New England. There will be no more containers than last year, but a considerably larger crop will be harvested.

In one area farmers cooperated with box manufacturers to insure their supply of containers by bringing the lumber into the mills themselves, and then helping out in the same manner. The lumber. It is hoped that in the fall many other sections will adopt this plan. In the meantime, it will be well for each farmer and shipper to obtain used containers as he can do so. The next best plan is to contract for supplies, not overlooking the used container dealers. If one cannot be located, write Mr. Palen in Washington.

Simpson's Farm Supporters Clash With Hill's CIO Group

CIO Official Labor Paper Refuses Simpson Ads, But Publishes Those of Hill

Walter Randolph "Working For Jim Simpson"

A wide open split between the farm group, which is backing Jim Simpson's candidacy, and Lister Hill's C.I.O. union labor supporters developed this week in Alabama's senatorial campaign.

C.I.O.'s official labor newspaper in Alabama, The News Digest, launched an all-out attack on Jim Simpson and refused to accept his campaign advertisements while the Alabama Press reported that Walter Randolph, president of the Alabama Farm Federation Bureau, was now working actively for Jim Simpson.

Why CIO Leaders Fight Simpson

Opposition of the C.I.O. union labor group to Jim Simpson's candidacy is reported based on Simpson's charge that C. I. O. union labor has been favored at the expense of Alabama farmers and Simpson's stand in favor of John L. Lewis for calling strikes in war time. Simpson's stand in favor of Alabama's segregation laws is also said to have aroused the ire of C.I.O. union officials, because so many C.I.O. and United Mine Workers labor locals have mixed white and negro memberships and a number of their local unions have negro officers. In a recent issue, the C.I.O. official newspaper accused Simpson of stirring up "the racial issue," because of Simpson's protests against bureaucratic meddling with race relations in the State.

Walter Randolph Supports Simpson

Walter Randolph and the farm group's support of Simpson has gathered landslide proportions in the past few weeks, with leading farmers in every section championing the Simpson crusade for "real farm parity." According to the state press, Walter Randolph is personally supporting Simpson because he "knows Lister Hill record is one of consistent opposition to the interests of farmers whenever they collide with those of organized labor, hence he could make no other choice."

Disregarding the big C.I.O. union labor vote in his home county, Jim Simpson in his campaign platform boldly declared that "I am unalterably opposed to further retreats before the rule-or-ruin dictates of John L. Lewis, or any others who think as he does. As long as a single American boy stands at the front in need of the weapons of war, I say there shall be no more strikes against the war effort."

Calls Farm Ceiling Prices "Unfair"

In his speeches over the State, Jim Simpson continued to point out Federal bureaucracy's discrimination against Alabama farmers. Farm prices, he said, are being held under ceilings in many instances actually below production costs while C.I.O. union labor wages have been allowed to soar sky-high. He pointed out that a negro girl can now make twice as much in a month in a Detroit plant as a bale of cotton brings, seed and all.

LETTER to the EDITOR

To The Chilton County News:

Well, here I come again and it is because I am in such a strain because the world is in so much trouble because of sin. It just looks like from reading my Bible that we are in the days of the thousand years that Satan is to be turned loose to do his work, and as I see it, he is getting a pretty good start.

He is egging at the people and confronting them with so much trouble and dirty work today that we have almost forgotten our own name or who we are. We are getting to far from God is the cause it is not our good President that is the cause. He is advising the people to their duty if they would listen and stick to him times would soon be back to normal again. He would soon have our boys back home in peace and prosperity and a happy nation to live in. But as you know they did not listen to Jesus Christ the Devil said he is this and he is that and deceived the people and kept them in the dark until they decided to put Him to death and end it all so today two thousand years hence we see their mistakes so in planning along thinking as to the difference of a pinne of the people as to their duty in politics the good people want to vote right to have peace and prosperity in the nation, but they hear so much hot air out of those selfish money thirsty power cravers and Hitlerites that is trying to undermine our government and take the reign over well they just dont know which way is the right way to vote. They listen to so much so good people our Good president Franklin D. Roose-

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

Once a man made a large garden. In it he planted choice seeds, all in a straight row. Then he built a high fence around it to keep the dogs and chickens out, and then took his leave. He felt safe about his garden as he was sure that he had fenced out everything that would harm his plants. He was gone for weeks and on his return he was greatly disappointed to find that he had no flowers and no vegetables. To be sure the chickens and the dogs had not harmed his garden, but he had failed to take note that weeds pay no attention to fences. Ah my friends, you may fence your life well with fine resolutions and good habits, but do not forget that the sin of Omission will creep through any crack and ruin your character garden.

Sunday night, just before the church hour, I sat at my radio, listening to Burgen and Charlie McCarty, and it occurred to me that more people were listening to the deliverances of a wooden dummy at that time, than would listen to the gospel sermons a half hour later. Here is the sore spot of our world today, we are more ready to listen to a wooden dummy than we are to listen to the Gospel of the Son of God.

An artist painted a picture of Christ in an Italian church. In this picture the Master was being nailed to the cross. The artist had skillfully drawn in the colors a shadow of God the father, who stood back of the Son. As the nails went through the hands of Christ they also pierced the hands of God.

They went through the feet of the Son, they also pierced the feet of God. As the spear went through the heart of Christ, it also went through the heart of God. It was our sins that nailed the Christ to Calvary, and we should remember that our sins hurt the Christ, they also hurt the heart of God. Both God and the Son, suffer when we crucify Him with our sinful living. Back of Christ is the shadow of God the Father, and whatever pierces the Christ, goes on into the nature of God.

When Abraham Lincoln was a candidate for the presidency he was asked by one of his supporters what he thought of the prospect to be elected. In his characteristic humor he made this reply—"I do not fear Breckenridge for he is out of the South and the North will not support him. I do not fear Douglas, for the South is against him, but I see there is a man by the name of Lincoln in the race and I am very much afraid of him. If I am defeated, it will be by that man." How true it is that it is not somebody else who defeats us, but it is ourselves. Any man can get on top of the world when he learns to manage himself.

A group of citizens gathered in a furniture store and one of the men assumed the position of spokesman and this is what he said: "I never saw such a wretched set of greedy people as we have in this town. I find that all of them are mean, greedy and selfish. Why look at that man who is over there, looking this way. See his little shark eyes, and the lines of covetousness about his mouth, the very droop of his shoulder is mean and cringing." Then one of the men, with a smile replied to him. It is very clever of you to see all of these things in the face of that man, for you are only beholding your own face in the large looking glass of that piece of furniture." That hushed the howling critic. Did you know that the general rule is that when a man besmirches his home town, he is likely to be among the meanest of the city or community.

People say to me that religion is limitation and restriction. They seem to think that a religious man is not allowed the use of his natural passions and appetites. What do you mean when you say that you have your car under control? Do you mean to say that your car is still by the roadside? Not at all. You mean to say that when the car is making speed that you have it under control. Religion does not forbid us the use of our passions and appetites, but rather it gives to us the power to control all that we are and have, to the glory of God.

A short cut to Yeast rolls...

Recipe—To ½ cup sweet milk add 1 beaten egg and mix with ½ cake yeast and 1½ tablespoons sugar dissolved in ¼ cup warm water. Cut 3 tablespoonsful shortening into 2½ cups sifted self-rising flour. Brush the tops with melted shortening or butter and fold into pocketbook rolls. Place on greased baking tray, cover with towel and allow to rise for 2 to 4 hours of room temperature (until about double in size). Bake at 400°F. for 10 to 15 minutes. To give the rolls a pleasing brown crust color, brush the tops with melted butter or sweet milk just before baking.

PEOPLES' COUNCIL

The People's Political Council is a highly successful political experiment in wartime China. It deserves to be specially emphasized as an important step in the direction of the country's democratization. Created in 1938 by the Emergency Session of the Kuomintang National Congress to serve as a wartime political agency "to unify the national strength, to utilize the best minds of the nation, and to facilitate the formation and execution of national policies," the council has, during the past five years, proved its permanent value in enhancing the probability that successful democratic processes can be established in China. As the system now stands, the council is composed of 240 members. Sixty are selected by the Supreme National Defense Council from among representatives of cultural and economic bodies, or from among leaders of various political groups and other persons long devoted to political activities. The rest are for the most part directly chosen by the newly created provincial or municipal assemblies.

seed this year, was begun in 1942 shortly after the start of the war. GM&O is believed to be the first railroad in the nation to promote Victory gardens by furnishing free seed.

In addition to the seed program, gardening advice is provided by the railroad's agricultural department, headed by S. A. Robert of Jackson, Tenn., who has directed distribution of the seed.

In 1943 GM&O was awarded a plaque for its outstanding contribution to the national food program by the National Victory Garden Institute, New York City.

IN MEMORY

On March 18th at one o'clock in the morning the angels from heaven came to room 128 at the Baptist hospital and took from our midst little Ralph and carried him to a place he would never have any pains, but instead have a home of everlasting happiness where sorrow and pain is unknown.

To hear his last remarks, see his eyes close and see the last breath of life leave him was a seemed more than we could bear. The grief of my heart was beyond words when he said Daddy kiss me and hold my hands only a short time before he passed away. We are so lonely for him. His presence is missed so much by us. No one except those who have experienced such a loss can know the pleasure a three year old son can be to them.

Ralph realized his relatives and friends were anxious for his recovery. He took his medicine and all the other treatments without even a murmur of complaint. He suffered twenty-eight days with virus pneumonia and fought every minute of that time to get well, but all this determination the efforts of the best doctors at the hospital and the prayers of so many good folks couldn't convince God that it was best for him to get well. He was one of the chosen children God wanted on His program in heaven.

May we extend to all those who remembered Ralph during his long illness and death our heartfelt thanks,

Mr and Mrs R C McGee

MISS SCHURTER TAKES SIXTH GRADE PUPILS TO AEA CONVENTION

Sixth grade pupils of the Clanton Elementary school were taken by bus to Birmingham last Thursday morning to appear before the AEA meeting there in convention. The purpose was to demonstrate singing games before the teachers attending.

Two letters written by Lois Jackson and Warrena Willis appear elsewhere in this issue of the News and letters will appear next week by two other members of the sixth grade: Dorothy Mims and Evelyn West. A fine time was reported by all who made the trip.

OUR TRIP

I've never before had the experience I had last Thursday. Dr. Matthews invited Miss Schurter to get some pupils from Chilton County to demonstrate some singing games from the third grade through the sixth grade for the AEA at Phillips High School. Miss Schurter chose the sixth grade from the elementary school to do the singing games.

Mrs. Porch played the piano for us to practice. Miss Bean and Mrs. Sexton helped us with a third grade game, Hansel and Gretel. Mrs. Durbin reviewed us in a fifth grade game named Pop Goes The Weasel. Mrs. Searcy taught us a fourth grade game, Daisy, and Mrs. Thomas a sixth grade game, Come Let Us Be Joyful.

Our parents were as interested as we were in the trip. Some of the pupils' parents took their cars. Four or five pupils went in each car.

Early Thursday morning the fun began. All of us met at Mrs. Thomas' home. We were in Birmingham before we knew it. We arrived just in time. After we inspected the stage, we took our seats in the audience. First some music-minded people of the state spoke. Then came the time for our performance. Mrs. Martin of Jemison played the piano for us up there because Mrs. Porch couldn't be there.

When we started to return, we learned that we could go to Vulcan Park. When we arrived, we all went up into Vulcan. What fun it was to look out over Birmingham from Vulcan. Then we went to the Vulcan Tavern. There were so many of us we had to wait a long time for them to fix our lunch.

Lois Jackson

OUR A. E. A. TRIP

The Clanton sixth grades were glad when Miss Schurter received an invitation from Dr. Matthews about our going to Phillips High School, and playing some singing games. Dr. Matthews wanted the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth grades to go, but it was impossible for all to go on account of transportation, so Miss Schurter selected the sixth grades to go.

Some of the lower grade teachers reviewed our groups in games for their respective grades. When we told our parents, they were all interested. The ones that could, said they would take as many as possible. Mrs. Thomas asked the parents about going a long time before we went.

The day had come! Everyone met at Mrs. Thomas' with happy and joyful faces. We left about seven-thirty. Although one of the cars had a flat, we were all there on time. First, we found out all about the stage. Then we took a seat in the audience. Some of the music people made talks. Then it was time for Miss Schurter to make her talk. When she had finished, it was time for us to do our part. Mrs. Porch had been playing the piano for us, but she found out that she couldn't be there, so Mrs. Martin from Jemison came and practices with us one time and she played for us that day. The first game was Hansel and Gretel with Mrs. Sexton and Miss Bean in charge. Mrs. Searcy assisted us in a Bicycle Built For Two. The Third was Pop Goes The Weasel with Mrs. Durbin as leader. Last of all Mrs. Thomas was with us on, Come, Let Us Be Joyful.

We returned to the car that we came in and went to visit Vulcan Park. There was a place where you get sandwiches, but they didn't have any. Everybody wanted to go up in Vulcan, so we went as far as we could without having to go straight up a ladder.

der. It was already too far up for me. When I looked down I thought I would die. After resting awhile everyone went back down. We got in the car and went down to the Vulcan Tavern and had lunch. Some of us could scarcely wait to get served. There were so many of us that it took a long time for them to fix a sufficient number of sandwiches. When everyone finished, we all returned home in the car we went in. What a grand, jolly trip we had had. Warrena Willis

About the Skip-Month Meter Reading Plan To Save Tires, Gasoline and Manpower

The Japs stole the world's source of rubber. The treachery of the Nazis and the Japs makes it necessary for Americans to fight them.

The Nation is short of gasoline, rubber and short of men for civilian services.

Almost 700 of our men are in the United States Army, Navy or Marine forces. There will be more of them.

We must continue to save tires and gasoline and perform essential services with less manpower. We want your electric service to remain dependable.

One thing which will help is the "skip-month" plan of meter reading. This will save over half a million tire miles per year. It will release manpower for other essential service. This can be done without inconvenience to any customer. Briefly, here is the

SKIP-MONTH METER READING PLAN

(Begins May 1, 1944, and will gradually apply to all residential and most commercial users)

1. Meters will be read only every other month, instead of monthly.
2. For customers' convenience, bills will continue to be sent monthly. The bill for the month in which the meter is not read will be an average bill. It will be for approximately half of the actual electricity you used during the two previous months. The next month, when the meter is read your bill will be for the difference between the kilowatt-hours used for two months, as shown by the meter readings and the kilowatt-hours for which you were billed the month your meter wasn't read.

3. Customers who do not want to be billed under the plan will be supplied with instructions on how to read their own meters, and with a postcard on which they may report their meter readings to the Company on specified dates. Their meters will be read by the Company each two months at the regular meter reading time.

Besides conserving gasoline, tires and manpower, the plan has the advantage of permitting the continuance of the convenient monthly plan of payment for electric service, under which the variation in the amount of the bill from month to month depends on the service used.

LETTER to the EDITOR

A LETTER FROM A NORTHERN DEMOCRAT

This letter was received recently from a former resident of Chilton County but who now resides in Chicago. The reader who brought the letter to us asks that we omit the name of the writer.—Editor.

Dear Friends: How are you both, how is your health, how is everything in general? Do you have any republicans in that part of the country. How is the old peoples pension there? Is it a law and do the old folks get the pension? I notice in the paper Alabama has a sick benefit law. I wish you would let me know how that works out. A few years ago, republicans were running everything in Illinois, in Chicago, Bill Thompson was a republican mayor and the world knows what a notorious lawless mess it was. The police of this city were turned to criminals. A bunch of boot leggers got in a battle at the dead hours of the night and when the battle was over the states attorney for this county was among the dead. Bill Thompson and his gang spent all the money Chicago had, they mortgaged all of the school property and spent the money. Bill Thompson mortgaged the city hall and all other city property and squandered all the money. The city employees such as school teachers, policemen, etc., could not get their pay, the city government was ruined and when he people couldn't stand it any longer they put in an all democratic gang and now all of these terrible things have been cleaned out. The Democrats made an old age pension law in this state and a law that working people must have one day rest in seven, and women must not work more than 8 hours a day in factories, and many, many other good laws were passed and enforced. But now the old gang of republicans are coming in power again and these good laws will be overturned. We have a republican governor for past year and he seems to be as crooked as those of the past. Chicago has more than four hundred schools and many of them have more than fifty teachers some have more than one hundred teachers. Chicago has more than seven thousand policemen and about that many firemen, all total more than forty thousand people work for the city of Chicago.

All things with me are about as usual my health is good and working every day and I have plenty of everything that I need. When you can and if not to much trouble let me know how the sick benefit law works out. All for this time.

Sincerely,
A Democrat

Air Transport Covers World

Navy's Craft Links U. S. to Fleet Wherever Ships Sail to Battle.

WASHINGTON.—The naval transport air service is now conducting services over a world-wide trans-oceanic and overland network of more than 65,000 miles as the result of rapidly expanding operations, the Office of War Information reports.

This service, which started right after Pearl Harbor with only one flying boat, is now carrying about 22,500 priority passengers a month an average of more than 1,200 miles each, the report said, and is also bringing into the United States annually from foreign lands hundreds of thousands of pounds of urgently needed war materials such as mica, tantalum and natural rubber.

In addition, this navy unit conducts special and emergency flying missions which account for "tens of thousands of miles monthly." The agency's handling of a two-ocean maintenance and supply service has been "an important factor in our naval success," OWI said.

Commercial Lines Help. In the rapid expansion of its overseas operations, according to the report, the transport service has employed, under contract, planes of Pan American Airways System and American Export Airlines, and in its training program has used contract services of Pennsylvania-Central Airlines, American Airlines, Pan American, American Airport and United Airlines.

Another outstanding result of the project, the report said, has been the developing of more improved air transport techniques which are seen as valuable aids to commercial aviation after the war.

Quoting from reports from the navy, OWI said that the NATS was over the first six months of the year. The navy expects further increases in 1944 as more aircraft are assigned, and as the navy's needs become centered farther from the States.

First Service to Fleet. "Although our naval surface units have for years used some 'utility' transport aircraft attached to major fleet commands, the NATS is the first regularly scheduled service between the United States and the fleet, wherever it may go," the report added. "NATS planes fly to the fringes of battle zones, operate blizzards, tropical storms and Arctic blizzards and fogs."

"Not only do NATS craft regularly cover routes new to air transport and far more extended than any prewar airway, they must fly a majority of the routes without radio navigation aids whose use would betray them to the enemy. In spite of compounded difficulties and hazards of wartime flight, the navy states that the NATS has achieved an efficiency and dependability equal to that of prewar civil airlines."

At present the NATS operates under three wing commanders, one in each of the three main areas of naval activity—the Atlantic, the West Indies and the Pacific. The recently established naval air ferry command is under a fourth wing commander.

Nation's Birth Rate Is Highest in 20 Years

NEW YORK.—Births during 1943 totaled 3,200,000, nearly 1,000,000 more than the low point 10 years ago and 200,000 more than 1942, according to Metropolitan Life Insurance company statisticians.

The birth rate for the year is the highest in 20 years, with greatest increases recorded in Pacific Coast states, where war industries have increased the demand for population. The rise in birth rate has been accompanied by the lowest infant mortality rate in history.

Fifth Sunday Meeting At Alpine Church

The Unity Association will hold its regular fifth Sunday meeting with Alpine Baptist church, the fifth Sunday in this month. We have had many wonderful services in these fifth Sunday meetings and we are certainly looking forward to another even better one this time. May I say just here that the pastors of our churches have been so ready to give their efforts that we feel they deserve a word of thanks from all of us. We have had as high as 12 or 15 ministers present on most every meeting, and we are looking forward to seeing them all again and also others. We extend to everyone a warm invitation to this service, also may I say as pastor of Alpine church that our people there extend to everyone a cordial invitation, come and come praying.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Daughter Can Make These for Mother
(See Recipes Below)

Food Is Fun!

It's a good idea to let small fry take hold of the kitchen duties once in a while and give mother a rest. The children will enjoy doing new things and mother can feel she is contributing to their all-round development.

Naturally it isn't a good idea just to open wide the doors in the kitchen and leave the children up to their own designs. What I'm suggesting is that they be allowed to make up something they've watched mother do so often they know how.

There's a lot of satisfaction in making cupcakes, especially if they are iced with tinted icings and sprinkled with finely chopped nuts.

Delicate Cup Cakes.
(Makes 18)

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons double acting baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup butter or substitute
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, unbeaten
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually. Cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs one at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition. Add flour alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla.

Bake in greased cupcake tins in a moderate oven (375 degrees) 20 minutes or until done. Spread with confectioners' sugar icing or your favorite chocolate frosting. Decorate with chopped nuts, colored candies or tinted coconut.

A cookie that will keep fine and fresh and uses only a moderate amount of fat and sugar is this delicate citrus bar:

1/4 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
3 well-beaten eggs
2 tablespoons orange marmalade
2 tablespoons grated orange rind
1 cup orange juice

Mix and sift together dry ingredients. Cream together shortening and sugar, then beat in eggs, marmalade, rind. Add dry ingredients alternately with orange juice. Turn into a greased pan and bake in a

The Score Card: Good news is in store for homemakers for there will be plenty of eggs on the market and cabbage and spinach. All of these foods give a boost to health and to your menus.

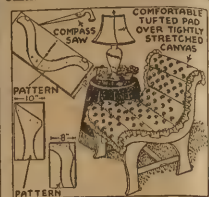

You will be eating about a pound less cheese this year than last. The kind available mostly will be Cheddar—also the kind most popular. Kinds least obtainable will be Limburger cream, Roquefort and Italian. About 5 million more pounds of cheese are going to servicemen to help provide milk nutrients needed by armed forces. Cheese will also go to our Allies and to the Red Cross, which helps provide for our prisoners of war.

ON THE HOME FRONT

PERHAPS you've made lawn chairs with straight cuts of the hand saw. It is almost as easy to cut curves as to make square cuts but a pattern and a little extra care are necessary for perfect results.

In this design curves add comfort as well as beauty, and a tufted cushion distributes the weight so that springs are not missed so much. The curved pieces are shown at the left. You can see how easy they are to cut out of odds and ends of one-inch lumber that you may have on hand or can get at the nearest lumber dealer. The reinforcing pieces are all square cuts.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears has prepared an actual-size pattern for the curved sections of this chair. Complete dimensions and directions for the chair construction and for making the tufted cushion, with list of materials included. This is pattern 265 and will be sent postpaid for 5 cents. Write direct to:

PAUL BECOMES A MISSIONARY

LESSON TEXT: Acts 13:1-4; 14:8-20.
GOLDEN TEXT: The Holy Spirit said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.—Acts 13:2.

Men are God's instruments for accomplishing His purpose in spreading the gospel message. They must, for such a high and holy calling, be men called and prepared by Him, and to Him, and willing to sacrifice all for His glory. Paul is a great example of such a life. He was—

I. Separated by the Church (13:1-3).

God was about to begin the great missionary enterprise, which began with the journeys of Paul and continues to this day. The church at Antioch had capable men in its membership, and the Holy Spirit called for the separation of two of these, Paul and Barnabas, for a special work.

A number of interesting things emerge here. It is good to note that the church had men trained and ready for service. Do we? Observe that the Holy Spirit worked through the church. There are those who do not speak too highly of the place of the church in this matter. Certainly it is true that if the church has lost its vision and message, God may call men even outside of its membership. But the orderly way—God's way, if the church is ready—is to have the church separate men for service.

The church at Antioch gave its best, without question and without hesitation. It is an example worthy of our emulation.

II. Sent by the Holy Spirit (13:4).

There is a sense in which the Holy Spirit functions as the executive member of the Trinity. His purpose is to magnify the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, to bring men to faith in Him. To carry out that plan, He sends men out to speak of Jesus.

The sent one is always successful, for he goes the way, at the time, and in the power of the Holy Spirit. He is sent by Him in a bold distinction upon the Christian worker.

III. Serving by Deed and Word (14:8-18).

The story of the healing of the man who had been a cripple from birth centers around that beautiful word "faith."

God is always looking for faith in men's women, and so we who are His should be alert for even the slightest indication of a belief in Christ. All too often we blunder along, a bit too eager for action, or too insistent upon a thing which we have in our hands, and thus fail to see the gleam of faith to which we may address the gospel appeal.

"Seeing that he had faith" (v. 9), Paul turned all the power of the eternal God loose in the impotent feet of the man, "and he leaped up and walked." God help us to be ready to be channels for the outflowing of His power!

Impressed by the miracle, the people wanted to accord the disciples the worship of gods. One is impressed both by the promptness with which Paul and Barnabas stopped the demonstration and the skill with which they improved the occasion for a testimony for Christ!

The servants of Christ are in far greater danger when men speak well of them and would worship them, than they are in the hour of opposition and persecution. Not that anyone would suggest that a true word of appreciation or honor be withheld from a faithful teacher or preacher, but let it be given for God's glory and not for the praise of man.

IV. Suffering for Christ's Sake (14:19, 20).

The highest praise quickly turns to the most bitter hatred. Fearing that they had foolishly attempted to defy two Jewish preachers, and being visited by the Jews who made it their business to pursue Paul to this city, they stoned him.

Incidentally, it is of interest to observe how zealous people can be for an evil cause. Having set out to hinder the gospel they were willing, yes eager, to spend time and money to carry out in their purpose. The children of Satan are often more diligent than the children of light (cf. Luke 16:8).

Paul was left for dead; in fact, there are those who believe that he was dead, and that it was at this time he was caught up into the heavens and had the vision spoken of in II Corinthians 12:1-4. If that was the case, the raising of Paul was an actual resurrection from the dead.

For a man so stoned as to be left for dead, to arise and journey on the following day to another city, was a miracle of God's power. In this case, God delivered His servant, not from troubles, but from them. We are not always expected to be saved from trial, but we can be sure that God will deliver us either "out of" or "in" our troubles. Let us trust Him!

WELL, you never know when something you've bought may come in handy, especially in a motion picture studio. Paramount bought two rooms from the Hearst Collection when it was put on sale in New York, consisting of carved oak paneling of the 17th century, originally part of European castles. So—they were used as sets in "The Hitler Gang." They're the living room and library of the Nazi industrial magnate, Alfred Hugenberg, in the picture; Hitler comes to him seeking financial support.

The cast of NBC's "Johnny Presents" has been having a bit of fun with Ginny Simms, we hear, since she has become mayor of Northridge, Calif., where she has a 63-acre ranch. No more calling her Miss Simms or just Ginny—she's "Your Honor" now.

Warner Bros. is certainly trying to do right by Mark Twain. "The Adventures of Mark Twain," co-starring Frederic March and Alexis Smith, will have its nation-wide debut in more than 200 theaters, will be shown at advanced prices for one week.

Those who have been confused by the conflicting stories coming out of South America can't afford to miss the March of Time's new release, "South American Front—1944." It tells, and shows, the truth about Argentina's so-called "palace revolution." It shows what an impressive amount of rubber, quartz, mica and tantalum were supplied by Brazil, and how important was Brazil's grant of air bases.

Too bad everybody who listens to Joan Davis and Jack Haley on the air can't see them working—but it's a great break for the servicemen at the military posts where they've been broadcasting on their eastern trip. When Rudy Vallee went into the service radio wisecracks wondered if Joan could hold up the program that succeeded his; with the able assistance of Haley, the show has moved right into the top ranks.

Deafening noise was created on Vox Pop in a war plant the night Parks Johnson demonstrated the new army lip microphone, which permits distinguishable speech over disturbances. Later a worker who handled the rivet guns was heard talking to his wife over a pay station phone. "Did you hear that noise on the air?" he asked her. She evidently had. "Well," said he, "that was me."

For mystery fans: Republic's making "Secrets of Scotland Yard," with Edgar Barrier. International has signed Joan Bennett to play opposite Edward G. Robinson in "Once Off Guard." And Dick Powell gets the starring role in RKO's "Farewell My Lovely."

Jim Jordan Jr., son of Fibber McGee and Molly, has had his option lifted by RKO. Some months ago the studio signed him as a contract player, and while receiving dramatic training he has appeared in several pictures. Seems likely that he got some coaching at home, too.

Robert Livingston, that gun-tot, hard-ridin' western star recently promoted to straight dramatic roles by Republic, had to take it on the chin from his western pals, who razed him unmercifully after he had to wear a woman's coiffure and dresses in several scenes of "Good-Night, Sweetheart." His one consolation was that as a female impersonator, he fooled Ruth Terry and Henry Hull, who appear with him.

ODDS AND ENDS—Production on "Casanova Brown" was temporarily halted recently—the star, Cary Cooper, was injured when he fell off a bicycle. • RKO borrows lovely Ella Raines from Universal for the lead with John Wayne in "Tall in the Saddle." • Servicemen in hospitals want sheet music, says Frank Novak of "Hoosier Lullaby," who's been entertaining them in a clean-cut style and sent them plenty, now he's urging others to do the same. • It's reported that 20th Century-Fox took a second look at Perry Como's green tints and raised his pay from $25,000 a picture to $100,000 for his first three films.

Let's Face Facts

Policy Being Developed
For Bringing Air Service
To Many Small Towns

By BARROW LYONS
WNU Staff Correspondent

Policies that will determine which of America's 5,331 towns with populations between 1,000 and 5,000 will receive some type of airplane service after the war are now in the making. As a result of proceedings before the Civil Aeronautics board in Washington, just what type of service each small town is likely to receive will be decided.

It would be a good idea to tell your congressman to keep his eye on this development, which so intimately concerns your town and your business.

Only lack of planes and pilots is holding back a tremendous expansion of air traffic, both commercial and private, which will reach every corner of the country when facilities and personnel become available. The rapidity with which pressure for this expansion has developed within the last year is revealed by the number of applications to establish new air services.

By the end of last August, 233 such applications had been filed with CAB. By January 15, the number had increased to 435, and by the end of February there were 577 proposals before the board for new and additional air services.

Of the 577 there were 469 which related to domestic services involving about 500,000 route miles, compared with 45,000 route miles now authorized. Outstanding certificates of public necessity and convenience now designate 288 cities and towns which may receive air service, but only 23 are towns of less than 5,000 population.

It is clear that the applications before CAB will open a new chapter in air transportation, one that is full of technical difficulty and policy problems.

Various Carriers Interested

For instance, some of the existing airlines feel that with their experience and equipment they should be permitted to extend services to cover most of the now unserved towns. But surface carriers, the bus lines and railroads, feel that they should be permitted to protect themselves against probable heavy loss of passengers and freight to air transport by establishing lines of their own. And there are hundreds of small, new companies which desire to service towns too small to be attractive to the larger companies, but which feel they are entitled to ensure their existence by entering some of the larger terminal markets.

Already CAB Examiners William J. Madden and Albert E. Beitel have made an investigation of the need for local feeder and pick-up air services. Oral arguments on this report were heard beginning on April 5. It has been urged that these should be followed by hearings in the regional areas throughout the United States at which local problems could be aired. When the board decides the evidence and gives consideration to establishing an over-all national policy, it will make its recommendations for local standards.

If congress is satisfied with the policies and procedure established by the CAB, no further legislation, except to implement the plan of the CAB with funds, will be required. But in a new field like this, with large and conflicting interests deeply concerned, it would be rather surprising if congress did not take a part in developing policy.

It is virtually certain, however, that as soon as the war ends "strawberry trains" of the air will be carrying fresh fruits and vegetables long distances across our land, and that as the traffic grows more and more of the products from farms and orchards will move in this fashion, beating the fast freight and express trains by many hours.

One of the organizations giving most thought to this development is the Airlines Committee for United States Air Policy, organized to protect the interests of existing air carriers. A subcommittee on air transport of the Railroad Committee for the Study of Transportation, Association of American Railroads, is another body deeply concerned.

The Airlines Committee plans all-cargo services, in addition to hauling passengers. Aircraft manufacturers are designing refrigerator planes, flying freight cars to carry tremendous loads great distances. A plane flying only 100 miles an hour could carry fresh pork from Iowa to the Pacific coast in 15 hours, as against the present time of nearly two weeks.

Pick-up mail services by which a plane without stopping collects mail at small stations along local passenger routes, is a type of air service receiving consideration. Recently two CAB examiners recommended that passenger air service could well be supplemented by this type of operation. Only one carrier, All-American Aviation, now flies a pick-up mail service, using small, single-engine motorized planes that scoop up a mailing bag between two poles, and with a patented pick-up line hook the bag.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

Entered in the Postoffice at Clanton, Alabama, as second-class matter under the Act of Congress of March, 1897

MRS. MARK L. TUCKER, Owner R. M. TUCKER, M'g'n.-Ed

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Great Caesar Augusta. You'd thought we had committed mayhem on something. We only told you of a rumor going the rounds when we mentioned the Thorby Milk Plant in the column last week. Early Thursday morning we received a long distance call from Mr. Barber stating that we were talking through our hat when we mentioned the plant there moving. Well, in the course of the day various and sundry subscribers called to inform us of the same thing. Anyway we know now, don't we. And while we acknowledge we will add a couple of columns to that capacity of our local plant could have read 800,000 gallons instead of 8,000. And by the way, that was Mr. Fenn Jones administration.

Another typographical error last week that caused a stir at City Hall. You cannot spell City Clerk Simpson's name with two o's. In putting his signature to the legal advertising asking for sealed bids on some City property the linotype operator spelled his name "Sompson." For this Mr. Simpson, we apologize.

The wife and I celebrated our 18th anniversary last Saturday. Try as we would we could not find a list of wedding anniversaries anywhere that called for nice presents on that anniversary. However, we did find that the twentieth is China and the twenty-fifth is silver. Time ain't long as it has been.

Looks like Jim Simpson's misleading propaganda is going to backfire in his face. The voters today are too smart to be hood-winked by a lot of false statements against his opponent. Looks like his platform, "This Is Where I Stand," should have been, "This Is Where I Lay," or is it "Lie"

Went down to the city water plant Saturday morning with Mayor Stapp and looked over the ground for the new playground sponsored by the city. The mayor will have done a real service to Clanton when he finishes with the work he has started there. Regardless of how some old moss-backs feel about it, children are going to find entertainment. If we do not furnish it, then they will seek it where they can find it and generally that isn't exactly where we would like our children to be. Healthful play, under the supervision of a physical education teacher will pay big dividends to the children of Clanton, to say nothing of its value to the parents who will know their offspring are in good company and enjoying their youth as is their God given right.

Well, we're going into the home stretch now and all candidates are redoubling their efforts to talk Mr. and Mrs. Voter into seeing things their way. As yet things have been pretty dead politically speaking but we think they will liven up a bit from here on out.

We go to work this week-end on the second Annual of the Maplesville High School. Much more time and thought has been put into this year's edition and our hopes are high for a better year book. Howard Nell Smith was named editor this year with Evelyn Gregg society editor and Patty Nix business manager. These three with the aid of their staff and the guiding hand of Mrs. Georgia Billingsley have produced a book that the parents as well as the students of Maplesville High school will be proud. The Vista will be off the press and ready for distribution around the first of May.

ALABAMA LEADS IN RECRUITING WOMEN FOR THE WAVES

Navy recruiting stations in Alabama have been praised for their co-operation which led to enlistment of more women in the Waves in Alabama than in any other state in the Eighth Naval District. It was announced by M. H. Potter, Petty Officer in charge of the Navy Recruiting Station at Montgomery.

In a letter to Lt. O. H. Swayze, officer in charge of Waves Procurement in Alabama, Capt. E. D. Walbridge, Director of Naval Officer Procurement, with headquarters in New Orleans, wrote as follows.

"The Director notes with pleasure and a great deal of gratification the excellent results achieved during the month of March, 1944, in the enlistment of 61 women in the Women's Reserve. This is the highest number enlisted by any of the offices in the Eighth Naval District during the month and it is the result of fine cooperation and continuous effort on the part of the personnel in your office assigned to the Women's Reserve Section and the representatives of the Recruiting Service covering the territory assigned to your office."

To Lt. C. S. Carroll, head of the 10 recruiting stations involved, Lt. O. H. Swayze said that the record could not have been made without the co-operation of the Navy Recruiting Stations in Alabama.

Navy Recruiting Stations in Alabama helping to make the record include Anniston, Bessemer, Dothan, Evergreen, Florence, Gadsden, Huntsville, Montgomery, Opelika and Tuscaloosa.

Lt. Carroll and Lt. Swayze have headquarters in Birmingham.

A Navy Recruiting Office will be in Clanton every Monday, at the local draft board.

HERE'S ONE BIG REASON WHY TELEPHONES ARE SCARCE

It's the NEW 45,000-ton U. S. S. Missouri, most powerful fighting ship afloat. It will carry about 1200 telephones, 350 miles of telephone wire, and a ship-wide battle announcing system.

Remember that Uncle Sam launched 568 warships last year and as new war fronts are opened and present ones extended, the Army and Navy's telephone equipment needs grow in volume and urgency.

Normally, we have reserve telephone facilities. But since the National Defense program started in 1940, the number of Southern Bell telephones in service has increased by more than half a million. The reserves are about used up.

There's a waiting list now—and we're doing everything possible to keep that list from getting longer.

For example, telephone instruments and other equipment that can be reused are being repaired and renovated and put back into service.

If you haven't been able to get a telephone, we're sorry. And you can be sure that we are eager to fill your order as soon as we can.

Why Alabama Democrats Rally To The Support Of

LISTER HILL

Candidate for Re-Election
To The U. S. Senate

(A REAL DEMOCRAT)

1. BECAUSE LISTER HILL'S 20-year record of performances and achievements in Congress is the basis of his campaign for re-election.
2. BECAUSE LISTER HILL'S record shows that he has accomplished for Alabama and the Nation as much or more than any man ever sent to Congress from Alabama.
3. BECAUSE LISTER HILL'S family has lived 100 years in the Deep South where he was born, reared and educated, and he has the viewpoint of all true Southern Democrats that the South must solve its race problems without outside interference, without poll-tax elimination and without anti-lynching legislation.
4. BECAUSE LISTER HILL, by his co-operation and ability, his fearlessness, honesty, sincerity and wide experience, has the respect, confidence and support of Alabama's great Senator and farm leader, John Bankhead.
5. BECAUSE LISTER HILL is a proved and staunch friend of Labor, Farmer,

Education and Veterans of past and present wars.

6. BECAUSE LISTER HILL was one of the creators and now is a staunch defender of TVA, rural electrification and cheaper electricity.
7. BECAUSE LISTER HILL, as a champion of the common people, voted against present Federal Income Tax Laws which place too much burden on small and medium incomes and are too complicated.
8. BECAUSE LISTER HILL advocated aggressive national defense five years before Pearl Harbor, and now in the U. S. Senate is a nationally recognized leader in the conduct of the war, and in the plans for lasting peace after the war.
9. BECAUSE LISTER HILL, contrary to charges of his Opposition, has not made one false campaign statement.
10. BECAUSE LISTER HILL'S campaign is supported by many thousands of people from all walks of life and by Alabama newspapers in every section of the State.

Voters Can't Be Fooled By Simpson

1. BECAUSE JIM SIMPSON is supported by, and preaches the same political doctrine as is preached by the Republicans, Willkie Democrats, "ticket-splitters", ex-carpet baggers, selfish groups and war profiteers.
2. BECAUSE JIM SIMPSON, as a life-long corporation lawyer, is a friend of the "Big Mules" and is opposed to the "Slick Hoe Handles".
3. BECAUSE JIM SIMPSON, is deliberately sabotaging America's war effort by attempting to magnify necessary public sacrifices, inconveniences and irritations of wartime in a frantic effort to slip into Congress as a secret agent of the "Big Mules".
4. BECAUSE JIM SIMPSON'S Democracy has been fouled by political cuckoos who lay their eggs in another bird's nest and who, to say the least, are not real Democrats.
5. BECAUSE JIM SIMPSON'S campaign managers have deliberately waved a lighted match over the powder keg of race relations and class hatred in a desperate effort to create votes—although Simpson's own legislative record on the race issue proves he is not in sympathy with the doctrine of white supremacy. (House Journal Alabama Vol. 2, Page 2980.)
6. BECAUSE JIM SIMPSON has no platform at all and futilely attempts to create false issues by shouting "state's rights", "white supremacy" and the old Republican wail of "less bureaucracy".
7. BECAUSE JIM SIMPSON voted seven times in the Alabama Legislature against taxing chain stores, and when finally defeated tried to exempt chain stores from taxation in Counties over 90,000 population (Jefferson). (House Journal 1929, Pages 1671-76).
8. BECAUSE JIM SIMPSON is the only member of the Alabama Senate who did not vote for rural electrification and cheaper electricity, and the only member of the Legislature who voted against school teachers and school children in 1927.
9. BECAUSE JIM SIMPSON steadfastly refuses to tell the people of Alabama the truth about who is running him for office of U. S. Senator, and why.
10. BECAUSE JIM SIMPSON'S campaign workers have threatened State and County officeholders with the warning that when Lister Hill wins, Simpson will be "back in the Senate of Alabama" and it would be healthy for them then not to have made "an active fight against him".

CHILTON HELL CAT

CHILTON COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL NAMED FIGHTER

During the third war loan drive Chilton County High School sold the required number of bonds to entitle it to name a fighter which the school has christened "Chilton Hell Cat."

It is a North American P-51 Mustang fighter, and is equipped with a Rolls-Royce engine. The Office of War Information says it is "the highest ceiling and the highest speed of any fighter in existence." These planes are built by North American Aviation, Incorporated.

Thomas Junior and Stanton school likewise were awarded the honor of each naming one of the fighters. Thomas named theirs "Flying Tiger" and Stanton the "Stanton Hawk."

News About Soldiers

mechanic His mother, Mrs. Carrie Lawrence resides in Clanton.

Cpl. Julian G. Coggins, of Clanton, Rt. 5, recently had the surprise of his life when an unexpected guest at a jungle position of the Panama Coast Artillery Command turned out to be Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

He was one of a group of soldiers in Capt. Elmer R. Wegner's unit who met the First Lady during her recent Caribbean tour when she popped in, unannounced, at a battery dance in a gaily decorated bushband dayroom.

Although she had competition from many other women who attended under the auspices of the United Women's Service Organizations, Mrs. Roosevelt monopolized the evening. She smilingly acknowledged the rush by the Clanton soldier and his buddies. The U. W. S. Q. girls, as well as the soldiers, seemed less interested in dancing than in speaking with the first lady.

A letter comes from S-Sgt. L. D. Easterling, who has recently landed in England, says its very much the same there as it is here, but it doesn't take long to realize the difference when a car comes zooming down the road on the left side. Guess that's right, too, imagine what a disturbance it would create if that were to happen here. S-Sgt. Easterling reports that the English people are very nice to the "Yanks" as they insist on calling the American boys.

Set. Dan Alred has been home a few days with his mother Mrs. Hattie Alred. Sgt. Alred has been at Dixon Field in Tampa, Fla., but is now at Savannah, Ga.

A LETTER FROM C. T. REYNOLDS
Four years ago I enlisted in the 5th Signal Co. Division of the United States Army and after serving two years in the states I was sent to Iceland where I spent one year.

I would like to give the good people of Chilton County a bit of first hand information about our boys overseas.

During my stay in Iceland I saw our fighting men as they really are. I saw our men sad, happy, homesick and enduring some of the worst weather conditions men could be asked to endure.

I saw men standing guard duty in some of the worst weather conditions Mother Nature could produce while their buddies were trying to get a bit of sleep and rest for their duties expected of them.

I saw a small group of soldiers stationed on out-post, so far from civilization that they considered themselves lucky if they got to see civilization in 6 months. I saw boys digging fox holes, building gun installations and constructing telephone lines in thirty below zero weather.

I am afraid the people in America don't realize just what our boys are going through in this war.

I certainly must not forget what the Red Cross are doing for our boys in Iceland and other parts of the world. That is the all important link between our boys and their families over here. They are doing a grand job and my thanks to the Red Cross. Donate to the Red Cross and help our boys over there.

As a former resident of Chilton County, I would like to hear from my friends there.

I was discharged from the army a year ago with a disabled discharge and am now stationed in the Veteran's Hospital at Outwood, Ky.

Yours sincerely,
Claude T. (Ted) Reynolds

MRS. LENNARD THOMAS Runs for Re-election as DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEEWOMAN

Mrs. Lennard Thomas, Montgomery, Ala. has served one term as Democratic National Committeewoman and is asking re-election in the May second primary. Mrs. Thomas' platform is WIN THE WAR and bring the boys home. She feels the most important thing now is that we all put our concentrated efforts to speed victory in the coming invasion, for after all there is only one front which starts at home and goes to the fighting line. She feels we have done a good job so far, but that the war is not won, and it is necessary that we awaken to this fact and pull together to make the world a better place. Her suggestion is that if we pray for our leaders more and criticize less we would get better results. Stop an think, could you have done better than our leaders have done? Mrs. Thomas wishes the voters to feel that she deserves to be re-elected.

On the run in the Pacific, Jap forces remained on the go in India, thrusting forward toward the Assam-Bengal railroad supplying Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's U. S.-Chinese troops in northern Burma. With U. S. forces closing in from the west, the Japs abandoned the northern and southern coasts of New Britain and fell back toward

As the Japs pressed on the Assam-Bengal railway in India, they severed the network of highways feeding Adm. Louis Mountbatten's British and Indian troops in the battle zone, forcing their supply by air in the mountainous jungle area.

DRAFT:

Take Younger Men

Delay ranging from a few days to 90 days in the induction of men over 26 was forecast as the result of orders to local boards to postpone the drafting of registrants in this age group and rush the processing of those under 26, to meet the services' demands for younger men.

Following exhaustion of the pool of men under 26, those from 26 to 29, and 30 and over will be next in the order of induction, with fathers granted special consideration in all cases where other factors, such as employment in essential occupation, are equal. Meanwhile, congress studied proposals to push 1,000,000 4Fs into war work, by formation of compulsory labor battalions when 4Fs refuse to accept necessary jobs.

The navy needs 400,000 men by September 1 to reach its goal of 3,600,000, and it will require 50,000 to 75,000 monthly after that to maintain full strength. Its objective of 7,700,000 men already attained, the army needs from 75,000 to 100,000 men monthly for replacements.

SUPREME COURT:

Labor Decisions

In three far reaching decisions affecting labor, the Supreme court ruled:

1. That under the National Labor Relations act, an employer must deal with a union designated as a collective bargaining agent, and not with individual members of the union who have not formally renounced it.
2. That the National Labor Relations board can order an employer to bargain collectively with a union that has lost a majority of its membership during negotiations.
3. That under the 13th amendment and the anti-peonage act, no man could be held for criminal action if he failed to fulfill his promise of going to work after receiving money. The court declared that the complainant should have other legal recourse in such cases.

QUEEN BEES: A London radio engineer has devised an electronic apparatus to identify a queen bee from among 50,000 ordinary bees. It is only necessary that the queen be daubed with a speck of radio-active material.

AGRICULTURE:

Wheat Prospects

With an indicated yield of 12.8 bushels per acre, the U. S. department of agriculture predicted a 1944 winter wheat crop of 601,759,000 bushels, 72,153,000 more than last year's production.

Western Kansas and the adjoining wheat sections of Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Colorado benefited most from recent rain, the precipitation offsetting a moisture deficiency of last fall. Nebraska, however, still was reported in need of rainfall to perk weakened plants.

Frequent rains or snows gave the crop producing areas of the country the wettest March since 1922, the department said, delaying farm work in nearly all states.

Farm Values Up

Average prices of farm land in the U. S. were pushed up 15 per cent in the year ending March 1, the department of agriculture reports, with values now 38 per cent above the 1935-39 figures and sales of land are more numerous than during 1919. Much of the acreage is going into "active-farmer ownership" it was stated. More than half the sales were for cash.

Some buyers resold for a quick profit, but the majority of purchasers are seeking additional land for planting. Compared with the 1935-39 averages, values have increased almost threefold in the East-South-Central states and more than twofold in the South Atlantic, Mountain and Pacific states.

POLITICS:

Dewey Boomed

Growing strength of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, N. Y., as the favorite for the Republican presidential nomination in June, and the strong showing made by Gen. Douglas MacArthur for the position in the Illinois GOP primary, highlight political talk.

Of equal interest, however, is President Roosevelt's continued popularity in the Democratic party, reflected in his capture of the Wisconsin convention delegates, and his heavy vote in the Nebraska preferential primaries.

Governor Dewey's candidacy boomed sky-high in the Wisconsin primaries, when 18 convention delegates pledged to him won handily over the field. In the Nebraska primaries, approximately 15,000 voters expressed their favoritism for him by writing in his name on the ballot.

Running strongly in the rural district, General MacArthur polled over 450,000 votes in the Illinois primaries.

MEXICO:

President Camacho

Quickly overpowered by Camacho himself, the lieutenant was taken into custody, where he complained of a recent law prohibiting Mexican army officers from attending church in uniform. Later in trying to escape from guards, the assailant was felled with gunfire.

As the news of the attempted assassination stirred the emotional Mexican populace, Camacho calmly warned against turbulence, declaring: "I wish you to see this as an incident possibly caused by a sole individual or at the most a small group. Use no circumstances to divide the Mexican nation. We must continue our effort for the conservation of its unity."

RUM:

Admit Old Stocks

Because restrictions against importation into the U. S. would not help to divert alcohol to the synthetic rubber or other war industries, the War Production board lifted all bans against the shipment of rum three years old or older into the country.

As a result, it is expected that 2,000,000 gallons of rum will be imported from Cuba, Mexico, Jamaica and other foreign countries. United States industrial areas like Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands will not be affected, however, since the U. S. regulates the production of beverage cane spirits in its territories.

Since the rum affected by the new order was manufactured before the present emphasis on volume sales and lighter grades, it is of high quality, the WPB said.

CIVILIAN GOODS

To prevent a drain on manpower in war industrial centers, the War Production board froze production of civilian goods at the level of the last three months in 18 labor shortage areas throughout the country.

Reflecting the changing needs of warfare, the WPB also raised production of heavy artillery, munitions and gun cradles to top priority. One effect of the order freezing production of civilian goods is expected to be the reduction in output of electric irons.

Washington biggest U. S. Businessmen Attempt To Define Free Enterprise

Chamber of Commerce Officials Inaugurate Education Campaign Designed to Teach Specific Phase of Democracy.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D.C.

In the last few weeks in Washington—and in London, too, for that matter—there has been a crescendo demand for an explanation of our foreign policy. It is reported that a similar cry is going up from the soldiers at the front—What are we fighting for?

Secretary Hull attempted an answer not too satisfactory to his critics. There will be further official efforts at elucidation. But at least one brass-tacks institution whose headquarters is in Washington has come to the conclusion that before we can understand what we are fighting for, we must have a better understanding of what we think we want to fight for. Everybody on the allied side claims that democracy is the common ground upon which all stand but there is considerable difference as to how each one defines democracy.

Leaving the broader international aspects for a moment, I want to report a unique campaign of education whose purpose is to get just what is meant by one specific phase of democracy about which we hear a great deal, namely, "free enterprise." This organized effort is being promulgated by the one group whose members use that term most frequently.

And, as their leaders admit, frequently don't know its meaning and who can explain it to them is the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Before me, I have a document from which I want to quote five lines:

"Said one newspaperman to another: 'I'd fall dead if I found a businessman who wasn't in favor of free enterprise.'"

"Replied the other: 'I'd fall dead if I found a businessman who really wanted it.'"

The document quoted from is not a communist pronouncement—it is "The Economic Sentinel," printed by the United States Chamber of Commerce, and it is just part of an educational effort on the part of this body of businessmen, whose objective is (in quoting from another pamphlet published by the Chamber of Commerce):

"To develop in every community a group of leaders who really understand, and who can explain and who can convincingly advocate the economic system of free, private, competitive enterprise, or to put it another way, American enterprise."

An Important Discovery

The campaign of education among the Chamber's members does not seem to have been going on for some time but the general public didn't realize what was happening until they heard Johnston, the president of the chamber, say at a luncheon early in March, copies of which are sold, are still in great demand.

Mr. Johnston criticized labor but for every one of the "seven deadly sins" which he said labor had committed, he said the parallel sin committed by business.

Johnston, in making this speech and in his subsequent writings and utterances, is practicing what his organization has been preaching in the campaign of education now carrying on through the chamber's department of governmental affairs in Washington.

They provide a program which their local chapters can follow, telling how to organize discussion groups, which they point out, should include public officials, ministers, professional men and women and—believe it or not—they strongly recommend the (paid) assistance of a college professor. The purpose is the understanding of that democratic principle—free enterprise.

It was from the document compiled by one of these doctors of philosophy, Dr. V. M. Loos, economic counsel of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, for which I was quoting.

For and Against

If confession is good for the soul, the soul of business in Olympia, Washington (where the quoted lecture was given), must be hale and hearty after hearing Dr. Watts declare:

"A city chamber of commerce opposes restrictions which neighboring towns sometimes place on the deliveries of merchandise by city merchants and truckers. Yet the same organization is likely to help erect similar barriers against out-of-state or out-of-town enterprise which might compete with its own industries or merchants."

"Businessmen dislike restrictive policies of farmers and labor unions. Yet many of them say they favor free competition among themselves would be ruinous. So they lobby for measures to restrict business competition and to legalize price-fixing by government or by their own organizations."

"Chambers of commerce frequently join the clamor for un-economic local projects of the state or federal government on the grounds that they are not getting theirs; why shouldn't we get ours? Such chamber of commerce socialism leads to increased tax burdens which correspondingly restrict markets and jobs in free enterprise."

This is the kind of strong medicine which the United States Chamber of Commerce recommends the average American to absorb so that "free enterprise" may be understood. Here is another sample of straight-from-the-shoulder talk:

"Recent corrosions of economic liberty in the United States are not due to the efforts of a few communists or fascists. Instead they chiefly come from the fact that so many of us care only about our own liberties and are indifferent or even hostile to possession of similar liberties by others of our fellow citizens. In fact, for a momentary gain in higher prices, higher wage rates or government favors, many of us are willing even to sell our own freedom."

I wish I might quote further but space does not permit it for it goes without saying that real "free enterprise," its virtues and its benefits, are expounded in great detail. But it is enough to show you a surprising degree of frankness, a remarkable willingness to think. It is something when the very people who are loudest in their accusation that "free enterprise" is being destroyed by Tom, Dick, Harry John (Lewis) et alia, are willing to admit that they themselves, may be enemies of free, competitive enterprise.

Hitting the Trail

When Eric Johnston arose and declared that labor and management must "hit the sawdust trail together," he started something. But actually he was only carrying on something which his organization—I don't know whether he was the chicken or the egg—had already started. It is a process by which businessmen (and in businessmen, the farmer is included for he is a part of the free enterprise system) can get an understanding of what the American system of economic democracy really is and then see whether they are really supporting this American system or not.

I have no idea how successful Mr. Johnston and his colleagues will be but I know some of them are enthusiastic enough to believe that they are ready to serve wherever they might be keynoter at the Republican National convention in June and some are even optimistic enough to provide themselves with curry combs just in case they might be called upon to groom a dark horse for the presidential race.

But politics aside, there is cause for rejoicing when anybody sets out to try to define at least one phase of the thing we are supposed to be fighting for and to do some thing about it. As Leonard Read, general manager of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, said just a few weeks ago:

"We have come to the conclusion that the best contribution we can make to the thinking in our country is to improve our own thinking." Amen to that.

U. S. expenditures for war purposes hit a new high in February—$7,808,000,000, as compared with $7,416,000,000 in January, an increase of 5.3 per cent.

The cabinet of Premier Hideki Tojo has decided to postpone the elections of prefectural town and village assemblies for one year until September, 1945.

Approximately 1/4 of the 112,000 people of Japanese ancestry evacuated from the West coast to relocation centers two years ago are now living and supporting themselves outside the centers.

BOYS ARE RECRUITED TO HARVEST POTATOES

AUBURN, Ala. — With the co-operation of city school officials, extension workers are making rapid progress in recruiting 1205 non-farm high school boys to become Victory Farm Volunteers for work in harvesting the Baldwin County potato crop. Eight hundred seventy white and 335 Negro boys between the ages of 14 and 17 years are needed.

No effort is being spared in preparing comfortable and healthful labor camps for these volunteers, states P. O. Davis, extension director. Alabama Polytechnic Institute. The State Public Health Department, in addition to providing physical examinations for boys before they leave home, has been active in establishing good health standards for each camp and is helping to provide nursing facilities for safeguarding the health of the boys while in Baldwin County.

The State Military Department, the State Highway Department, and the State Defense Council are co-operating in providing comfortable beds for the camps.

Through the cooperation of these public agencies, Baldwin County farmers and the boys in the labor camps an efficient job of harvesting is anticipated.

MILK SUGAR IS BEING PROCESSED IN ALABAMA

AUBURN, Ala.—Alabama now has a manufacturing plant for processing milk sugar to be used in producing the new drug "Pencilin," announces F. W. Burns, extension specialist in dairy marketing, Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The plant is located at Decatur and receives whey from the Decatur, Ardmore and Russellville cheese plants. Farmers are not given their whey back due to the fact that milk sugar is so badly needed in the production of pencilin.

Milk sugar (lactose) provides the media on which the mold required for the production of the miracle new drug pencilin is prepared.

The government estimates that 15,000,000 pounds of lactose will be required by the most essential users of this milk product during 1944. Milk sugar is an important ingredient of infant food, pharmaceuticals, and certain forms of explosives.

IMPORTANT FARM TASK

AUBURN, Ala. — With the shortage of textile and paper bags and the season already here when the use of such bags is so important, farmers are urged to take special precautions in the use of second hand bags.

In many areas used bags can be returned to trade channels by sale to second hand bag dealers or through bag exchanges. Through these arrangements many farmers have been able to dispose of surplus bags so that other farmers could obtain them.

Chief Pharmacist's Mate Ted Nelson doesn't mind assisting at the delivery of a baby, but he doesn't want to specialize on such cases.

Nelson, who has been in Uncle Sam's navy the last nine years, recently delivered an eight-pound son to a native woman—his fourth delivery since he joined the navy.

"I wish they'd give me time to set up my hospital before they call me for this ticklish job," Nelson smiled. "Why, we hadn't occupied this island two days when this woman was brought to the sick bay by her husband."

Nelson was first called upon to deliver a baby while stationed at Point Barrow, Alaska, five years ago.

John Bagby, former field man with the South Carolina Peach Growers Association, has been appointed fruits and vegetables marketing specialist with the Alabama Extension Service.

A special dairy program for dairymen of central Alabama who produce grade "A" milk and milk for processing will be held jointly by the Extension Service and Experiment Station at the Black Belt Substation, Marion Junction, May 5.

CANDIDATE FOR THE OFFICE OF
Chilton County Treasurer

I want to say now, that I hope we can have a fair and impartial election. I want to say to all the voters of our County, both men and women that I am sure the most of you know by this time that I am a candidate for this office, from my former letters in our County Newspapers and from my announcement now in both of them.

As much as I would like to see you all in person before our Election to be held here on May the 2nd and 30th, it will be impossible to do this on the rationed gas. I am taking this method of reaching you all through our papers and saying to you as though in person, here and now, that I am reasonably sure of my election and if elected I will give the office my undivided attention and not make the office a side-line.

I feel competent to attend to this office and worthy of your consideration. I shall feel greatly honored to have your vote and influence in my behalf.

This letter will appear in this paper until the election as my personal appeal to those I will not be able to see in person.

Yours most truly,

C. Reese Mullins.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA

Eleven counties in eight states, including Dale, Randolph, Walker, and Winston in Alabama, were added April 1 by the United States Department of Agriculture to the list of counties officially designated as modified accredited brucellosis free areas. These additions make a total of 591 counties in 22 states now in that classification.

Based on current crop prospects, more canned fruits and vegetables are expected to be produced this year than during the previous pack year, but as a result of increased military needs, civilians may expect decreases in certain items.

Here is a good reason for growing gardens this year. The Government has asked that about 70 per cent of the commercially packed vegetables be set aside for Army and lend lease use. Last year the amount set aside was 50 per cent.

Applications for sugar for 1944 canning are already coming in to many local war price and ration board, according to the Office of Price Administration. Unfortunately, many of these applications have the wrong stamp attached. The stamp which should be used is spare stamp No. 37 in War Ration Book Four, not sugar stamp No. 37.

Speed Help for Disabled Vets

Camps Vacated by Troops Going Overseas to Be Used as Hospitals.

WASHINGTON. — Moves to help the veterans' administration, in hospitalizing war casualties and speeding the handling of disability claims, are well under way.

Brig. Gen. Frank Hines, veterans administrator, is working out with the army details of a plan whereby a number of army camps vacated by troops going overseas will be turned over to Hines as hospitals to supplement present facilities.

Hines has stated repeatedly that shortages of skilled help have hampered the adjudication of claims. He recently announced that 100,000 claims have been acted upon, with $17,000,000 paid out to veterans or their dependents.

The latest figures, as of November 30, show 188,998 claims filed, of which 33,732 were allowed, 68,702 were disallowed, and 85,177 were pending.

Bed Facilities.

The situation with regard to hospital bed facilities is this: On October 31, when the last census of hospital beds was made by the veterans' administration, 56,494 of the 67,111 beds in 93 installations were occupied, leaving approximately 10,600 vacant beds.

General Hines estimates that beds under construction or projected will bring to 100,000 the number of beds in the administration's own facilities, and he says it should be possible to obtain at least an equal number from the army and navy shortly after the war ends.

These combined facilities would take care of immediate needs, he says, but he predicts that a bed capacity of 300,000 will be required by 1949, due to the fact that hospitalization now is open to all veterans of all wars—men and women—whether or not their disability is service-connected.

He recalls that after the last war, the peak load of service-connected disabilities requiring hospitalization was reached in 1922, four years after the armistice, when 26,869 such men were hospitalized.

Few Are Battle Casualties.

Since the strength of the armed forces in the present war is approximately three times that of the last war, Hines estimates that the maximum hospital load of the second World War service-connected disabled at any one time would be approximately 80,000.

From Pearl Harbor up to November 30, there were 35,216 service-connected and nonservice-connected disabled of the present war hospitalized in veterans' installations. But on the latter date, only 9,469 remained in the hospitals.

The veterans' administration also says that, of a total of 21,419 service-connected disabled on its pension rolls for this war up to October 31, only 890—or 2.79 per cent—were battle casualties.

How about the veterans of the first World war? From September, 1919, to June 30, 1943, the number of cases hospitalized was 2,507,527.

On October 31, 1943, there remained in the hospitals 42,582 veterans of that war, of whom 32,639 were now service-connected cases.

In this war, says the veterans' administration, the ratio of nonservice-connected to service-connected veterans who have been hospitalized in its installations is 2 1/2 to 1.

Nazis Use New Rocket to Protect Coastal Ships

LONDON.—The air ministry disclosed that Germany was equipping coastal convoy ships with a new weapon, a rocket fired from a special gun. It was described as a "parachute projectile."

When coastal command Beaufighters attacked enemy shipping off the Norwegian coast they had to run the gauntlet of such projectiles but hit one medium sized merchantman, one small cargo vessel and two escort ships. The projectile, which opened in midair, had a canister attached by a cable to a parachute.

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics. 568 New Ships Set Peak in '43

WPB Solves Major Problems In Mass Production, Nelson Reports.

WASHINGTON.—"The nation has definitely solved the major problems involved in mass production of munitions," Donald M. Nelson reported. The War Production board's monthly production statement disclosed this new record for naval ship construction in 1943:

Two 45,000-ton battleships, 11 cruisers, 15 aircraft carriers, 50 carrier escorts, 128 destroyers, 306 destroyer-escorts, and 56 submarines.

The navy's goal for 1944 calls for almost 50 per cent more new tonnage than was built in 1943, Mr. Nelson said.

Production of naval ships in December, however, was 5 per cent under the November peak, the statement revealed, and four of the six major munitions programs also declined, ships, guns and fire-control equipment, ammunition, combat and motor vehicles. Typh programs were up, aircraft and communication and electronics equipment.

Produce Heavier Planes.

The fact that overall production held abreast of November was attributable largely to a 5 per cent increase in the tonnage of war planes, said Mr. Nelson. The number of planes delivered, 8,802, was a gain of only 13 aircraft over November, but there was growing emphasis on heavier, long-range planes. "The lack of an increase at the year-end in total munitions production reflects the fact that, in the main, the war production program is now in high gear and has settled down for the long pull," the WPB chairman said.

By major groupings, December arms production showed these changes from November: ships (value of work done), down 2 per cent; guns and fire-control, down 1 per cent; ammunition, down 7 per cent; aircraft, down 1 per cent; signal and radio equipment and other electronics, up 4 per cent; aircraft (tonnage), up 5 per cent.

Aircraft will be expanded throughout 1944, Mr. Nelson declared. A 65 per cent tonnage increase over 1943 production is planned, including spares and parts, with about 100,000 planes turned out, as compared with the 65,919 planes delivered in 1943. Two other major programs are scheduled to go up. For ships, general a 20 per cent increase over 1943 is planned, while signal and electronic equipment is to be up 25 per cent. With aircraft, it groups account for more than 60 per cent of the total planned 1944 munitions program.

Increase Invasion Craft.

The downward trend of production for the ground forces is checked by some counter-trends; heavy trucks, for instance, will be up more than 60 per cent over last year. Similarly, landing craft for invasion purposes are slated for a rise of more than 170 per cent over 1943.

"The job ahead will continue to demand maximum effort and ingenuity from labor, management and government," Mr. Nelson said, but he added that there were now adequate supplies of most critical materials and that critical components such as valves and heat exchangers were, except in a few cases, no longer holding up important programs.

"There are plenty of difficult problems ahead in aircraft, coal, anti-friction bearings, tire manufacturing, wood pulp, leather, lumber, textiles and landing vessels," Mr. Nelson said.

He reported that the 1944 cargo ship program would not be much larger than in 1943, "but its make-up will be quite different." The mass-produced Liberty ships, which made up about two-thirds of the 1943 tonnage, will be less than half of the 1944 total. The emphasis will be on better, faster ships.

Who is backing JIM SIMPSON'S

Candidacy for the U. S. Senate?

Ask the farmers who are rallying by thousands to Simpson's support, because of Hill's weak farm record, his original vote for subsidies, and his lack of fight against the anti-South bureaucrats; who want only fair prices for the foods they produce, and a fair allotment of farm machinery, equal to that of other states.

Ask the small business men who are choked by a flood of needless rules, regulations and reports; and have not the funds to hire special accountants and tax experts.

Ask the white-collar workers—the forgotten people of today—who are frozen to their pre-war salaries, while labor and defense workers enjoy sky-high, wartime wages.

Ask the mothers and fathers with sons in the service who have cheered Simpson's courage in declaring "there shall be no more strikes for the duration as long as a single American boy is in need of weapons of war!"

Ask those who have served with him in the House or Senate about his courage, character and ability—yes, even ask his political opponents! To a man they will tell you Simpson is honest, clean and capable.

Ask those who favor Local Government, honest government, clean government and LESS government.

Ask those who believe in White Supremacy and want a Senator in Washington who can and will speak out for State Control of race relations.

Ask all of those who are sick and tired of the deal the South is now getting in Washington—anti-poll tax fights; racial segregation fights; elimination of the two-thirds rule at Democratic conventions; considerably less than our share of war industries convertible to peacetime uses; the age-old freight rate discrimination; the Supreme Court ruling opening our primaries to negro vote; and the many other unwarranted criticisms and attacks that make us more than ever the stepchild of the Nation.

Naturally you want NATURAL SODA

The Natural Side Dresser

Over 500,000 tons of Chilean Soda have been brought in for this year's crops. More is expected in time for side dressing, but there are distribution complications. The War Production Board and the War Food Administration control distribution of all nitrogen supplies under an allocation program. Principally, this program takes into account three things: (1) total supply of nitrogen products; (2) their respective locations and capacities; (3) crop requirements. So, if Chilean Soda happens to be scarce in your section, it is a war-time dislocation, a temporary scarcity.

If you haven't been able to get the Chilean Soda you need for top dressing and side dressing, don't blame your fertilizer man. Put the blame where it belongs . . . on Hitler and Hirohito.

A vast supply of natural soda is right where nature put it—in Chile. Large quantities are ready for shipment. Every possible ton of this vital material is being brought here in time for this year's crops.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lieut. Col. Frank Kurtz, Flying Fortress pilot, tells of that fatal day when the Japs struck in the Philippines. Eight of his men are killed fighting for shelter and Old 99, his favorite Flying Fortress, is demolished before it can get off the ground. They escape to Australia, spend Christmas day there, and shortly after General Brereton orders them to take the bombers to Java. From there they start on flight for Davao, in the Philippines. They see a great concentration of ships below them—a Pearl Harbor set-up, but fighters come up and hack-ack get hot. They make the bomb run, the bombs are flicked out one by one, the bombardier shouts "bombs away," and they turn and speed for home.

CHAPTER IX

"I poured on every ounce of power we had, and weched it to turn for time, that old Jim, who had dropped his bombs before I did, had already started his turn to get off the target a few seconds before me.

"The next thing I did was to call down the bombardier and the navigator to come on up and tell me what we'd done to the Japs.

"They said it had been a sight to watch. A few of the Jap cruisers and destroyers had managed to get under way, and their wakes laced the water in great spirals and swirls as they tried to dodge the bombs. Aside from these few, they said, we'd caught the Japs absolutely flat-footed. If there had been enough of us, we could have blown a chunk out of their fleet they would never have recovered from.

"As it was, they had watched four direct hits on a Jap battleship, seen pieces of debris flying in every direction and smoke starting to blow up. In addition to this, our squadron had sunk three smaller craft—two cruisers and a transport.

"They said our bomb pattern had churned the whole area white with spouts of foam, and what few ships had their power up, were running around like crazy. They said thousands of skilled personnel had been killed or drowned, and also that we had torn hell out of the dock workers and docks at Davao.

"Only I don't have time to gloat long, for something approaching us from ahead catches my eye through the windshield. It's practically flying over our course and our altitude, except that it's off to the left. I'm seeing a ghost? It can't be what I think it is, a Messerschmitt 110, the kind that Ernst Udet told me all about in Berlin when I visited there in 1934. There can't be a Messerschmitt 110 in this line of ships, but what else could it be with that split tail?

"He doesn't alter his course and I don't alter mine; and after he's passed the point where I could set up a collision course with him, I begin to come to my senses, to realize that I'm the pilot of a Flying Fortress and my job is to get home safely with these boys and this plane, which was never supposed to be in dogfights with Messerschmitts.

"We got back to Malang feeling pretty pleased with ourselves," said Frank, "and I personally felt I had made headway settling my Flying Fortress score. But in Java we found there were troubles ahead, and the least of these was that our Navy was accusing us of bombing their ships. They didn't say any of them had been hit, just that they'd had to beat off an attack, and it occurred to me that this might explain all those fireworks which came whooping up under our chine through the overcast that night over the Celebes Sea. But we were never sure.

"So we said, 'Then why don't you tell us where your ships are going to be?' but it seemed that had never been done—a rumor from the Navy Department in Washington. I guess those guys must take some kind of a bomb-sight oath never to tell anything to anybody who doesn't wear black shoes.

"But plenty more was going on. It developed that our smash at the Jap fleet in Davao had been almost too successful. Because Davao was no longer a safe base for them, they had apparently boosted up their scheduled bombing runs for three weeks.

"Our reconnaissance went clear up to the Davao area and reported nothing there; then we found out the whole gang had moved out together and they were off to the east of Borneo, moving down into Macassar Strait, and it was clear they intended to clean out Borneo—not only because of our advance bases there, but because they were now rich oil fields at Tarakan and Balikpapan on the eastern coast of Borneo, where the oil is so rich they say you can pump it right into the bunkers of ships. Of course they'd built up big oil reserves when they'd bought from us before Pearl Harbor, but now they were out to grab off some fields of their own.

"And who was going to stop them? It was up to us to try, because we seemed to be the only force out there. The United Nations had a big enough to tackle the Jap fleet.

"We were briefed before dawn—told everything that was known about this big Jap gang of ships off northeast Borneo—and at 8:30 in the morning nine of our boys took off from the Malang Field. We planned to fly over the Java Sea and then inland over Borneo, carrying to start with an altitude of about 9,500 feet. But about eight o'clock we hit a tropical front which was a nightmare—fog so dense you could hardly see to light the tip of your cigarette.

"When we saw it coming ahead, each V spread out a little, so we wouldn't collide. Only we didn't dream how dense and how long it was going to be.

"It was like trying to fly inside a giant bale of cotton—so dense that when you looked out at the side you could barely see your own wing tips. And looking straight ahead, that bale of cotton seemed tightly packed against your windshield, only it was a dull flat gray-white, like the cotton I imagine they'd spin winding sheets out of. And you'd stare into the windshield, trying to see how close you were to your wing man, but there would only be that flat white, squeezed tight against your windshield, muffling everything. Then all of a sudden, the wing of the plane ahead would come surging into view out of that winding sheet, so terribly big and close that you would frantically jerk back all four throttles to cut your power, and begin feathering your rudder to slow the big brute down a little, praying that by this you'd miss crashing into the plane ahead at least by a few yards.

"We'd been fighting through it on instruments, because inside that colton bale you couldn't see stars or ocean, and it took so much time to handle the power for me. If I thought I was dropping behind the rest, maybe I would get lost and have to go over the target alone, which by now we knew was a dangerous business. I'd say to him, 'All right, give me a little more mercury now—about four inches.' Then when I'd catch a glimpse of the plane ahead I'd say: 'Okay, now you can bring it back to thirty inches. We're sitting okay—I can see him fine.' And I could for a minute or so.

The gallant Dutch are burning up their Borneo oil fields.

"Without warning I broke into the clear. I haven't climbed over that cloud, but instead have flunk and see one of the walls of an enormous cloud canyon and am now flying around in the clear air between the precipices.

"Ahead of me looms the other canyon wall. Maybe it's thirty miles away, maybe fifty—you can't ever judge the distance of a cloud, because they don't come in standard sizes. But cloud canyons like this one are magnificent sight that you never see any place except in the high skies.

"Because, you see, the morning sun was slanting down from behind me, over the top of the canyon wall out of which I had just come, to hit the top half of the cloud-canyon. The top half might have been built out of burnished silver feather beds piled one on top of the other, and yet you looked again and it seemed to be so firm it might be carved of glistening ice or marble.

"I am wondering if old Jim is also looking at all this when suddenly his voice comes out of nowhere into my earphone. 'Connally to Kurtz,' he is calling.

"Kurtz answering Connally, 'I say.'

"Have you broken into the clear yet?' he asks.

"Into the clear, Jim, at 14,500. Now I'm turning onto 270 degrees,' which means I'm turning west to fly down that canyon to see if I can't catch sight of Jim, whose voice is so loud in my ears. Suddenly I see a single Fortress ahead there in the reflecting sun hits his uplitted wing. He is circling.

"I think I see you, Jim, I call. 'Continue to circle.' I head toward the plane and fall in on its wing, continuing the long slow circle inside the canyon in the hope we'll pick up some of the others, and won't have to go in on the target alone. Meanwhile the radio operators of the two planes have started talking to each other by blinking their Aldis lamps back and forth. 'We're so near the target I don't want to use the radio any more than necessary. And just then I spot a third plane—about 500 feet below us and farther west down the canyon. Just as I'm wondering which one it is, my radio operator reports that the plane we're circling on isn't Jim at all, it's Bill Bohmker. So we drop on down the canyon and sure enough, that third plane turns out to be old Jim. I can read his number plain now on his tail. Now there are three of us in the circle, wondering what in hell has become of the other six. We haven't got the gas to stay in this golden dream castle much longer. But just then my radio operator comes in with a message from Combs, the leader. God knows where he is, but he's telling us, 'Continuing to target,' and he's sending it out by key, where he can use code, because he doesn't use voice so close to the target as he must by now. Because most of these damn Zeppelins seem to have graduated from Los Angeles High School and understand English as well as you do.

"All right, continue it is, so now we plunged back into that damned canyon—the opposite canyon wall—and the gray mist packed down around our windshield again. We continued to climb in that deathly whiteness—first one wing and then the other surging into my view. I flew it for forty-five minutes and decided it was just too much to risk crashing into each other when we were so close to the target. So without any spread out my view. I flew it for thirty seconds, then back thirty more seconds, and then continued on the old course—flying on instruments, of course. But now the wings were staggered both in altitude and in interval, it wasn't so bad.

"Finally we broke out into the clear at 27,000 feet at a quarter after ten and discovered we had lost interval only by a very little. But I was groggy—we'd been on edge for four and a half hours already.

"But the weather was still playing tricks. Now the mist was coming in great tufts, thicker than cotton wadding, while below us was a thin layer of overcast.

"We were getting close to the target now. Should we climb higher? There wasn't much point, because if we did, that overcast layer might thicken so that we couldn't see the target, and we'd have to come down below it to unload.

"But where's Bill Bohmker? I look back and see that he's very slowly peeling off. I wonder why. Probably supercharger trouble. Then I think to myself, 'There he goes, and I'd hoped maybe at least three of us could go in together.' Because in my mind is that rain-check idea—the score isn't settled yet, and if that target is open at all, I've made up my mind I'm going in. And I think to myself, 'He we go again, Jim, just you and me.'

"About this time I hear a gunner on Combs' ship—they've broken radio silence, which means they're on the target—saying, 'Lots of enemy fighters sighted!'

"But they're still far ahead, out of sight. Here we are again, in a staggered attack—the stragglers to bear the brunt of what the first fighters stir up. We ought to know better, but still I'm going on.

"The weather gets crazier and crazier—these enormous tufts not stratified at all, but floating around at almost any altitude. And my cockpit seems to be fascinated by a big black spot that isn't shaped quite like a thunderhead. It might be one of those Dakota tornado funnels, only it doesn't revolve.

"Then suddenly he says, staring at it: 'Hell, Frank, that isn't a cloud at all—look! I follow his finger, and down at the base of that cloud, on the ground, is a crackling, flaming oil field! The gallant Dutch are scorching the earth for fair—burning up their Borneo oil fields right in the face of the advancing Japs; millions of dollars' worth of it. Imagine all of East Texas cracking and pouring black smoke into the sky.

"We can't stop to watch a billion dollars go up in black smoke. The Dutch are doing their job. We have ours, which just now is scanning for fighters. I realize that in this weather and so close to the target they might be anywhere, only for some reason I never think of them when my No. 1 starboard engine starts jumping around in its mount, rattling the whole plane.

"I only curse my luck and ask, 'If we were going to have engine trouble, why in hell could it have come on the way home instead of run over the target?'

"I watch the oil pressure drop sickeningly, and still it doesn't dawn on me what hit that motor. I'm just sure at that for letting me down. And who, what will I do—nurse it along by feathering it, or see if I can't give it maybe 1,000 RPM's (revolutions per minute) while I push the other three up to 2,600?

Magic Words

By J. J. O'DONNELL

McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

THE Coast Guard officer shook his head. "The British are careful whom they hire."

Mark swung the launch to avoid the big ferryboat. "I get to know the crews better than the officials." "Maybe I need training as a ship chandler," the officer grinned. "You're sure this cook is a spy?" "No sir. I only told the commandant I was suspicious."

And you also said the man knows it."

"Can't prove it, but those accidents came too fast."

The officer said: "Once a week some housewife in Norfolk reports a spy. We're used to it."

Mark's nostrils flared. "So I'm crazy! But being gassy is no joke. When I jumped off that chain I went looking for the cook—all he did was to the hold. When I smelled gas. You know—they get rid of the rats that way. All of a sudden the door started to slam, and I had to hit it with my shoulder quick—or be locked in."

"That would have been curtains for you."

"Right—and my lad was on the other side of that door."

"What did he say?"

"Got kinda red and stammered something about the door should be closed."

"Listen, son, you haven't much to go on. I'm doing this because I'm interested. Has he filled his order yet?"

"The captain has to O.K. it. I'm to pick it up today."

"All right. While you talk to him I'll ask the captain to help me search his cabin—and I hope you're right."

"You can see those flags from here."

The stocky, kindly captain shook his head. "Nothing there, boy," he said.

Mark's eyes were pleading. "But I know there's something wrong. Did you look well?"

"So well we didn't pass up so much as a tobacco crumb."

Mark said: "Captain, do you know the skipper of that British tanker yonder?"

"Indeed. He served under me as first mate."

"Please, sir, we've got to make this man give himself away. A friend of mine in that crew has been all over the world. He'll be able to wigwag a message. If I'm wrong the signal won't mean anything."

"Mystery, eh? Come along then, we'll have a try."

When they returned to the freighter, Mark turned anxiously to the captain. "Is your mate still checking that list of provisions with the cook?"

"I fancy he's finished now."

"Good, that means he hasn't seen the Coast Guard officer. Will you please keep out of sight, sir?" He swung on his heel and hurried to the mate's cabin and met the cook at the door. He tried to appear casual, though the words began to trip over his tongue. "Oh, hello—say, while I was waiting, I saw somebody on that tanker wigwagging."

The cook sneered. "Kid games, eh?" He stalked up to the deck—then he froze. "Who is that man in uniform?"

Mark dropped his voice. "That's a Coast Guard officer. Said he had to see the captain right away."

The suspect slipped behind a ventilator. "Know what he wants?"

As if he hadn't heard, Mark said: "You can see those flags from here. Can you tell what they say?"

The man's black brows came together as he looked. Mark watched the body stiffen and his eyes shrink to pin points. He whirled to run and Mark sensed his purpose. He yelled breathlessly: "Captain—quick, grab him. But the wary skipper and two crewmen had him before he reached the companionway.

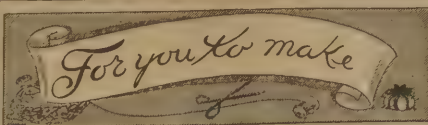

Mark ran up excitedly. "Captain—his shoe. The sole's loose."

It took only a second to extract the telltale identification card. And the culprit away the Coast Guard officer turned to Mark. "Son, how did you trap him?"

Mark grinned expansively. "Just had my friend say, 'Officer coming to arrest you. Destroy your papers.'"

"But surely he didn't fall for that—anybody could read it."

The captain's eyes twinkled. "Not the way this lad did it. Seems his friend is something of a linguist. He said it in German."

SNAPPY FACTS

ABOUT RUBBER

The importance of the tire conservation program, effected in 1942, will be appreciated when it is known that the number of passenger car tires rationed and those sold on new cars in 1942 only equaled 8.8 per cent of the passenger car tires shipped for all purposes in 1941.

Neglected small tire tread cuts and bruises can become serious rubber wasters. A small cut, even though it does not go entirely through the tread, lets in dirt, water and foreign matter. Constant flexing increases the size of the cut until the tire is beyond repair. Prompt repair is a profitable duty these days.

Unless it has been crushed under the Nazi heel, a rose bush planted 1,000 years ago is still growing in Germany. Set by an emperor in a garden near Hildesheim, the bush was known to be blooming up to the time of the war.

TREASURER'S REPORT SHOWS COUNTY IN GOOD FINANCIAL CONDITION

Every citizen of Chilton County should read the semi-annual report of the County Commissioners published in last week's Chilton County News. Together with cash on hand and government bonds the total shows $208,280.05. This is a high compliment to the present administration.

The tax payers' dollars are being watched and value received is being shown in every transaction undertaken by our present officials. They are surely to be congratulated on this splendid report.

TO THE VOTERS OF CHILTON COUNTY

As this is the last chance to ask your support through the papers I am asking all of my friends to be sure to take time off on election day, which is Tuesday, May 2nd, and go to the polls and vote for me. I am depending on you to put me over.

Promising all the people of the County that I will work for your interest to the best of my knowledge and to treat all labor with the same respect and fairness. I understand how many have been offered jobs for their support. I have not promised anyone anything for their support except that I have promised all of you that if nominated and elected I will do my best to make a good commissioner.

After a chicken dinner was served and several speeches made the new officers were installed as follows: J. M. Martin, president; Raymond Duffey of Mt. Creek, vice pres.; Jimmie Bell, secretary and treasurer. These three officers together with L. E. Dieffenberger and H. T. Williams will constitute the Board of Directors for the coming year.

In a statement Monday President Martin said that he was calling on all members of the club to get behind their officers and make this the best year in the club's history. He also announced ceremonies at Montgomery on May 6th and a fish supper at his fishing camp on the river on May 12.

Consider The Man

With trying times as we are now experiencing each voter who attend the polls next Tuesday should weight well the "Man" before he casts his vote.

Local politics are a "family fight" and we are going to keep our nose out of that phase of the election until our Democratic nominees are announced, but as for our Senatorial race we are definitely "HILL."

When the race began Simpson immediately began his mud-slinging antics and with his (or his Big Mule) money and organization, has consistently waged one of the dirtiest smear campaigns ever fostered, in our recollection. Practically all advertising and speech making has been devoted to running down Senator Hill and not to advising the voter as to his own qualifications.

At the beginning he invoked into the campaign the race issue. And of course the only race issue there was, or is, is the one that he and his crowd are fanning into flame during this campaign. Any intelligent voter in the South knows that the race issue here can, and will, be handled without the aid of these rabble-rousers. The only time we, in the South, have any race trouble is when outside interference tries to take a hand.

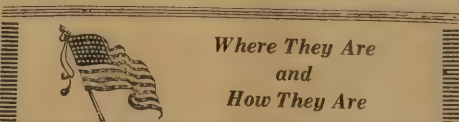

John B. Stevenson, publisher of the Roanoke Leader wrote one of the most detailed editorials of the campaign in his last issue and we quote several paragraphs.

"... if the outcome of the election were to be determined by the mud-slinging artistry of the two candidates, Simpson would be as good as in. However, voters have a way of looking for more than that in a candidate, as Jim Simpson will learn presently. They also have a way of resenting low-class appeals as being insults to even ordinary intelligence. It is my opinion that the Simpson planners have given the voters of Alabama an over-dose of their poison and that the reaction is going to be surprisingly disastrous to Simpson-for-Senate hopes."

"It is hard to conceive that any qualified voter could swallow the 'line' that Senator Hill favors mixed classes in Alabama schools. Yet some profess to believe just that. I have read almost everything put out by Simpson headquarters and the Simpson supporting press, and I have yet to find any direct charge from them that Senator Lister Hill favors mixing of races in Alabama schools. What these propagandists have done is to take a bit of fact and add dashes of fancy, imagination, falsehood, and half truth before planting it in the public mind in such a way that he who does not think straight, will accept a vicious insinuated lie, as fact. -- No man would be foolish enough to run for any office in the State of Alabama if he advocated racial co-education. Let him who can, vote for Simpson in spite of this low trick, but let no voter be swayed to him simply because he is taken in by the trick. -- As respect for the cause of Jim Simpson wanes, enthusiasm for the cause of Lister Hill grows. -- More power to Lister Hill."

Senator Lister Hill has proven himself the "Man". He has relied upon his record as a Democrat and a gentleman. He has stayed out of the mud in spite of all attempts made by his opponent to drag him down.

Voters in Tuesday's election will answer Mr. Simpson and his kind when they go to the polls and give Senator Lister Hill a substantial majority of votes in Chilton County.

MR. J. MONROE PARRISH MAKES A STATEMENT TO THE VOTERS OF CHILTON COUNTY

It will not be long now until election day, and as all of you know I am making the race for re-election as your Commissioner from the Fourth District.

We all know that labor has been scarce and that you can not buy any road machinery at this time, about the only thing you can get is parts for the machinery the county owns and operates. It has kept me very busy trying to get labor and material with which to work the roads; and this has made it impossible for me to see all the people and ask them for their support in the election. You also know gasoline can only be had for necessary purposes in road work and it has been impossible for me to get gasoline to get over the roads for the purpose of campaigning. I have seen a great number of our people while at work on the roads, and have solicited their support.

In asking the people of the county to re-elect me as their Commissioner, I do so with a feeling that I have done my very best to serve all of you people in the past. I have tried to show no favoritism, and feel that the people know this. I have not tried to injure anyone, and have not used the office to help some and neglect others, and will continue to do this if you can see your way clear to support me, which I believe you will do and I will be the nominee of our party in the November election.

I wish to thank each and everyone of you for the support you have given me in the past, and the support you will give me on May 2nd.

I am,
Yours very truly,
J. MONROE PARRISH

GEORGE RAFT is back where he started—in Universal's "Follow the Boys" he does a Charleston and an Argentine number which he did in his stage debut, and in almost identical costume. His first professional dancing job was in the top vaudeville acts, Filor and Douglas, in 1922. And one of the things that clinched the job was Raft's resemblance to Valentino, at that time the world's greatest screen attraction. In "Follow the Boys" Raft is co-starred with Zorina, with whom he does the Argentine dance.

In those Dr. Kildare movies, when Laraine Day played the doctor's nurse, nothing ever happened to her but more Kildares. She got her break when the writers killed off the nurse, and Laraine made her escape, and scored one success after another. "Mr. Lucky," "The Story of Dr. Wassell" and now she has landed a real plum. RKO has cast her to star with Alan Marshall in "That Hunter Girl."

Versatile John Nesbitt, the storyteller, is now turning out an average of one film a month at Metro, in addition to doing his Sunday spot on the John Charles Thomas show, and his new three-a-week series on CBS. He's won two Academy awards for his work.

Cary Grant saw little Arden Black going to school every morning when he turned into the studio, and like her spunk. She was only seven, and had a brace on her leg, but said she didn't mind. So he spoke to Director Clifford Odets, in whose "None But the Lonely Heart" Grant is working, and they decided they could use a crippled child in London slum sets — and Arden got the job.

Paulette Goddard became known for achieving what others didn't when she became the first of Charlie Chaplin's wives to win real success on the screen. So it's no surprise that she has won a citation for being the first American woman visiting China to entertain U. S. troops. She received it from Col. John A. Feagin: "Her achievement reflects highest credit on herself and the entire entertainment world," said he.

Swell idea, that new CBS "Visiting Hour" on Saturday afternoons, beginning April 23, with Ted Husing as coordinator. There'll be a Hollywood star and a sports celebrity each week as guest stars; they will chat informally with soldiers at army hospitals. Programs for the first 13 weeks will cover most of the large cities from coast to coast, through the facilities of CBS affiliates.

Art Baker, NBC commentator and news-caster, recently learned how convincing he can be. He pleaded on the air for recruits for the Women's Air corps; did it so effectively that his daughter, Jean Ormsby, promptly joined up!

Alan Young, Canada's youthful contribution to the ranks of radio comedians, has been signed to take over the "Cantor's" Wednesday night niche for the summer, beginning July 5. Young will be assisted by Bea Wain and Peter Van Steeden's orchestra.

Everett Sloane, CBS's "Crime Doctor" and the highest paid actor on radio, ran into an old college chum who assured Sloane that success hadn't changed him. "Well, it has a little," replied Sloane. "I'm now 'eccentric' where I used to be impolite, and 'delightfully witty' where I used to be rude!" Sloane, incidentally, appeared in Orson Welles' famous "Man from Mars" broadcast.

ODDS AND ENDS—Perry Como's definition: "People who never notice you tell you do something you'd rather they wouldn't notice." In "None But the Lonely Heart," you see Cary Grant cut a burn-out cigar; he's really a cigarette smoker, but cigarettes were out of character. "Duffy's Tavern," starring Ed Gardner, will continue in business for at least another year. And "Second Husband" with Helen Menken, is just starting on its eighth... 1,600 servicemen have received 4/5¢-inch packets of the Golden Girls appearing in "Up in Arms"; pinups will be reduced to pin points if this goes on!

Universal Trouble—Boss—So here you are again! You want another raise. Why don't you live within your means? Worker—I do, but I'm getting awfully crowded for space.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

PAUL WINS RECOGNITION FOR GENTILE CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT: Acts 15:23b-29; Galatians 2:1, 2, 9, 10, 20, 21.
GOLDEN TEXT: Being therefore justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.—Romans 5:1.

Problems and differences of opinion need not be harmful if they are properly met and honestly settled. In the church at Antioch a question had arisen which had to be answered, authoritatively, and once for all.

The early converts of the church were naturally from among the Jews, and they carried with them into their new-found faith the traditions of their religion. Some of them did not recognize that the salvation they had in Christ was entirely by grace apart from any works of the law. They not only felt that they must observe the law, but insisted that the Gentile believers must also fulfill the Jewish rite of circumcision. This promptly raised the question whether Christ alone could save, or if men were saved by grace plus works.

To settle this matter, Paul and Barnabas went up to the church at Jerusalem, and there a great council discussed it freely, and came to a decision which was then transmitted by letter and a committee. We find—

I. Fundamental Principle Established—Salvation by Grace (Acts 15:23b-29).

The believers at Antioch were to abstain from those things which would hinder their spiritual progress and harm their testimony. That was important and right, but it must not be allowed to confuse them regarding the basis of their salvation. They were not saved by works, no, not even by the most commendable. Salvation is by grace, through faith, lest any man should boast (Eph. 2:8, 9). That principle, which is absolutely foundational in all Christian thinking, was established then, and is valid and blessedly true for all time.

Is it not strange, then, that all through the church's history there has been a determined effort on the part of some in the church to add something to God's redeeming grace as a ground for salvation? One would think that all the peoples of the world would rejoice in such a gloriously simple and altogether divine redemption.

It is well worth our attention to observe how the matter was handled. Observe the plain rebuke given to the teachers of error in verse 24. It is no light matter to trouble and mislead the souls of men, by injecting our worldly wisdom or our opinions, when we should be teaching the truth of God's Word.

Note that there was fine courtesy in sending the message to the church at Antioch by messengers who were men of distinction and great spiritual courage. It was not a case of abruptly telling this new church what to do, and end it there, but of using this trying situation as a means of drawing the churches together in fellowship and mutual faith.

II. Sound Practice Observed—Walking by Faith (Gal. 2:1, 2, 9, 10, 20, 21).

The life of grace is not just something to be written or talked about, or to glory in, although it is all of these. It is to show forth in the daily walk of the Christian.

Paul in Galatians 2 tells of his experience in Jerusalem, of his meeting and discussion with the brethren. It was a vital importance to him and to the cause of Christ, but it is not the record of an academic argument, or the vaunting of a personal victory which he presents.

He rises to the high point of Christian experience, the realization of the fact that a believer has died to self. He is crucified with Christ—and yet he lives.

Yes, he lives in a newness of life which is not his own, but Christ living in him. There is the secret of real Christian living—a complete acceptance of all that Christ is, in and for the believer.

This truth is at once deeply spiritual and completely practical. Again we say, it is not something about which one theorizes. It is an actuality—something which Christians can and do live out in daily experience. It is "the life which I now live" of which Paul speaks, and that is by "the faith of the Son of God," who loved us and gave Himself for us.

To fail to receive and appropriate this grace by seeking to be made righteous through the deeds of the law is to deny the need of the death of Christ, in fact, to make it a vain thing.

Some may feel that all this is too deeply theological for them, but it really is not, for God does not expect us to explain it, but only to accept it. This is His work, and it is indeed wonderful in our sight (Phil. 1:3-6), but not too wonderful to receive by faith, to rest and rejoice in, and to declare to others.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

A snap fastener sewed on the inside of trousers cuffs will simplify letting down the cuffs for cleaning and save resewing each time.

Brooms get bowlegged if allowed to stand right side up. Hang up or stand upside down. Small screw-eyes on handles make hanging more convenient.

Breads or rolls may be made to taste fresh by moistening them slightly and heating them in moderately hot oven.

Sprinkle a little talcum powder on ribbon knots that are hard to loosen and they will untie much easier.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Navigation is impossible even for a canoe on some of the tiny branches in the Amazon headwaters in the remote Bolivia rubber country. Air transport is now serving in the rubber development in these areas. Tappers cut their way through the jungle, with from 100 to 150 wild rubber trees serving as each tapper's route.

Tire experts hold that greater mileages are returned from under normal or sub-normal conditions. Using new tires on front wheels before shifting them to the rear is one way of "seasoning" tires.

Keep to Simplicity In Foods, Serving For Good Hostessing

Create this spring tonic by using salmon and asparagus in a custard when eggs are plentiful. Bake in ramekins set in a pan of water, using a moderate oven so that the texture of the custard will be perfect.

Hospitality is unrated even in wartime. Food restrictions curb the serving of elaborate meals, but homemakers still want their friends over for a pleasant chat over luncheon or to "try out something new" in the way of a recipe. Simplicity is the keynote of good entertaining. It doesn't do to try out complicated recipes or menu patterns just to make an impression. If something goes wrong then everything is thrown off schedule and as a result the guests may be made uncomfortable, thus defeating the whole purpose of getting together.

With time at a premium, simple combinations are the order of the day. This will keep fluster at a minimum and the food budget within its bounds.

Simple is as simple does! Bake tarts ahead of time, fill with a prepared filling if you're rushed for time. Set dough for rolls and shape before luncheon, and in the meantime make cream sauce for fresh, shelled peas or canned, and pop the celery in ice water for curling purposes. Pancakes wait for the last. Mix batter—go powder your nose—and pop them on the griddle just before the guests come in. Easy does it!

Lynn Says:

Dress-Up! Domestic herbs will dress many a stew and pot-pie into a dish fit for a king. Try a dash of thyme, marjoram and sage, but remember, just a dash! Meat loaves become party-ish if topped with catsup. Meat pies taste on color if topped with green pepper rings before serving. Muffins and rolls made in small-size muffin tins give distinction to dinners and luncheons. Pieces of leftover fruit atop muffins and breads are colorful. Vegetables are gay if served in buttercups. Trim crusts off bread slices, press them in muffin cups and toast to a golden brown. Very pretty.

Give these beauty-aids to salads and garnishes: carrot curls are made by slicing carrots thinly lengthwise with a carrot cutter and winding the slice around finger. Let crisp in cold water. Peel cucumber thinly, and run prongs of fork down the length of the cucumber. Slice thinly.

Be a Hostess!

Not just in name but in deed! As a hostess, see that your guests are comfortable, not just in food you feed them but in the conversation channels into which you guide them; in the introductions by which you open up new worlds and friends to them; in the games which they play; in everything, be gracious, smiling and unflinched. Yours then will be the invitations they prize.

delightful dessert very much in season.

Liquor from the canned salmon contains precious vitamins and minerals; it should be used in the custard as part of the liquid and for purposes of flavor.

Salmon Asparagus Custard.

(Serves 4)
1 pound canned salmon
¾ cup salmon liquor
¾ cup chicken broth (or 1 chicken cube dissolved in ¾ cup hot water)
1 cup light cream
3 eggs, slightly beaten
Salt, pepper

1 cup asparagus tips (cooked in boiling water for 10 minutes)
Flake salmon into large pieces. Scald salmon liquor, chicken broth and cream. Add to slightly beaten eggs. Season to taste with salt and pepper, then add flaked salmon.

Arrange asparagus tips around edges of ramekins so that the tips show just above the edge of the ramekin. Pour custard mixture into ramekins. Bake in a pan of hot water in a moderate (350-degree) oven for about 45 minutes until custard is set.

Rhubarb Crisp.

McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

MRS. PALFREY HOWARD II reached for one of the new genealogy volumes, and drew it from the shelf. There were five more records of her family and Palfrey II; a surprise gift for her children when they should come home with their fighting achievements to be added to the family records.

It was a proud old room, the library. Palfrey II viewed it from colonial ceilings, at which the boys—one in Australia, the other on Guadalcanal—had not seen it since their mother had assembled the ancient family furnishings and hung the ancestral portraits.

As she opened the book, the cupboard door of her memory unclashed and a familiar chuckle slipped out. "At it again, old girl?" The chuckle and question were as natural as when Palfrey II had been a round earth dweller.

"I know Palfrey, that pride in our New England lineage always amused you," Mrs. Palfrey answered aloud. "But surely the boys will care after this war. It's the thing they are fighting for!"

"Did you speak, ma'am?" the voice of her maid asked from the doorway.

"No, Mollie. What is it? Oh, you have letters! I hope they are from the boys!" She rose eagerly. "They are, Mollie! That's Palfrey's writing. The other's from Wini! I'd know his scrawl in Egypt. How wonderful to hear from them both at the same time!"

"It is indeed, ma'am. I hope you'll be finding them both fine."

Mrs. Palfrey used a plebeian hairpin to slit the envelopes, ignoring the antique ivory cutter. Her lips moved as she read the first paragraph of each letter almost audibly. The man staggered. "They are both fine, Mollie," Mrs. Palfrey pronounced soon, with happy tears in her eyes. She would read Palfrey's first—Palfrey Howard III, with the troops in Australia.

"Dear Mother," (the letter ran)

"I'm O.K. Hope to come home on furlough, if our commander can arrange transportation. I've been in hospital. I'm all right now and I'm coming back to help finish this job as soon as I can carry a gun. Got a load in my shoulder, but it won't be long now."

"I have a surprise for you, Mother. I'm married to the sweetest Australian girl on the whole continent. Her name is Sidna. You'll love her, Mom. We might blow in any time. You'll be nice to Sidna, won't you? I'll have two weeks and then off to wherever Uncle Sam needs me most. We figured it this way, Sidna and I—we've both kept clean and straight, so we think we ought to raise some pretty fine kids to grow up in the new world, once we get it safe for them. Some fresh blood in the family, eh, Mom?"

"Here's hoping we see you soon. I want you to know Sidna because we plan to settle in Australia when we've finished mopping up."

"Love, 'Pal."

The sheet dropped from Mrs. Palfrey's hand. Pal married! To live in Australia! With trembling hands and half dazed, she drew out the second letter. Winthrop—her baby—bearing her father's name.

"Dear Mom: Pal got word through to me and we hope to come on the same transport. I'm slated for a furlough, too. I've been in hospital but the Japs didn't get this baby. I'm fine. Just worry that's all."

"Say, Mom, do you mind if I bring a couple of my buddies home with me? They're getting out of hospital too. Swell guys—Abie Levine and Mike O'Hara. Abie's my bombardier and Mike's my gunner. And boy, what a job we did on those little yellow bugs! They don't come any finer than Abie and Mike. We're brothers forever. I want to show them what a home and a swell mother are like. They don't remember either. We could all stand some of Mollie's cooking. See you soon we hope. Of course we can't be sure."

"Love, 'Win."

Abie Levine! Mike O'Hara! Mrs. Palfrey was stunned. "We're brothers forever." She gazed into the leaping flames. Palfrey Howard II, whose ancestors had founded this country, married to a girl of unknown parentage. It did not occur to her to concede pioneer stock to a girl of another country. And Winthrop—fraternizing with the sons of immigrants!

The fire burned low. At last Mrs. Palfrey's jeweled hands were clasped, and she prayed softly, "Oh, God, I thank Thee that my boys are safe. Nothing else matters. But, God, help me to be as big as my boys!" She rose resolutely and rang for the maid. "You know, Mollie," she said, "I'm not so sure the boys will like this room after all. I think we'll bring back that etching Win always liked, and the lake pictures."

"Them's more warmin'," the girl answered simply. A half-hour later two messages whirled into space in the hope that in some way they would reach her boys. One read, "Can't wait to get my arms around you and Sidna." The other, "Certainly bring Abie and Mike." Both were signed "Mother."

"I STOPPED DOSING MY CONSTIPATION A YEAR AGO!"

Says Happy KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN User

If you are still dosing your constipation, don't fail to read this unsolicited letter!

"I'd been troubled with common constipation for years. Tried many kinds of medicines for it. Then, just about a year ago, I tried KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. I ate it regularly, without missing a day. It helped so much, I have not taken one dose of medicine for constipation since, nor have I confined myself to any diet!" Mr. S. F. Loche, Charleston, Missouri.

Sounds like magic, doesn't it? But scientists say, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN can really "get at" a common cause of constipation—lack of dietary "cellulose" elements—because it is one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements! They help the friendly colonic flora fluff up and prepare the colonic contents for easy elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is not a purgative! Doesn't "weep you out!" It's a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If you have constipation of this kind, eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, or several ALL-BRAN muffins regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you don't find real relief. Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

Mr. W. M. Polk, candidate for County Treasurer in the coming election, reminds us that he holds the record when it comes to making a bond. When he was appointed to the office of County Treasurer last March 26th of course, he had to make bond to the amount of $75,000. On March 31st, two days later he filed with the County Commission his bond for the required amount. That, says Mr. Polk, is something to shoot at.

What you will not believe, but 'tis true. A Chinese in a northern state has a ration book. He applied for another from his ration board. His name was Moe Dam Fun. We'll bet Moe Dam Fun had No Dam Fun getting another.

Two small boys were walking down the sidewalk in front of the Baptist church. Their mother had sent them out for a loaf of bread—that is what they were carrying. One would toss the bread to the other, then back and forth the loaf of bread would be bread not being wrapped so tightly as of yore, this finally told the bread slices flew — the boys picked up the bread slices and as neatly as possible stacked them back in the wrapping—after throwing away several pieces that were just too dirty to get by inspection and off they went down the sidewalk carrying the package very gently between them. No, we didn't recognize either of the two. We wondered if the mother recognized what she received as bread.

Late Friday afternoon after most of the city had closed up for the night and gone homeward, the fire siren cut loose for approximately a minute. Many homeward bound citizens rushed up to the corner at the Fire hall to watch the fire truck come out and to see in which direction it went. Well, in about another minute the truck came out at a terrific speed and whirled around the corner going south, stopped short and pulled up at Bob Oglesby's Chilton Truck and Implement company. Two of the crew jumped off the truck with a fire extinguisher and rushed into the building and took care of the flame in no time. Then all hands on deck, the driver turned the truck around and drove back to the Fire Station. All in all, approximately fifty feet-as the flow cries. But no kidding we bet there isn't another town in Alabama with the competent fire department that Clanton can boast.

We were in Clyde Mims Saturday night hunting two loaves of bread. T. C. Collins and Ray Enfinger were there buying groceries, or something. Well the cupboard was bare and we didn't get any bread but Collins chirped that he always liked cracked wheat bread. Then he added "You know, cracked wheat for a cracked brain." Nothing was said for a moment then Ray added, "Mr. T. you were looking for whole wheat weren't you?" Now, no fooling, that came out of Ray.

Here is a piece sent in by Kernit Connell that we thought worth passing along to you:

HEADLINES BY J. B. THE C. B.

We quote from a recent publication in the News-Free Press:

The Army has its Pvt Hargrove and its Pvt. Purkey, but the Navy has its J. B. Collins, former News-Free Press reporter now taking initial training in the rugged Seabees outfit at Camp Pearry, Williamsburg, Virginia.

It evidently took the Seabees to uncover the full extent of the reporter's wit, which is displayed in the following letter to his old city news staff co-workers. Signing himself "J. B. the C. B." Collins writes:

"Hello mates—Having a gruesome time; wish I were there. Boy, this is the life—they tell you at the recruiting office, I'm in what is generally known in the Navy as a Boot. And we are generally known! We stand out like UBANG'S fever blisters. Boot—that's an unsuccessful draft dodger without hair.

About the first thing they did to de-civilize us when we passed through the camp gates—that's the official station for abandoning hope—was to cut our hair; I should say heads. The barbers here are blind machinists mates with St. Vitus dance. You are gently hurled into a chair, the operator lays the clippers on your dome, rags you and asks questions. Whether you nod "yes" or "no"—the effect is the same. Your once proud pate looks like a desert oasis. Then you wipe the blood off and leave. No charge. The whole procedure is financed by a local hair tonic company. When the guys are all in the barracks it looks like a table of unracked billiard balls.

The town here is divided into three parts. One side is in the camp, the other two are a mortuary and an insane asylum. You get through examination coming in and you go to one of the three areas.

We're all Seabees, you know. "C. B."—he's the only man who can walk up to a marine, look him squarely in the eyes, and say, "what kept you, Bud?"

It's nice in the mornings. The CPO—that's a Sing Sing warden who's been discharged for cruelty—stamps in and gently screams, "Fall out, you guys." Then we regain consciousness, dress, wash, brush our teeth, shave and look for our hair.

Out on the Drill Field you always stand at attention—that's suspended rigor mortis. The only way you can get out of drill is to go to sick bay—that's where you report you're ill and have to die to prove it.

They feed you well here. For breakfast, because they realize you need plenty of energy during the day, they feed you what the Navy calls condensed vitamin tablets—by the bowlfuls—we always called them beans at home. Lunch is fun. Not eating so much as guessing what it is. For supper the officers let you stand at the chow windows and drool.

There was a fellow here who didn't respond so well to all this nice treatment. He developed a madness and spent hours raving and selling peanuts and popcorn at lectures. The officers held a conference to decide whether to put him in a straight jacket or make him an Ensign.

The first man who interviews us is a psychologist who puts you in the right frame of mind right off. You walk into his office. He breaks into a fiendish sneer as you enter and throws a knife through your hat. If you don't faint, you pass the I. Q. That's fun, being unconscious. The only difference between Boots and prisoners is that the latter can be pardoned.

The hiking is nice too—The first (30) miles are the worst. After that it doesn't hurt. Hike—that's a six-day bike race on foot.

Every barrack here has a Master-At-Arms. That's a stool pigeon with a gun. When he puts you on report you get either K. P. — that's a torture chamber with French Fried potatoes—or a change in title to John Doe, D. D. (dishonorably discharged). That means you can't hold public office for the rest of your life. It's awful, like being a Republican.

I'm just kidding, fellows, it's a wonderful place here. (I will continue writing as soon as the ensign quits twisting my arms)"

CANDIDATE FOR THE OFFICE OF
Chilton County Treasurer

I want to say now, that I hope we can have a fair and impartial election. I want to say to all the voters of our County, both men and women that I am sure the most of you know by this time that I am a candidate for this office, from my former letters in our County Newspapers and from my announcement now in both of them.

As much as I would like to see you all in person before our Election to be held here on May the 2nd and 30th, it will be impossible to do this on rationed gas. I am taking this method of reaching you all through our papers and saying to you as though in person, here and now, that I am reasonably sure of my election and if elected I will give the office my undivided attention and not make the office a side-line.

I feel competent to attend to this office and worthy of your consideration. I shall feel greatly honored to have your vote and influence in my behalf.

This letter will appear in this paper until the election as my personal appeal to those I will not be able to see in person.

Yours most truly,

C. Reese Mullins.

Alabama Democrats Rally To Keep A Real Democrat LISTER HILL

In The United States Senate

It is gratifying to see how sincerely Alabama Democrats want to keep Lister Hill in the United States Senate. The people's enthusiastic endorsement of Senator Hill's record of the past and his platform for the future is accepted with humility—and a deep determination by Senator Hill to be worthy of the people's trust.

We regret that personalities, bigotry, race and religious prejudice were injected into this campaign. But when false issues were raised and false charges made, we believed we had an obligation to the people to correct them. It is your sovereign right as an Alabama Voter to be the judge, and we are confident of your verdict for Lister Hill.

Campaign Summary

This campaign has demonstrated clearly several important facts, as follows:

1. Lister Hill is the only real Democrat in the race.
2. Lister Hill's re-election is a guarantee of the continuation of Democratic Party Rule in Alabama.
3. Lister Hill's record of Congressional performances and achievements makes him one of the greatest statesmen Alabama has ever had.
4. Thanks to the people of Alabama, Lister Hill's Congressional experience, knowledge, contacts, committee assignments and his position as Democratic Whip of the Senate—all are ASSETS WHICH BELONG TO THE PEOPLE OF ALABAMA. They are assets which should be used to great advantage for Alabama and the Nation by returning Lister Hill to the United States Senate.
5. Finally, Lister Hill is the only candidate in this race who is a proved friend and champion of the common people. He has never been a corporation lawyer or a spokesman for selfish and reactionary groups. Lister Hill represents the people, always has and always will.

DRAFT: 4-Fs Spared

Declaring that selective service and the Manpower commission already possessed enough authority to deal with labor problems, Representative May (Ky.) announced that house military affairs committee pigeonholed the proposal to draft 4-Fs into work battalions if they failed to take essential employment.

"We heard testimony by army and navy officials that the manpower situation is critical, but then Manpower Commissioner McNutt told us there is no labor shortage and that new controls are not needed," Representative Costello (Calif.) said.

4-Fs could be influenced into entering essential war work if the army adopted a policy of inducing them for limited service if they remained in unimportant occupations, Representative Costello added.

Vets First, Ford Says

Declaring that civilians have "made a lot of money out of the war and the service," Henry Ford promised that vets would receive first call on employment in peacetime.

Hoping that other industrialists would follow the same policy, Ford said that when his company starts producing cars again, all a vet need do is "to come in and go to work."

EUROPE: Sevastopol Besieged

Their retreat across the Crimea ended, German and Romanian troops backed into the historic base of Sevastopol, while Russian forces pressed against the city's outer defenses and their aircraft trained their sights on Axis evacuation vessels in the harbor.

The Russian advance in the Crimea highlighted Europe's warfare, with U. S. and British bombers concentrating on the continued bombardment of German industries and communications in the west to prepare the invasion path, and Allied forces sparring in Italy for openings in the Nazi guard below Rome.

As Russia laid siege to Sevastopol, other Red forces encountered stiffening Axis resistance in Romania and southeastern Poland, where mixed German, Romanian and Hungarian armies went onto the offensive to launch local counterattacks.

Diplomats Curbed

Taking no chances on the leakage of any military information to the Axis, the British government prohibited the departure of any neutral diplomatic officials from the United Kingdom and also assumed censorship of any of their dispatches.

In taking the extraordinary action which was approved by the U. S. and Russia, the British explained that any leakage not only might impair Allied operations, but also might complicate relations with the countries whose nationals divulged any information.

The British action followed on the heels of the Allies' further restrictions of communications with neutral Europe.

AUTO OUTPUT: Waits on War

Sitting together in Washington, D. C., representatives of nine automobile companies and top executives of the War Production board huddled over plans for future resumption of civilian auto output, with emphasis on partial manufacture following the defeat of either Germany or Japan.

With the industry's manpower situation easing and companies fearing munitions production tapers off, the executives returned to their plants to take under study requirements of materials, space and tools for resuming civilian output, and the time that would be needed to get machinery and set it up.

Although no quotas for different manufacturers were discussed, some executives favored a production of 2,000,000 cars during the early stages.

U. S. OIL: More Seen

Possibilities of new discoveries and more efficient production methods should assure the U. S. of sufficient oil for the future, Secretary of the Interior Harold I. Ickes told stockholders during the course of a report on 1943 operations of the company, showing a profit of $35,944,963.

Besides discoveries from ordinary explorations and wildcat drilling, Brown said, additional crude oil should become available through better production technique and secondary recovery methods.

At prices no higher than the average dealers' prices of 1918-22, exclusive of taxation, gas can be produced from coal, Brown declared.

COLD STORAGE:

Big Holdings

Cold storage holdings of meat and lard reached all-time highs on April 1, but because of a reduction in point values, there were heavy withdrawals of frozen fruits and vegetables.

Of total meat holdings of 1,273,145,000 pounds, beef stocks amounted to 266,380,000 pounds and pork 748,851,000 pounds. Lard holdings aggregated 400,999,000 pounds.

Despite heavy withdrawals, frozen fruits stock totaled 161,220,000 pounds and frozen vegetables 129,767,000 pounds. There were 82,038,000 pounds of butter on hand along with 149,942,000 pounds of cheese, 4,419,000 cases of shell eggs, and 168,036,000 pounds of frozen poultry.

SHIPPING:

New Rates

Continuing its policy of keeping shipping profits in line, the War Shipping administration prepared new charter rates for vessels taken over by the government.

Under the new WSA rates, a basic charter fee of $1.25 per deadweight ton per month will be paid for use of the vessel, with all operating expenses, including crew hire, borne by the government. Under time charter rates, the basic fee of $1.25 will be paid plus $1.425 per deadweight ton per month for operating expenses.

In setting the purchase value of old vessels, a basic level of $56.25 per deadweight ton will be paid, compared with the present $65.

SKY GIANT: Good Time

Piloted by the Transcontinental and Western Air President Jack Frye, and the millionaire motion picture executive Howard Hughes, the 40-ton Lockheed Constellation airship flew the 2,457 miles from Burbank, Calif., to Washington, D. C., in the record time of 6 hours and 58 minutes.

Averaging 355 miles an hour and slightly favored by tailwinds at heights from 15,000 to 19,000 feet, the shark-shaped Constellation carried 17 passengers, although it has accommodations for 40 more. Sponsored by TWA, the Constellation was to be turned over to the army for transport.

Howard Hughes

CHICKS:

Record Number

A record number of chicks were hatched in commercial plants during March in the face of a sharp decline in the price of eggs. Estimated output is 284,915,000, compared with the previous high mark of 274,983,000 in 1943. For the first three months of this year, however, total number of baby chicks was 1.3 per cent below last year.

The break in egg prices caused considerable cancellation of orders for young chickens, dealers said, and a surplus of chicks for March was reported from most sections of the country.

ITALY

Because of the increasing issuance of paper money, the Italian lira is taking a tumble in Germany-occupied Italy, and Fascist authorities fear further depreciation may cause a disastrous inflationary spiral.

Spurring the use of paper money is the continued hoarding of copper and nickels because of their intrinsic value, but the public resorting to use of postage stamps and perforated cards for newspaper and street car fares.

Let's Face Facts

Country Areas Attract Future Home Builders,
Careful Survey Shows

By BARROW LYONS
WNU Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—

There are many signs that up-to-date small towns in most parts of the United States will experience expansion that spells prosperity after the war.

This pops out between the lines of a survey conducted by Small Homes Guide, a magazine devoted to the country building, which indicates that more than a third of the people planning to build homes after the war prefer small towns and country areas.

This survey was the result of questionnaires in the magazine which almost 30,000 readers voluntarily filled in and sent to the editor. The questions were drafted on scientific principles so that unbiased answers, which truly reflected the intentions of those answering them, would be obtained. The returns came from all sections of the country, and are considered a good sample of average American reactions.

Only 3 per cent of the people intending to build homes after the war expect to settle down in large cities, the survey revealed, and 17 per cent expect to build in medium sized cities. Those expecting to build in suburban areas were 40 per cent of the total. But 24 per cent expect to build right out in the country, and 14 per cent want to build in small towns. Two per cent of those returning questionnaires did not say in what type of community they wished to live.

These answers show that many people have become disturbed over crowded living conditions in the cities during the war. Also, letters from members of the armed forces indicate that there are phases of outdoor life that appeal to them.

Aside from the psychological reasons for selecting the country and small towns, there are many economic reasons why much building will be done in rural areas after the war.

Some of the Reasons

For one thing, transportation facilities will be improved greatly. Road building and air travel are being planned to provide employment for returning servicemen. Developments in engine design and new types of fuel will make transportation more economical and comfortable. Air transport and railways will tend to accelerate improvements. As speed is increased, distance is cut down and the country is brought to the city.

Then, there are many war industries which have been scattered around in rural areas, which will be converted to peacetime production and there is a slowly developing movement toward decentralization of industry, which means establishment of more small plants in the country. Development of chemical processes, whereby farm products are used more and more as industrial materials, is on the way.

Equalization of freight rates for the south and west, which is now being vigorously sought by the Conference of Southern Governors, undoubtedly would lead to the development of country areas, which long have suffered from rural isolation. The Department of the Interior also plans extensive reclamation projects in the west, which would tend to build up many of the Western states, support greatly expanded populations.

New Designs Wanted

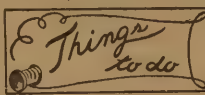

One of the points brought out in the survey was a leaning toward homes of low, rambling design, which is in sharp contrast with the old fashioned, cramped, two-story dwellings with dark basements and steep stairs. This unquestionably means that more people will seek country areas where land is cheap, so that they may spread out floor space as they desire.

Every small community should look over its resources now, to make sure it is going to get its share of the new building, and consequent merchandising that will come to it. It should consider whether it is getting a fair break in relation to new super-highways that are to be constructed. It should have adequate schools, hospital facilities, amusement and shopping centers, police and fire protection, libraries and street lighting systems. It should have equitable real estate and taxation programs, and honest and progressive town and county governments.

There should be plans to take up the employment slack in agricultural off seasons, and an aggressive Chamber of Commerce or Community council to bring desirable industries to the town.

All of these things are important, if the merchants and bankers are to prosper as great as the possibilities of their location warrants.

Business analysts studying this trend see for the small town contractors a large business, and along with him the building supply dealer in the community.

IN MEMORIAM
 Thomas Jefferson Mims.
 In a universe of unfoathomable mysteries it is utterly useless to question why things happen as they sometimes do or why a good man, who will be so sorely missed in his family circle, his church and community, should, in the vigor of body and mind, be so unexpectedly taken away. We would not dare question God's dealings with His creation for we believe God has a purpose for every test and trial of our lives and that we are made perfect through our sufferings.
 David, the sweet singer of Israel, tells us that the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord. If we believe that then we are sure that no accident or mischance comes to one who trusts to God for constant keeping.
 We are surrounded by the unalterable decrees of God and death is one manner for all must die or in some manner be changed to inherit immortal life. We believe that our Christain brother and friend had finished his course and had come at eventide to the end of earth's stony footpath where it connects with the golden streets of glory—for it is but a step across the line and life goes on unfettered by the elements of earth.

 Jeff was 57 years old. He united with Shady Grove Methodist church when a young man, and was active in all its interests as long as he lived in that community. In 1938 he moved to Verbena and from then until his death he attended the Verbena churches. He enjoyed having the preachers in his home and was ready at all times to entertain the visiting ministers of both the Methodist and Baptist churches.
 In October 1909 he was married to Miss Emma Jane Howard. Three boys were born to them. One died in infancy. One at the age of three years, and only Leroy who is serving as Storekeeper 1st class in the U S Navy overseas lived to grow up Jeff was a devoted husband and father and one of the most unselfish men I ever knew. He lived for his wife and son whom he had not seen for over two years. His unusually tender heart was stirred with sympathy and appreciation for all the young men who are sacrificing everything in service to their country. One of his nephews in the service expressed the love they all felt for him when he said: "He was such a good uncle—Verbena won't seem like home without him."

 He was attentive to the sick of the community, thoughtful for their comfort and the many things around the place that needed to be done. In short, doing the kind, helpful things whenever he had opportunity.
 Although of a gentle and kindly spirit he was stern and uncompromising toward the evils of society and evil men who fatten on them. He was especially outspoken against liquor and the minions it spawns.
 On March 29, Jeff died of tetanus infection in St. Margaret's hospital, after all medical science knew to do had been done for him. His body was held at Spigener's Funeral home until all efforts to get his son home for the funeral had failed. The funeral was held at the Verbena Methodist church on Sunday, April 2, conducted by his pastor, Rev. C E Avinger, assisted by the Rev. P H Kelley of the Baptist church. Interment was in the Verbena cemetery. There we left his precious form surrounded by a profusion of choice floral tributes.

 SUPREME COURT of ALABAMA

A veteran of World War I, a native Alabamian, Judge Creel started his climb to the top at the age of 13, working on a farm.

IT COULD ONLY HAPPEN IN AMERICA!

(Pd. Political Adv. by friends of Judge E. M. Creel)

A Personal Message To the People of Alabama from JIM SIMPSON

I have endeavored to carry my candidacy for the U. S. Senate into every section of Alabama. My greatest regret is that I could not see and talk with every single one of you.

Any legislator who has served with me during the past 12 years will tell you that I have always fought for clean, progressive government. This record is my answer to the gross misrepresentations that have been circulated in a last minute effort to cover up the vital issue of this campaign which very plainly is—

Democracy vs Bureaucracy!

Thank you—all of you—for your support and goodwill. I shall not fail you in the high office which I am now confident I will receive from your hands next Tuesday.

Again I Solemnly Promise You

I will fight to bring local government back home—to our state capitols, courthouses and city halls. We must re-establish the American principle of government by law and not by bureaucrats.

I will fight the battles of Alabama's farmers.

I will oppose further pampering of CIO's selfish leaders.

I will oppose those who are tearing down the South's racial traditions. We must face the race question. I will not be silent or evasive on this vital issue.

I will press the war effort with every mind and muscle I possess—to bring your boy and my boy back home as quickly as possible.

I will work for generous treatment of these returning boys.

I will strive for sound prosperity after the war—with labor and management meeting one another half way.

I will stand foursquare for complete preservation of TVA and REA, all false charges and rumors notwithstanding.

I will fight to equalize Alabama's old age pensions.

I will demand simplified taxes.

I will try to improve the war-standing of our white-collar workers, the forgotten people of this emergency.

I will do these things at all times—and all else within my power to represent the people of MY State—Alabama—fairly, intelligently, boldly and without fear or favor.

This is my final message through the columns of this newspaper. I make no charges against my opponent which he cannot answer here before election day.

MRS. LENNARD THOMAS Runs for Re-election as DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEEWOMAN

Mrs. Lennard Thomas, Montgomery, Ala. has served one term as Democratic National Committeewoman and is asking re-election in the May second primary. Mrs. Thomas' platform is WIN THE WAR and bring the boys home. She feels the most important thing now is that we all put our concentrated efforts to speed victory in the coming invasion, for after all there is only one front which starts at home and goes to the fighting line. She feels we have done a good job so far, but that the war is not won, and it is necessary that we awaken to this fact and pull together to make the world a better place. Her suggestion is that if we pray for our leaders more and criticize less we would get better results. Stop an think, could you have done better than our leaders have done? Mrs. Thomas wishes the voters to feel that she deserves to be re-elected.

OCIE MCBRYDE WINS DISTRICT PUBLIC SPEAKING CONTEST

The N F A president, Henry Reese, of the Chilton County Training School local chapter is very happy after his chapter secretary, Ocie McBryde's winning first place and prize in the public speaking contest on April 14 at the Talladega County Training school. There were four different county training schools participated in the district school including the above named school as hostess. The speaker from Chilton County Training school was successful from the beginning to the end.

With a few lines of the most favorite poem of the late Dr. George Washington Carver serving as a "catalytic agent," McBryde worked it out for himself. The poem "You've got to work it out for your self my lad; Because you've got what all of the great men have had."

On April 5 the N F A held a program in the auditorium honoring the work of one who was "Wrapped up in agriculture" during his lifetime, and this one was Booker T. Washington. Gardens are getting off to a very fine start, we plan to follow through with a real summer garden to meet the on-coming canning program for Chilton County.

OSVA classes were few in number this year up to this point but results were almost unbelievable, especially in the farm machinery repair classes.

Hill Victory Is Indicated By Large Majority

Lister Hill Endorsed by Leading Democrats For Office of U. S. Senator.

Sen. Lister Hill's re-election campaign gathered additional momentum the final week of the race in which he is opposed by Jefferson County's State Sen. James A. Simpson, and indications from one end of the state to the other were that Hill would be overwhelmingly re-nominated in the May 2 Democratic primary.

Sen. Hill's campaign has been greatly accelerated by strong endorsements of his candidacy by such Democratic stalwarts as Sen. John H. Bankhead, Opelika's Col. T. D. Sanford, Sr. and Anniston's Judge Hugh D. Merrill, Sr. And attempts on the part of Simpson's backers and campaigners to stir racial strife and wage a "smear" campaign against Sen. Hill on the race question have boomeranged and backfired, observers pointed out.

Dr. E. B. Norton, Jr., state education superintendent, speaking for strong educational forces supporting Sen. Hill, condemned such tactics, declaring the reports circulated against Sen. Hill are "untrue and unfair" and adding that "No political campaign or other situation should give license to the stirring of prejudices and hatreds among the people." Dr. Norton made it doubly clear that federal aid for schools, proposed in legislation sponsored by Sen. Hill, would in no way bring about segregation laws or permit Negroes to attend white schools.

A group of citizens of Dallas County, in the heart of the Black Belt, acting in a "spirit of neighborliness," strongly protested the stirring of racial strife by "inflammatory" material published by a newspaper at Greensboro, Ala., in letters written by them to leading citizens of neighboring Hale County.

Sen. Bankhead, Alabama's senior senator and far left, strongly endorsed Sen. Hill's candidacy for re-election, declaring Alabama is ably represented by Hill and needs to continue having the services of a man of his experience and prestige in the U. S. Senate. Sen. Bankhead also declared Sen. Hill has "stood shoulder to shoulder" with him in supporting farm measures and "on issues that are important to our people, especially white supremacy."

C. C. Sanford, son of a former Alabama governor and member of the Auburn board of trustees, praised Hill's record as U. S. senator and "friend of Auburn" and declared that "his experience, ability and record make him the most valuable man Alabama could select for the U. S. Senate in such times as these." Sanford asserted backers of Simpson had pitched their campaign on "false issues" seeking to engender discord by arousing passion and prejudice and declared Sen. Hill is a "100 per cent states rights real Democrat and 100 per cent in favor of white supremacy."

Judge Merrill, former lieutenant governor and twice speaker of the House, in his strong endorsement of Hill, declared it is "absurd for anyone to be presumptuous enough to accuse Sen. Hill of taking any stand other than that of preserving the traditions of Alabama and the South." He cited Sen. Hill's record in Congress on educational and farm legislation, for the TVA and cheap electricity, declaring "Sen. Hill's interest in forming some kind of international policy when this war is over shows his keen foresight and ability in looking ahead to peacetime and Alabama could do no better than have a man of his caliber to sit at the Peace Table."

An invitation for anyone to visit our N F A is now extended to you on first and third Wednesdays in each month.

There is a Garden Club in the Home Economics department and we appreciate the work being done in gardening by the girls. We must remember that "Food will win the war and write the peace," Secretary Wickard.

QUEENS OF THE SKY PROUDLY

by W. L. White WNU FEATURES

THE STORY THIS FAR: Lieut. Col. Frank Kurts, flying Fortress pilot, tells of that fatal day when the Japs struck in the Philippines. Eight of his men are killed seeing for shelter. One is killed. The plane is so badly damaged that it is demolished before it can get off the ground. Kurts escapes to Australia, pleads Christians there, and is sent to Davao in the Philippines where he leads a battleship, and sinks two cruisers and a transport. They take off from Malana Field for a target of Borneo, and fly through terrible fog for hours. When they pull out of it they see a twisted black cloud which proves to be smoke from burning Dutch oil fields in Borneo. Dutch had fired their fields.

CHAPTER X

"I finally decide to give it that thousandth of an inch back, let them jerk the wreck and put in a new one. With that extra thousand now, maybe I can get over the target—we're about to begin our bombing run and bag a couple of 'em. It is a good trade for a ruined airplane motor.

"Now we're approaching the exact position of the target, and I begin to realize the predicament I'm in. Because if I lose another motor on the same side, I'll have little chance of getting this plane home.

"All the time Jim's doing his best to stay with me, but I continue to fall back. And just then Harris, my bombardier, peering down from the broken overcast, calls 'Target ahead.' I'm glued to the PDI needle now, but when my bombardier starts to make his run and the bomb-bay doors come open, their extra weight on the air slows me down still more, and I fall further behind Jim. As I trim the ship both to compensate for those open doors and to keep the wing which carries that limping engine from falling out of the sky.

"Then over my earphones Jim is calling: 'Bombs away, Frank—I'm turning off the target, and far ahead I can see the sun glint on the up-picked wing if he heads for home. But I'm still on the PDI needle, my bombardier has picked up a beautiful target—a gang of transports and a cruiser down through the overcast, the sea is laced with their curving wakes as they try to get away—but he can't seem to hold any one of them in his sights long enough to make a good run.

"Finally Harris, in desperation, pleads over the interphones, 'Frank, I just can't hang onto that cruiser—let's turn east.'

"Can you just hold it, Frank?' pleads Harris over the interphones. 'Just hold it, and we'll hang out one in just a second!'

"And then Jim Connolly, 'For God's sake, drop your bombs and come on, Frank!' I can see Jim in the distance, getting smaller and smaller.

"Harris, the bombardier, peering down from the navigator's compartment, couldn't see anything when his bomb train hit the surface. But he knew the plane was going straight down from the belly of the ship, swears he saw one of them go smack down for a direct hit on a Jap cruiser.

"With my limping motor, I could sit back and really begin to worry, I tried to level off, but of course I couldn't. I knew we were somewhere over Borneo by now. The altimeter showed we were 24,000 feet high, and in spite of everything I was doing we were dropping 100 feet lower every minute. I thought of landing on the camouflaged field here on Borneo but we might be shot down before we'd even gotten down through this dense warfare and couldn't find the field at once.

"Now dropping 100 feet a minute, if you can keep it from falling no faster than that, at the end of the hour you'll be down to 2,000 feet, the second hour, 12,000; the third hour, 6,000. So you see how it is. 'If you've got gas enough for four hours you've got barely enough altitude to make it back to Java,' I argued with myself.

"But it was going to be tough on the other boys. We'd been on oxygen for four hours, and ordinarily after a fight in the high air, which is a strain on everyone, the first thing you do is bring her down to 12,000 so everyone can take off his mask and relax. Only I had to hang onto my precious altitude, and it would be another two hours before the air would flutter down to 10,000.

"But it seemed it was the only thing to do, so I told my navigator, Walt Seamon, to set a course for Malana Field. Then it was up to me. I tried every trick in the book and for an hour I was able to keep the rate of fall from rising, because if it went to 200 or 300 feet a minute only for a few minutes I knew we'd lose the plane. The automatic pilot was out (a little gadget had had to be cut out of course we had no spare parts), so my co-pilot and I had to do all the flying, worn-out as we were, but at least we didn't have to keep stations on any other plane now, or have the nightmare of maybe crashing into someone else.

"Then suddenly we had a breather, for the clouds vanished behind us and we were floating free out into the abyss of a cloud canyon—the same old one. Peering down, I seemed to see the gray waves of that canyon's bottom practically trailing on the dull-green jungle-clad mountains far below. I doubt if there was even a thousand feet of ceiling, so we kept on our course. When we finally cleared the weather—we were out over the Java Sea south of Borneo—we were so far out that I realized we'd passed the point of no return. The only way we could go on now was towards Java, which was the nearest land.

"The field at Surabaya was a little closer than Malang, but I was afraid of its short runway, so with what gas and altitude we had left, we decided to try for Malang, but as we approached the mountain pass we could see the weather was settling down tighter and tighter on us, and looking ahead, I got afraid that when we got up into the pass, the cloud ceiling might push us right down onto the pass floor, and I'd spill all the boys out into a rice paddy in that fog. I could see the crew was anxious, too. I hadn't needed to tell them much of the fix we were in; they hadn't missed a trick.

"So then I took my last decision. Rather than nose on into that pass and use up my last gas trying to see what the weather there was really like (it turned out later it was terrible), I turned and headed back toward Surabaya Field while I still had contact flying, and while I still had gas and altitude enough to get in.

(Which means while we could still see the ground.)

"When I finally saw Surabaya Field, I was less than 1,000 feet of altitude left and I didn't dare think how little gas. So I didn't try to circle—just for the wing flaps, and set her down on that short runway, and her down on that short runway, and

her down on that short runway, and

her down on that short runway, and

her down on that short runway, and

her down on that short runway, and

her down on that short runway, and

her down on that short runway, and

her down on that short runway, and

her down on that short runway, and at Muroc Lake back home.

"But the heavy reinforcements were a little thin trickle of the thousand planes we hoped for. Of course they were then terribly short of seasoned pilots, and often quickly trained kids were flying them, and cracking them up all across Africa and Asia. But it was all they had to send us. Sometimes six would start out from Tampa Field and maybe two would arrive at Malang. During the whole month of January we got only half a dozen."

"We were in the old 7th, which came out to reinforce you," said Master Sergeant Charles T. Reeves, the bombardier. He had been sitting behind the pilot, under the plane's wing.

"So was I," said Master Sergeant Rowland A. Boone, the gunner, who sat next to him.

"On the day of Pearl Harbor, the 7th was sitting on Hamilton Field, California, waiting for the new plane to come off the Boeing assembly line before we took off across the Pacific for Manila. Of course the big news from Hawaii came that day. We'd have to go around the world another way."

"Then they put me to work ferrying E's from the factory to Sacramento," continued the Gunner. "I was picking them right off the assembly line, two or three a day. It would have been wonderful if we could have had that many in Java. But the bottleneck then was pilots—the planes were all stacked up waiting for them, no matter how many you had. For instance, you can't jerk a kid out of a Beechcraft trainer and put him in a Boeing. And by the way, when we got back to the States this summer, the bottleneck was still pilots. They still had several dozen E's stacked up at the factory field, waiting for men to fly them."

"I'll never forget my first look at the E-model Fortress. She had that big dorsal fin, and she looked a lot bigger—more deadly, too. Because not only were there tall guns, but much better side guns. As a whole, she was a power turret. On the old D model, the angle of fire from the radio guns and the belly guns had been very small, but this was corrected in the E, and the top turret was a hone."

"It doesn't hurt to talk about the D model, because the enemy have captured plenty of them. It's no more secret than the Model T Ford. But in those days the E was a prize package—like the new F model is now."

"And when something is really new, the combat boys who have to take it out, they love it. As a whole, for instance when we were still out East, a copy of an American magazine arrived which gave a complete diagram of the E. It showed everything—the angle of fire, the fire angles for the propellers. There weren't many blind spots on the E where an enemy fighter can sneak in, but this diagram showed every one."

"Our gang talked over that damned picture for days. 'Holy Smokes!' we said, 'why don't they give me a Japanese, I'd be blue!' The Japanese, it showed, the exact position of every man on the plane, so the Japs could work in through the blind spots and pick us off."

"It was all stuff we knew the Japanese didn't know, because all the E's we had lost up to then had either dropped in the ocean or burned after being shot. 'We lost 'em,' our gunners said. 'They're selling us out back home. They might just as well take the guns off the plane and let the Japs shoot us down! That picture knocked our minds out!'

"But what the hell! Now the F model is out—nobody knows the exact improvements on that yet, and when the enemy fighters hit the F, they'll find out they've picked up a real hot potato."

"Let's get back to the trip over," said the Bombardier. "In my plane we left the States December 28. I'd had a blue Christmas—missed dinner because we were out testing guns—but didn't mind much, because we were itching to get over and into it."

"As we were approaching Brazil we ran into a hell time of trouble. Our navigator couldn't find our position, weren't sure where in hell we were. My pilot, Captain Duane Skiles, first went up to 15,000, but then he came back down through it, staying just 100 feet above the Atlantic. We hoped we were headed right for our field at Belém, but we didn't know. Finally I called to him over the interphones and said that in my old geography book, it said you could see the line where the yellow Amazon mixed into the blue Atlantic sea as far as four hundred miles out to follow it in."

"Sure enough, we found this line between yellow and blue. But we were farther out to sea than we'd figured. By the time we hit the shore, we were pretty low on gas and an hour overdue. It was getting dark, and there are no lights in that jungle now—and then you'd see a glint of a native with a torch down there. We couldn't pick up Belém, so we had just twenty minutes' gas left."

Egg Glut Calls Attention To School-Lunch Question

House of Representatives Decides Against Spending Taxpayers' Money on Food for School Children After July 1.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building
Washington, D. C.

You have often heard the lament when guests came and the large ham and had some eggs, we could have ham and eggs."

If we had the man power and the machinery, equipment and distribution, we could step up American food production until, by 1954, we could feed 300 million people. That is what the Department of Agriculture says. Last year, we raised enough to feed 170 million.

Today, Washington is worrying over two problems brought into focus by that little "if."

This time we have over-production of one food product: eggs. Government agents are hurrying around trying to find a means of absorbing them. America has more eggs than were ever laid on these far shores in our history, enough to feed 800 thousand cases of shell eggs, 13 million pounds of powdered eggs since January 1) to support the farmer's price, and give some away — and here is where the trouble number two, which I said Washington was worrying about, comes in. We are giving away eggs to state and federal institutions and also for school lunches. After July 1, school lunches supported by the White House lawn on Easter Monday if the President had permitted such a wastage, which he wouldn't.

Of course, the community ought to look after this question itself and in most communities great interest has been shown and local authorities have cooperated. But in the poorer communities which have the greatest need, it is impossible, and even in the richer locations it isn't easy, to get money for things that the schools—as school teachers' salaries all over the country testify.

Unless the appropriation bill now before the Senate Appropriations committee is accepted and passed by both houses, the next time the hens step up production, the school children won't benefit nor will they feast at federal expense even if the eggs are sold at a profit. How plentiful the government has to buy them up to protect prices.

News From London
The London Daily Mail sets up a little special edition for the United States—a digest. It is photographed in London on microfilm, flown over to this country, enlarged to a four to six page brochure, about the size of ordinary typewritten sheets.

For instance: John Henry, once a 40-year-old steel smelter, came to America with other British trade unionists to visit our war factories. The Daily Mail quotes his reply to one of his wife's letters: "I don't know how large about wages? Is the American worker really better off than the British worker?" And this is what Mr. Jones replied:

"I will be sure with the same size house same number of children, doing the same job as his counterpart over here — No. Our house here would cost $18 a month clear, in rent. A similar house in London would run away with $30 a month."

The present laying spree of the hens will not last for the time being. And anyhow, the house of representatives has decided that even if there were a surplus of eggs and other food products, it does not approve of state to the farmer who goes to the Office of Education as well as the War Food administration.

the four or five million school children won't get hot lunches after July 1 of this year.

Not all the parents of all of the four or five millions of school children are taxpayers. In fact, the truth is that many of them are too poor to buy a decent, or in some cases any, lunch for their children. The richer ones who can afford a lunch will have to be satisfied with a cold one and the chances are they won't get nearly as healthy a one as if it were provided by a school where parent-teacher and other groups have seen to it that a balanced diet is provided.

Educators Worried

This worries the Office of Education which is still working on congress to get an appropriation through to continue the school lunch program.

School lunches started as "made work" back in the days of depression and the WPA. The original idea was to provide employment for the unemployed. But as the idea developed, it was discovered that there was an opportunity to do two things; to improve the health of school children and to absorb farm surpluses. The WPA furnished the woman power and some equipment and the Department of Agriculture furnished the food. For awhile, the department took the actual responsibility of buying the food and delivering it. Later, when the WPA went out of business, and in many cases local sponsors took care of the service, the Department of Agriculture merely contributed a certain amount of money (nine cents per child, matched by nine cents from the local community). This came out of funds provided for the purchase of surplus commodities and the school bought the food itself.

The proponents of the school lunch point out that on the principle that as a twig is bent the tree is inclined, the school lunch program, to school children will build good eating habits which will affect the whole community. It also points out that now that so many schools, especially in rural areas, have been consolidated with one school and bus service drawing children from many distant places, children can't go home to get a good hot lunch. Many can't afford to bring food with them.

Of course, the community ought to look after this question itself and in most communities great interest has been shown and local authorities have cooperated. But in the poorer communities which have the greatest need, it is impossible, and even in the richer locations it isn't easy, to get money for things that the schools—as school teachers' salaries all over the country testify.

JACKSON CHAPEL NEWS

A large crowd gathered at the church Sunday for Sunday school. There were seventy-five or eighty present. We had a collection of six dollars and twenty-six cents. The first Sunday we met, April 16th, the collection was twenty-one dollars and eighty cents.

We are sorry but our literature did not come so we couldn't have Sunday school, but we elected teachers. We'll have four classes. Mrs. Annie Parker was elected teacher for the Bible class, Mrs. Emelene Bolen for the intermediate, Miss Peggy Oaks for the Junior class and Mrs. Ida Henson for the card class.

We are glad we can say that we have seats for the church now. Next Sunday, the 5th Sunday we will have a home coming at the church. We want everyone to come and bring a well filled basket and spend the day.

We are really glad of the way the church is progressing and we want everybody to feel welcome at Jackson Chapel.

Mrs. Ida Henson Wade and Donald spent two days last week with her sister, Mrs. J. A. Dobbs of near Coopers.

Mrs. George W. Moore spent the week end with her husband's parents Mr. and Mrs. Walter Moore of Popular Springs community.

Miss Peggy Oaks spent Saturday night with Miss Inez Baker.

Let's not forget the homecoming.

The County Training chorus directed by Mrs. Wallace will be featured in several selections as well as the first, second and third chorus of the Union Baptist church led by Rev. Edward Banks.

Everyone is cordially invited to attend and enjoy the singing.

Parrish, Polk, Hill Win In Tuesday's Primary Election

Good Vote Recored In Spite Of Earlier Predictions

EDITORS NOTE: In compiling the total vote in Tuesday's Primary the returns from Beat 5, box 2 had not come in. The count of this box will add a few to the total of each candidate but will not change the vote enough to be of any material advantage.)

Early predictions on Tuesday's Democratic primary were that the weather was pretty, farmers would stick to their farming and the vote would be very tight. In spite of this fact more than 1,800 voters trekked to the polls to cast their ballots.

Leading the ticket was Senator Lister Hill with 1,063 votes to his opponent Jim Simpson's 698.

Mourne Parrish, present Commissioner of the Fourth District received a clear majority over both his opponents with 953 votes. Harley Calloway was second with 423 and Green Rutherford third with 345.

In the race for County Treasurer W. M. Polk showed surprising strength in defeating C Reese Mullins and T. W. Bryan in the first primary. The vote was Polk 915; Mullins 603; Bryan 195.

In our tabulation found elsewhere on this page the candidates for county officers where there was no opposition has been omitted for obvious reasons.

"DAMSELS IN DISTRESS" A hilarious farce comedy, will be presented by the senior class at Isabella High School Friday night May 5 at 8 o'clock.

Can you imagine Walter Kendrick as Ethelbert Meeks, a henpecked husband? Or Jesse Culp as Jimmy Love, a rich glamour boy, alias Mrs. Jones, an elderly housekeeper and chaperon for two teen-age girls? You'll be disgusted and sympathetic too, with Pamela Royle and Geraldine Ware, (Evelyn Owen and Mary Ann Oden), for the gosh-awful state of affairs they bring on themselves. Hannel Grooms will keep you laughing as he successfully portrays the part of Braymer Babcock, "Gerry's" portly-undined uncle.

Other members of the cast include Mrs. Meeks (who loves a masterful man), Frances Kincaid, Mrs. Guppy to crouchy old landlady with an eagle eye, Esther Lee Mizell; Natasha Felcovna (a temperamental Russian) Pauline Williams; Hnely Parsons (a fiscal student); Odie Osley; Aunt Estelita Carstairs (a cat lover); Alek Honey and Mike and Bill (delivery men); J. B. Sims and Marvin Scott.

Other members of the senior class will serve as ushers and assist in the stage management. Irma Durbin will announce the characters and give a brief history of the class's dramatic performances in the past.

Between-act entertainment will consist of piano music by Miss Imogene Maddox of Birmingham.

The play, which is under the direction of Miss Loyce Baker—Isabella English Instructor, will be packed with fun from beginning to end. There will be no juvenility in this two and one-half hours of entertainment.

The play will be in the school auditorium. Admission will be 15 and 25 cents, tax included.

TO THE PEOPLE OF CHILTON COUNTY I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the many kind acts shown me during my recent illness. It had not been for your help my operation and hospital threatment would have been more difficult by far than it has been. I wish I could see each one of you and tell you how much I appreciate what you have done to help me out, but since that is impossible I hope you will take this note as a personal message of appreciation.

Sincerely yours,
J. R. ROSEBERRY,

LET 'ER GO, GALLAGHER

Come and see "Let 'Er Go, Gallagher," a new play to be presented by the Senior class at Verbena high school on next Friday night, May 5, 8:30 o'clock. You ain't seen nothin' until you see the battle of the Calhouns and the Snoods. There is Ma Snood, Francis Jones, who works like a dog for a shiftless brood, and Gallagher Snood, Aubrey Howard, who will always be layin' around. And Doisy Snood, Helen Jenkins, who writes prize winning jingles, and Glen Snood, Clarence Angler, who is wired for sound. Then there is Polly Calhoun, Margaret McCallard, as sweet a girl as ever you shaw. And Elmer Purvey, Guy Caffey, who has a hankering to marry. So forget your worries and see "Let 'Er Go, Gallagher" next Friday night.

Admission is 30c for adults and 18c for children, tax paid.

"HE COULDN'T MARRY FIVE"

"He Couldn't Marry Five" is the amusing title of the three-act comedy produced by the Senior Class in the Jenison high school auditorium on the evening of May 12, 1944. The title describes the major plot of the play which is all about a young man who goes to visit a family with five eligible daughters and falls in love with each and every one of them! To make things worse, the sisters all fall in love with the young man—or think they do. If this isn't a complicated situation for any young man to find himself in, we'd like to know what it is. It seems hopeless, but after many laughable situations everything finally straightens out to everybody's satisfaction through the common sense advice of the grandmother. Those taking part in the play are Billy Joe Varden, Martha Marler, Quinton Guin, Mona Verl Green, Christine Greene, Bernice Vinzant, Barbara Hayman, Sarah Dele Glass, Arlis Hodgins and Hazel Leach. The curtain rises promptly at 8 o'clock. Tickets are 40c for adults and 25c for children. Remember the date, and don't let anything else interfere with your coming to see "He Couldn't Marry Five."

3. Where-as we realize that thousands of men will likely lose their lives, and
4. Where-as we do not pose as being perfect, realizing our many failures and short-comings; and
5. Where-as we feel that in making this invasion, the Allied Nations are fighting the cause of righteousness in relieving the oppressed and enslaved peoples of Europe;

Therefore, be it proclaimed that if and when we are informed of the invasion, the fire alarm be sounded for 3 minutes as a signal for places of business to close for one hour during which time all people are requested to engage in prayer, either in private or repair to the several churches, seeking the blessing of All Mighty God on the success of the invasion and establishing of an early and just peace.

EUROPE: Zero Hour

All the world tensed in anticipation of the U. S. and British invasion of western Europe, expected to coincide with other Allied thrusts in the Mediterranean and a great Russian offensive against German lines in eastern Poland.

As the enemy reported on huge concentrations of armored shipping and naval formations in English waters, neutral sources quoted German strength at 90,000 men in Norway; 180,000 in Finland; 180,000 in the Balkans; 375,000 in Italy; 75,000 along the Mediterranean coast; 450,000 along the Atlantic wall, with 900,000 at strategic points in France, Germany and central Europe and finally 2,925,000 in Russia.

As the zero hour approached for the greatest battle in history, U. S. and British bombers roared over Europe, smashing at concrete and steel defense bunkers, ripping up communication lines and forcing the enemy might rush troop concentrations and pouring fire on industries supplying the Nazi wehrmacht.

INCOME TAX:

Plan Simplification

Of the nation's 50,000,000 taxpayers, 30,000,000 would not be required to file individual returns if congress approves the house ways and means committee's simplification bill, drawn after lusty protests over present complicated forms.

Under the committee's bill, a person earning up to $5,000 would have his whole tax deducted under the withholding plan, and he would just have to file a copy of his employer's withholding receipt at the year's end.

To simplify tax rates, the committee's bill calls for abolition of the victory tax and the creation of a normal tax of 3 per cent and a surtax starting at 20 per cent on all income in excess of personal exemptions and a straight 10 per cent credit.

CIVILIAN GOODS:

Production Urged

Following congressional pressure applied particularly by Senators Stewart (Tenn.) and Wherry (Nebr.), the War Production board withdrew a previous order freezing civilian goods output to final quarter levels.

As a result of WPA's latest action, opportunity should develop for a gradual reconversion to consumer merchandise, particularly in those plants facing expiration of war contracts and shutdowns.

"Military production will not be hurt by a gradual conversion of industry to the manufacture of civilian goods," Senator Wherry said. "There is no reason why flat irons, automobile parts, general machinery parts, alarm clocks and dozens of other urgently needed products cannot be made now."

CORN:

U. S. Sole Buyer

To supply processing industries with badly needed supplies of corn, the government froze all farm or elevator sales of the grain in 125 counties in Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana except to U. S. agencies.

At the same time, War Food administration announced that the government would stand all expense of shipping and transporting corn from the farm to the elevators, where sellers would receive the local ceiling price.

Approximately 80,000,000 bushels of corn are needed by the processing industry for making food products and material for fiber board, adhesives, drugs, vitamins, explosives, chemicals, plastics, etc.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

BIG LEAGUE PILOT: Mel Ott, manager of the New York Giants baseball club, has been accepted by the army. He is 35 and has two children. Ott joined the Giants at 16 and remained with them for 19 years, a league record. He also holds the league home run record of 466 and far runs batted in with 1,689. He is the first big league manager to be drafted.

PACIFIC:

Trap Japs

Around 140,000 Japs stood trapped in the South Pacific with the U. S. invasion of Hollandia in north central New Guinea, about 1,400 miles distant from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's coveted goal of the Philippines.

As Doughboys fought inland from Hollandia to take over the airfields which would give them command over shipping lanes supplying enemy troops to the southeast, good word also came from India, where British and native forces stood up against fierce Jap efforts to sever the Bengal-Assam railroad feeding Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's Allied units hacking out the Ledo road to China from north Burma.

The 140,000 in Japs troops trapped by the Hollandia invasion stretched all the way from the newly embattled area to the Solomons, with their shipping lanes jeopardized by the superior U. S. air and naval forces, so far unable to draw out the enemy fleet lurking closer to its bases to the west.

FLOOD:

Extensive Damage

Town and country alike were inundated as flood waters surged throughout the central Mississippi river basin, approaching record peaks at many points, with early counts showing 10 dead and many homeless.

Northernmost danger point was around Beardstown, Ill., where the Flood scene in Illinois.

Illinois river hovered around the 20 foot mark, flooding productive bottomlands.

Between the mouth of the Missouri river and Cairo, Ill., where the mighty Ohio river flows into the Mississippi, high waters lapped at straining levees, and a little farther down, St. Louis reported a crest of approximately 33 feet.

Extensive damage was caused in Wichita, Kansas, where the residential district stood in water waist deep. As conditions improved in Kansas, they worsened in neighboring Missouri and Arkansas.

ARSENAL:

U. S. Aids Allies

The "arsenal of democracy"—the U. S. with its gigantic, efficient industrial machine—has supplied the Allies with weapons and munitions valued at nearly 10 billion dollars since March of 1941.

Although the Allies paid for most of the deliveries, most were lent—leaked, including 23,000 planes, 25,500 tanks and 550,000 motor vehicles. In all, the Allies paid for 7,000 planes, 1,500 tanks and 250,000 vehicles.

During the three-year period, the U. S. also aided the Allies with the production of $1,800,000,000 of aircraft engines and parts, $2,700,000,000 of weapons, munitions, steel, aluminum and other metals, and hundreds of millions of gallons of gasoline.

DRIED EGGS: Profits of the egg drying industry will be somewhat reduced as action of the War Food administration. The WFA will now allow cost of processing and approximately five cents profit per pound of egg powder. Some processors have been buying eggs at considerably higher prices, and so were obtaining an unduly large profit.

DRAFT:

Depends on Losses

Unless European or Pacific military operations impose a severe drain on manpower, selective service officials expect 1944 draft calls to be met with men under 30, it was revealed.

Induction of younger men, however, may place a heavy strain on industry and agriculture. Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey declared, adding: "Older men, physically unfit for service . . . and women can and must replace these young men at the lathe and on the tractors."

Of monthly requirements for the 600 men, General Hershey said, about 60,000 can be met from men becoming 18, and the rest must be supplied from the 1,000,000 under 26 now deferred, of whom 600,000 are expected to pass their physicals.

STEEL:

Union Grows

Philip Murray's United Steelworkers of America have grown into one of the most powerful labor organizations in the country, with membership of 930,500 and net assets of $3,019,077, including $2,174,313 in cash, according to a semi-annual report of the union.

During the year ended November 30, 1943, the USA signed up 210,875 new members and increased assets by $1,539,177, including $599,213 cash. During the six-month period ending November 30, 1943, USA paid $227,000 to the CIO with which it is affiliated, and also raised $102,500 for the CIO's political action committee. Costs of negotiations and wage scale conferences totaled $85,976 and traveling expenses of officials and representatives were $78,161.

SUPREME COURT:

Religious Freedom

In a majority decision read by Justice Douglas, the U. S. Supreme court yesterday reaffirmed the freedom of religious worship, asserting no jury had the right to pass on the validity of any doctrine.

"Freedom of thought . . . embraces the right to maintain theories of life and death, and of the hereafter which are rank here to followers of orthodox faiths," Justice Douglas said.

Men may believe what they cannot prove they may not be put to the proof of their religious doctrines or beliefs. Religious experiences which are as real as life itself may be incomprehensible to others.

"If one could be sent to jail because a jury in a hostile environment found these teachings false, it would be to be left of religious freedom," the justice said, adding that if the doctrines of the parties involved in the court case were subject to judgment, "then the same can be done with the religious beliefs of other sects."

ARMY:

Ask Single Command

In the interests of efficiency, unity of command, economy and elimination of duplications, two war department officers studying reorganization of the services urged the consolidation of the army and navy into a single command instead of separate armies as at present.

However, the spokesmen refused to go as far as Representative Mass (Minn.), who also suggested the adoption of a single uniform for all branches and their functioning as one. Declaring unity of command at the top would be essential, the spokesmen favored retaining the separate identities of the services.

Without a single command, the spokesmen said, the task of coordinating army and navy units and preparing for defense must be left to the president without any workable machinery to aid him. Economies in securing munitions and other supplies would be effected through a single command, the spokesmen asserted.

WORLD BANK:

For Trade Stability

Consultant economists of 30 out of the 34 United Nations were reported to have agreed on the formation of a world bank with a capitalization of $10 billion dollars to promote international business stability in the postwar period.

Functions of the bank in which the U. S. would have a 24 billion dollar interest, would be to provide member nations with finances for holding up the value of their money, preventing any drops that would depress their business activity.

Great Britain with $1,250,000,000 and Russia with $1,000,000,000 would be the two other biggest subscribers to the bank, on whose managing committee of nine, the U. S. would have one vote.

BRITISH TAXES

The British exchequer intends to raise about 12 billion dollars of the annual cost of the war by taxation, with the levy amounting to approximately 10 per cent on the gross in the kingdom. The year's expenditure for war will likely be double this amount, or slightly more than last year.

Further increases in the tax on non-essential items are anticipated. The basic rate is 50 per cent on incomes and 100 per cent on luxury items.

Jews of All Ages Are Murdered by Mass Suffocation

Never in History Has There Been Such Barbarism As Poles Suffer.

CHICAGO.—How Jews of all ages and both sexes have been asphyxiated en masse by hot steam in a deathhouse at Treblinka, Poland, was reported in detail to the Polish government in London by a former Polish policeman, an eye witness, Jacob Apenszlak, editor of "The Black Book of Polish Jewry," deathhouse.

Both Apenszlak and Dr. Moses Polakiewicz, one of his co-editors, were here as guests of the Chicago district of the American Federation for Polish Jews, of which J. H. Trauss is the district president. They told how the book was written from "blood and tears — our own tears," and from what sources they had compiled it, in a conference with representatives of the press and of various Polish-American groups.

"There never was such ruthless barbarism in history as has been going on in Poland," commented Dr. Apenszlak, "where the Polish government in London by a former Polish policeman, an eye witness, Jacob Apenszlak, editor of 'The Black Book of Polish Jewry,' deathhouse."

Ruthless Nazis.

"It is hardly believable that the things occurred that have occurred in Poland," said Corporation Counsel Barnett H. Vassar, "where the Japanese horrors I am wondering if the Japs didn't learn a lesson or two from the Nazis in Poland, and if their friends the Nazis did not lay out to be patterned."

Apenszlak pointed out that some of the materials used in the "Black Book" were drawn from German Nazi documents, for "the Nazis made no secret of their intention to exterminate the Jews of Europe, using Poland as a death chamber."

The story of the mass suffocations at Treblinka, he said, was taken from an official report submitted to the Polish government. It concludes with a warning that perhaps a similar fate is being prepared by the Nazis at Treblinka for non-Jews, since already some non-Jews have been destroyed there.

Method of Execution.

"The new deathhouse provides," this pamphlet said, "for the liquidation of 8,000 to 10,000 victims. If we consider that right now 2,000,000 murdered Jews, or the greater part of Polish Jewry, are already buried in the area of Treblinka, the disturbing question arises: for whom do the S. S. men intend that new house of death; who are to utter their last breath in that slaughterhouse?"

The method of execution was described as follows: The Jewish prisoners, arriving at Treblinka, are confronted by an ironical sign: "Have confidence in your future." They are told to strip for a bath, are driven into the deathhouse with whips, till the deathhouse is crowded; children are tossed in over their heads. The execution chambers are closed; the steam issues into the death chambers through numerous vents of pipes.

"At the beginning, stifled cries penetrate to the outside; 15 minutes later the execution is complete. "Due to steam, the bodies have become a mass, stuck together. To make it possible for the gravediggers to get out single bodies, cold water is poured over the mass. As the steam is filled, the gravediggers quickly cover the bodies with earth and the digging machine nearby prepares the next grave."

Air Hero Killed Saving

Civilians From Crash

A UNITED STATES FIGHTER BASE, ENGLAND.—Lieut. Charles W. Gunn Jr., a fighter ace who was the first to shoot down an enemy plane over Europe, died a hero's death eight days ago to save civilians from his crashing plane, it was disclosed.

The story of his heroism in refusing to parachute from a plane which would have fallen in the English town of Nayland was told by Canon W. L. Wright of Nayland, who came to the aid of the pilot's buddies that the townspeople were deeply touched by his sacrifice. He said many persons saw Gunn's plane falling toward the village, when an engine of his fighter failed during a test flight. There was no doubt in their minds, he said, that Gunn could have bailed out safely, but the plane would have crashed into houses.

Instead, Gunn stayed with the ship, fighting it clear of the town. It neared an open field, but was so low a wing caught a tree, flipping the plane over and throwing Gunn from the cockpit to his death.

Hatpin She Swallowed

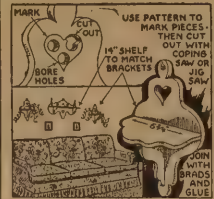

Removed by Operation

WILLIAMSPORT, PA.—A two-inch hatpin was removed from the stomach of Anna Delina, 34, of the town, after a 14-hour abdominal operation at the Williamsport hospital.

Miss Steinbacher, freshman at St. Joseph's high school, had played the pin between her teeth while removing her hat and swallowed it. Her condition was described as satisfactory after the operation.

DO YOU have a large wall space somewhere in your home that looks rather bare? Why not fill it with a group of matched brackets on which you may make an attractive arrangement of bric-a-brac and trailing vines?

This sketch shows a set of three brackets in a quaint old-fashioned heart design over a davenport in the living room. The center bracket is fourteen inches wide with one of the matching smaller brackets on each side. The sketch also shows how easy it is to cut out the heart design with a sharp knife after boring holes with a brace and bit. Any school boy who has a jig of a coping saw or maybe a jig saw may make these graceful brackets.

Household Hints

Darn the worn carpet. Literally, of course, and with wool carefully matched in color. This will take away much of the shabby appearance.

To keep moths from your knitting yarn, take old tobacco containers and give them a coat of paint and use these cans thus prepared as a parking spot for the knitting yarn.

To pipe with rickrack, turn the raw edge of the fabric once or twice to the inside and stitch rickrack over it.

For painting shelves that are too close together to use an ordinary brush and for other tight corners, make a "right angle brush." Cut the handle off an ordinary brush and fill the remaining stub of handle into a hole bored in a piece of wood about 10 inches long.

A worn anklet makes a good cover to pull on over the old wax applicator when it needs freshening. Wrap the applicator first with soft cloth, then the anklet is pulled on and it's ready for service.

Who Loses if Gremlins paint the postwar railroad picture?

You lose—even in normal times—without efficient railroads. So does "the butcher, baker and candlestick maker," the farmer, merchant, industrialist, and every other person adversely affected by poor transportation service, slack employment, meagre payrolls and slim purchases.

Everybody loses during wartime—if the railroads are handicapped. Had railroads and railroad men not been equal to the tremendous tasks the war imposed, freedom itself might have been in greater jeopardy.

The Old Reliable L&N, a product of Free Enterprise, privately owned and operated, and directed by men who love the South and its traditions, has for 94 years turned its energies to developing its territory—commercially, industrially and culturally. By its fruits ye should judge it.

For the future the L&N asks nothing more than fair and equal treatment as to laws, regulations and subsidies. It has no more earnest purpose than to serve acceptably and to advance the welfare of its communities—for therein lies its own well-being.

NEWS NOTES FROM OUR STATE CAPITOL

MONTGOMERY — Conditions confronting Alabama farmers were described recently as "the worst in the history of the state" by Commissioner of Agriculture Joe Poole, in reviewing effect of the wet spring, and farm labor shortage upon crop prospects.

Excessive rain has caused damage totaling millions of dollars through soil erosion, and loss of fertilizer costing hundreds of thousands of dollars by leaching from the soil, Commissioner Poole said, while farmers have been set back two to three weeks in preparation of land and planting. He pointed out that in south Alabama, at a time when farmers normally are chopping cotton, the crop had not even been planted this year on many acres. On top of other woes, rainy weather and inability to cultivate have encouraged growth of grass and weeds, and this coupled with shortage of labor needed to remedy the situation raises the prospect that many fields will be abandoned, he added.

"The only chance in the world for Alabama to produce anything like normal crops is for us to have ideal conditions for the rest of the year, and the percentage is against that," Commissioner Poole said. "In spite of this setback, I urge farmers not to throw up their hands and leave the farm to seek work elsewhere. I am confident that farmers will continue to do their level best, as a patriotic duty, to supply urgent military and civilian needs for food and fiber." As one hopeful feature of the situation, the Commissioner pointed out that with reduced production, farmers can reasonably look for good prices for the things they produce.

The week beginning May 1 is the big week in the "Share Your Clothes With Russia" campaign, according to Dr. W. L. Spencer, State campaign director. Contributors are urged to have donations at schoolhouse collection centers by May 5. Meanwhile, warehouses have been set up at Montgomery, Birmingham, Mobile, Tuscaloosa, Decatur and Gadsden, at which clothing will be repacked and forwarded to New York for prompt shipment to Russia. A goal of four pounds of clothes and one pair of shoes from every school child has been set. Any garments, clean and in good condition, from overcoats to socks and underwear, are needed to help clothe Russians left destitute by Nazi destruction and looting. The PTA and Civilian Defense units, are cooperating actively. Dr. Spencer said, and he has received assurances of support from the American Legion and its auxiliary.

In response to numerous requests from livestock and poultry raisers, as well as feed manufacturers, Gov. Sparks has wired Marvin Jones, War Food Administrator, Washington D. C. asking action to restore normal shipments of corn to Alabama, or emergency release of sufficient corn to relieve what he described as a "critical situation." Lack of orderly movement of corn has produced a serious emergency in Alabama, with livestock and poultry feed getting dangerously scarce. Gov. Sparks advised Administrator Jones. Alabama has depended for many years upon the middle west for its supply of corn for feed. Reports coming to the Governor's office indicate ample stocks of corn on farms in the west, but on account of price ceilings the corn has not moved from farms in sufficient volume to meet the demand.

The Natural Side Dresser

Over 500,000 tons of Chilean Soda have been brought in for this year's crops. More is expected in time for side dressing, but there are distribution complications. The War Production Board and the War Food Administration control distribution of all nitrogen supplies under an allocation program. Principally, this program takes into account three things: (1) total supply of nitrogen products; (2) their respective locations and capacities; (3) crop requirements. So, if Chilean Soda happens to be scarce in your section, it is a war-time dislocation, a temporary scarcity.

If you haven't been able to get the Chilean Soda you need for top dressing and side dressing, don't blame your fertilizer man. Put the blame where it belongs . . . on Hitler and Hirohito.

A vast supply of natural soda is right where nature put it—in Chile. Large quantities are ready for shipment. Every possible ton of this vital material is being brought here in time for this year's crops.

Gasoline, Tire and Manpower Shortages Call for

SKIP-MONTH METER READING

In your personal affairs, the restrictions in the use of gasoline and tires called for a re-adjustment in your use of your automobile. Although an essential war industry, we too have had to reduce the use of our automotive equipment. In addition, nearly 700 of our employees are in the Army, Navy and Marines, and we have not been able to replace them.

It has been the custom to read your meter each month. However, beginning May 1, it was necessary, because of manpower, gasoline and tire shortages, for us to start the

SKIP-MONTH METER READING PLAN

(Began May 1, 1944, and will gradually apply to all residential and most commercial users)

The Plan Is This—

1. Meters will be read only every other month, instead of monthly.
2. For customers' convenience, bills will continue to be sent monthly. The bill for the month in which the meter is not read will be an average bill. It will be for approximately half of the actual electricity you used during the two previous months. The next month, when the meter is read your bill will be for the difference between the kilowatt-hours used for two months, as shown by the meter readings, and the kilowatt-hours for which you were billed the month your meter wasn't read.
3. Customers who do not want to be billed under the plan will be supplied with instructions on how to read their own meters, and with a postcard on which they may report their meter readings to the Company on specified dates. Their meters will be read by the Company each two months at the regular meter reading time.

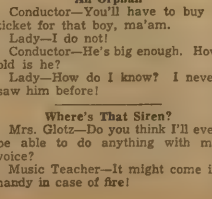

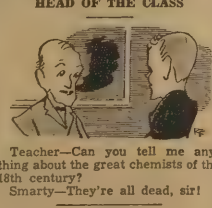

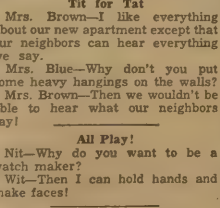

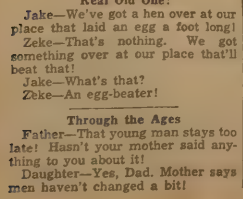

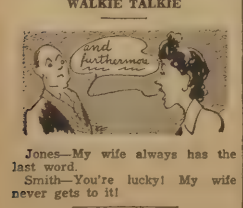

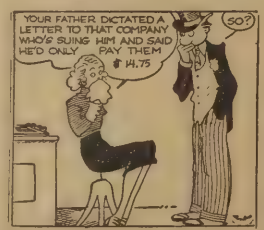

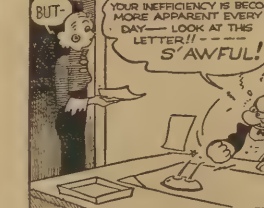

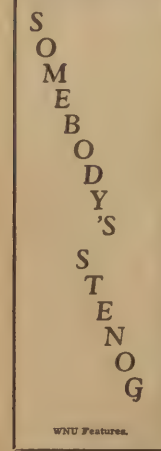

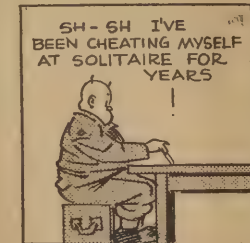

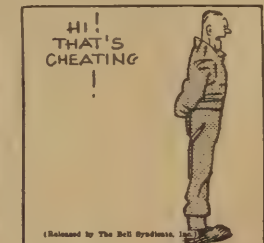

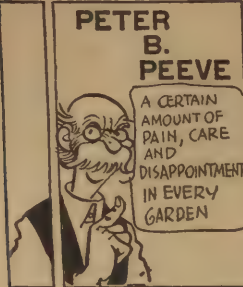

Besides conserving gasoline, tires and manpower, the plan has the advantage of permitting the continuance of the convenient monthly plan of payment for electric service, under which the variation in the amount of the bill from month to month depends on the service used.

ALABAMA POWER COMPANY

Electricity is Still Cheap and Not Rationed, but Don't Waste It

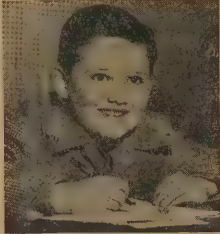

NOTE: Alabama Public Service Commission by order dated February 15, 1944, approved a "War Emergency Rule for Bi-Monthly Meter Readings" under which the Company is authorized to schedule meters on its electric utility system to be read every other month in accordance with the foregoing. Copy of this rule may be had at any Alabama Power Company office or bill paying agency.

him instead of at the rest of the cast, and it's one of the most amusing and delightful things to be seen in any of New York's many broadcasting studios.

Fernando Alvarado was a veteran actor when he was young Jim's age. He's ten, and has been in pictures nine years and four months, has had speaking roles in 50 feature pictures. His newest one is "The Falcon in Mexico."

Wild Bill Elliott tried for 12 years to convince Hollywood casting directors that he really was a cowboy. A series of pictures in which he played Wild Bill Hickock gave him his screen nickname, and at last he's been recognized as one of the best horsemen the screen has ever had, a cowboy's horseman. He's creating the role of "Red Ryder" in Republic's new series based on Fred Harman's cartoons.

When Anne Shirley showed up on the set of "Here Comes the Bride" with an inflamed eye, Producer-Director John Auer didn't send her home; he had Anne and Phil Terry play the picture's five kissing scenes. "You will please shut your eyes when you kiss him, Anne," said Auer. "We will make it come true that love is blind." And the camera never picked up a glimpse of her inflamed eye.

Helen Holmes was a star of silent films. Now she's on Hollywood movie sets again. One of the actors in RKO's "The Falcon in Mexico," which stars Tom Conway, is Blackie. Helen Holmes directs him. Blackie is a cat.

"Lives of great men all remind us" - of Warner Bros. Following "The Adventures of Mark Twain," the studio has eight other famous lives lined up for us. "Rhapsody in Blue," film story of George Gershwin, is completed; on the way are the life stories of Will Rogers, and upon, Marilyn Miller, Cole Porter, Vincent Youmans, Broadway's Sime Silverman, and Marine Sergeant Al Schmid.

Carlo Ross is thanking his stars for fan letters. Six weeks ago this young war worker was engaged by J. L. Grimes, originator and producer of "Musical Steelmakers," to sing just eight bars of the program's theme song each week. Those eight bars of song every Sunday impressed 1,418 listeners so much that they wrote to Carlo, in Wheeling, and now he's the featured vocalist on the "Steelmakers' broadcast."

When visitors to Hildegarde's "Beat the Band" program hail her as "Charlie" she's delighted. It was her father's name, and when she was a child in New Holstein, Wis., it was the custom for the children to call each other by their father's given name. Hilly was born in Milwaukee and acquired her famous continental manners in Europe.

Beatrice Kay, singer-comedienne of the air's "Gay Nineties," will make her picture debut in the very near future. "Billy Rose's" new musical "Horsehoe," in which she has a featured role, is going into production much sooner than expected.

ODDS AND ENDS-Irene Dunn will play her original role in "Penny Serenade" when it's done on the air May 8. Ingrid Bergman, soon to be seen in "The Bells," was chosen as the pin up girl of "Yank," army weekly, for one issue. Al Tolson will make his debut in "Burlesque," with Rita Hayworth in the role done originally by Barbara Stanwyck. After a two-months' vacation, "Objective Burma" is in "Road to Utopia" Bob Hope wears a mustache copied from the one Colonna made famous.

Cashier Planned
Fake Bank Holdup

Confesses He Made Up Story
Of 'Armed Robbers.'

CLEVELAND. - Robbery of the Killbuck (O.) Savings Bank company by "two armed men," in June, of 1942, was a fake, federal bureau of investigation agents report.

Bernard Click, 37, cashier and secretary of the bank, has confessed that he fabricated the report of the "two armed robbers" and in order to give credence to his story he knocked himself out by striking his head on a marble counter, FBI agents say.

Click was found, after the supposed robbery, by a customer. He was alone and unconscious. The two fictitious robbers, whom he described in detail, never were found, of course, nor had anyone else seen them.

The Federal agents say they suspected from the beginning that the cashier had taken the money himself and faked the robbery to cover up. The amount missing after the alleged hoax was $8,235.

A complete examination of the bank affairs was made to solve the case, and late in 1943 accountants uncovered a shortage of $5,600. On December 18 Click was arrested by the FBI on charges of violating the Federal Reserve Act, and held for the grand jury.

It was not until weeks after his arrest, however, that he abandoned his original invention of armed robbery and confessed that it was all a grand hoax. The $8,235 never left the bank, agents say. Click confessed, they said, that he placed the money in a safe deposit box and used it to cover fictitious notes he had drawn up to conceal his alleged embezzlements.

LOS NEGROS.-They were the Mikado's front-line troops on Los Negros, big marines, well-trained, well-nourished, well-armed, proud wearers of their dragon belts.

They were Japan's proud warriors. So when they failed to crack the line held by American First Cavalry division troops, the Japanese took their own lives rather than admit failure.

"One Jap officer jumped up on a bunker directly in front of us," said Pfc. Wilbur Resler, "waving a Jap battle flag in one hand and a sword in the other."

"Kill all the American dogs," the officer shouted. Then he plunged his sword into his own stomach.

They had waited until night, then charged American lines singly, in twos, threes, even in waves, always with a desperate reckless daring. And when they failed-

"I saw one group of a dozen or so Nips gather in a circle in a clearing after we had thrown them back," said Pfc. Dan Burnette, Franklin, N. C. "Then each pulled the pin on a 'grenade and held it against his chest. All were blasted to death."

Drifting Fliers Rescued
In Sight of Foe on Truk

AN ADVANCED PACIFIC BASE. -Three navy airmen in a rubber boat drifted for three hours within sight of the enemy's Truk, a closer and closer to that big Japanese fortress when a rescue ship boldly picked them up just in time.

Their torpedo plane was hit by a navy carrier force that was drawing Anti-aircraft fire severed the oil lines and they splashed into the sea eight miles offshore.

Ensign John J. O'Sullivan, the pilot, of St. Louis, said he tried to convince his fellow fliers, Eustace Raymond E. Lord of South Berwick, Maine, and Radioman Gene S. Berg of 89-20 161st street, Jamaica, Queens, that they were not drifting ashore. They put pretty soon those palm trees got so big I couldn't make it sound sensible any more."

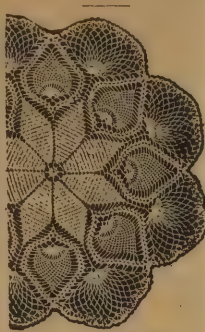

They were less than three miles from Truk when the rescue vessel picked them up.

Help Yourself to a Salad!

(See Recipes Below)

Salad Magic

Salads are in season summer, winter, fall and spring, but in spring you can really have all the variety you want. There are crisp greens aplenty, perhaps fresh from your own garden, and loads of fresh fruits and vegetables to complete the demands of health and satisfy the appetite for really fresh - from - the - garden foods.

Everywhere you go you hear people saying, "A salad is just the thing," or "I want something green and crisp." It's a sign of spring, this desire to eat foods that fit with the newness and freshness of spring. A new idea for serving is to try a salad buffet for it will save your preparing individual salads for everyone. Simply set salad ingredients in bowls, park them on a tray and whisk them into the dining room for everyone to make up his own combination. In the picture illustrated above, you will notice the bowl of salad dressing is surrounded by crisp greens, and then there are bowls of grapefruit sections with avocado pears, strawberries, pears or peaches and pears stuffed with cottage or cream cheese and nuts—all the makings for salad for helping yourself to any combination that appeals to you and your guests.

Salads can double for both the salad and dessert course, or they can be the mainstay of your luncheon for the club.

*Salad-Dessert Loaf. (Serves 6)

- 1 envelope plain unflavored gelatin
- 1 cup cold water
- 2 egg yolks
- 1 tablespoon melted butter or substitute
- 1/2 cup mild vinegar
- 3 tablespoons vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- Few grains cayenne, if desired
- 2/3 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons canned pineapple juice
- 1 cup prepared fruit
- 1 cup evaporated milk, whipped

Soften gelatin in cold water. Beat egg yolks and salt. Add vinegar, salt, gelatin, cayenne, paprika and pineapple juice gradually. Whip lightly. Add milk and cook in top of double boiler until of custard consistency, stirring constantly. Remove from fire and dissolve softened gelatin in hot custard mixture. Chill, stirring occasionally while cooling. When mixture begins to set, fold in whipped, evaporated milk and fruit, cut in small pieces (orange, cherries, canned pineapple, grapefruit).

Lynn Says:

Give Yourself Health! Egyptians cultivated salad foods such as onions and garlic; Romans enjoyed chichory and lettuce. Why shouldn't you? Your cues to a good salad are few but important: Ingredients should be well chilled, attractively arranged and served with the proper dressing. Most fruit salads take a whipped cream dressing or cooked dressing or mayonnaise flavored with fruit juices. Occasionally, in the case of a bland fruit or citrus fruit, a French dressing is used. Seafoods are usually marinated before mixed with other ingredients. In French dressing even though you may use mayonnaise to hold the salad together. The above trick may also be tried with potato salad. It improves flavor.

Let's Face Facts

Farm Machinery Output At Double 1943 Level; But Remains a Problem

By BARROW LYONS
WNU Staff Correspondent

Several senators from farming sections are predicting that the War Food administration is going to have a rude surprise within a few weeks when it discovers that farmers are not planting the acreages expected of them this year — partly because they cannot get farm machinery they need to make up for the shortage of manpower. Equally positive are officials of the War Production board that there will be enough machinery with which to plant, cultivate and harvest all crops. War Food administration points confidently to reports of acreage planted and says that if average weather prevails, crops will be adequate for domestic needs — but with less to spare for feeding foreign populations than UNRRA will request.

Here is the argument that WPB gives: Last year only about 40 per cent of the machinery manufactured in the base years — 1940 and 1941 — was produced; but this year about 80 per cent of the base year production is planned. Production is running close to schedule on some items and lagging on others. Harvesting and hay gathering machinery seems to be furthest behind. Harvesting machinery is in much greater demand than the supply. In this field authorized schedules are, on the whole, almost 125 per cent of base period production, but it is not now expected that schedules will be met. How far output will lag depends largely upon labor supply and the demand of the military for critical components.

Scheduled Increases

Combines with width of cut over 10 feet are scheduled for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945, at 118 per cent of base output, those between 8 and 10 feet at 110 per cent and smaller ones at 75 per cent. Schedules for binders are not as great in proportion to base output. But the programs for potato diggers and pickers, beet and vegetable harvesters are much higher.

Furthermore, repair parts may be manufactured in whatever quantities needed. Altogether, the farm machinery industry is expected to turn out nearly twice the volume of equipment it did last year — but, frankly, the program is not going to be completed.

There is one certain indication that the situation is not as serious as last year is that the volume of complaints is far less. One WPB official, who last year at this time was receiving from 40 to 50 telephone calls a day from congressmen requesting him to look after constituents, is at present receiving very few urgent requests for farm machinery.

There is one certainty: Farmers must give more attention to repair of equipment than ever before. In this country they have hardly begun to take repairs as seriously as farmers in England or in many other countries who have been to England say the British are far ahead of us in that respect, and reports coming from Germany indicate that a fine job is being done there on the repair problem.

Dealers throughout America, however, have been advised to order repair parts by telegram, and manufacturers to ship by airmail. No red tape or forms are required. All a farmer needs to do is to tell his dealer that he needs the repair parts.

Many Repairs Needed

Recently the results of a survey of repair needs made by the WPB Office of Civilian Requirements was published. It showed that in 1943 owners of 42 per cent of the nation's farm machinery of the country required repairs for their equipment, and that 13 per cent of those needing repairs did not get them; 42 per cent of the owners of combines required repairs, and 8 per cent of those requiring them were not serviced. These were among the worst repair records.

But it is the belief in WPB that that repair troubles should be virtually a thing of the past, and that normal servicing will be obtained.

In Indiana, cooperative repair shops have been established which have been a great aid in obtaining speedy repairs. In a few other states repair shops have been established as part of the agricultural college extension services, and farmers come from all parts of the country to avail themselves of these facilities.

On the whole, machinery manufacturers are handicapped by labor shortages, lack of motors, chains, malleable iron and castings.

To obtain the best distribution of farm machinery, manufacturers this year were authorized to dispose of 60 per cent of their output where they thought it would do the most good. Twenty per cent was authorized for the War Food administration to supply in areas where supply appears to be short. The opinion of those responsible for the program is that it has been working fairly well.

PAUL CROSSES INTO EUROPE

LESSON TEXT: Acts 16:13-15; Philippians 3:7-14.
GOLDEN TEXT: I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.—Philippians 3:14.

Pressing "toward the mark" (Phil. 3:14) well describes the zeal and intense devotion with which Paul lived his life for Christ. He was wholehearted in giving himself to the preaching of the gospel. Our lesson tells of his carrying of the gospel into Europe by the guidance and blessing of the Holy Spirit.

It seems appropriate to consider the two Scripture portions in reverse order, looking first at Paul's declaration in Philippians of his passion to know Christ, and then in Acts of his purpose to make Him known. The man with vision is eager to serve. "A task without a vision makes a man a drudge; a vision without a task makes him a visionary; a task and a vision makes him a missionary."

I. Paul's Passion to Know Christ (Phil. 3:7-14)

There were many things in Paul's life of which he was proud, until he met Christ, and then everything else lost its importance and interest. All things in life are relative in value and our attachment to them is determined by our heart attitude. Now being spiritually minded and having found in Christ real satisfaction for his soul, the Christian counts as refuse the things in which the world takes such pride and satisfaction.

To "know Him" calls for a depth of experience, sacrifice and of joy which is not easy to describe in words. It begins with a divine righteousness imparted by faith. Self-righteousness will not suffice. This is not a matter of law, but of grace.

It is a resurrection faith and therefore powerful. It is a faith which accepts suffering for Christ as a part of fellowship with Him. It is not bearable but glorious because it is in the power of His resurrection.

That fellowship is one day to be complete and eternal, for there is to be in Paul the expressed experience of a personal resurrection out from among the dead (v. 11). The faith of a Christian looks beyond the grave.

All men must do with the present, as well as the blessed future. The man who has this kind of spiritual experience shares the purpose of Paul expressed in verses 12-14. Here there is no resting back in self-satisfaction, no pride in one's past victories, no sense of having "arrived."

Paul saw not only the necessity but the desirability of going forward in victory to victory. Too many Christians of today are entirely satisfied with what they have attained and it is usually all too little.

There is a prize to be gained, the prize of our "high calling in Christ Jesus." Let us, like Paul, be filled with holy dissatisfaction with ourselves until we reach that blessed goal.

The man who had such a vision was ready for God's call to carry the gospel into Europe.

II. Paul's Purpose to Make Christ Known (Acts 16:13-15)

The story of the conversion of Lydia has many elements of special interest. It presents the turning point in the progress of the gospel, which by the grace and leading of God was to be the beginning of the church in the northward to Africa. Many of us have heard because of the way Paul was led, and one wonders if Europe and America might not have been the "dark continents" rather than Africa. We are what we are by the grace of God.

Then we note that the first convert was a woman. She was not the woman to whom the apostle was attracted and a believing heart to the gospel message. The church through all its history has been blessed by the readiness of women to bear and heed the gospel.

We like to note that she set a pattern of hospitality and service which her sisters in the church have maintained (see v. 15). She "contaminated" the visiting preachers to the comfort of her home and thus put forward the work of Christ (see III John 5-8).

It is encouraging to note how perfectly the leading of the Holy Spirit worked out in the experience of Paul and his brethren. The Lord sent His prepared messenger to the place where there was a prepared heart waiting to receive the Word with gladness.

We thank God for the errands of our God, knowing that when He leads, He goes before and prepares the way. That does not mean that there will be no trials and difficulties. Paul and Peter of the way (see II Cor. 11:23-33). But it does mean that we may go with the assurance of blessed results, in His name, and with the grace to bear whatever comes along the way—for His glory.

JUST the sort of scattering party dress any young girl likes to wear—it can be made in silk crepes or in crisp dotted muslins. Done in percales it is a splendid school frock.

Where There's Life—
"I'm going to marry a widow."
"I wouldn't like to be the second husband of a widow."
"Well, I'd rather be the second than the first."

Her Idea
"If you hadn't been so long getting ready we'd have caught that train," she grumbled.
"If you hadn't rushed me so," he countered, "we wouldn't have had hours to wait for the next!"

Two More Ears
One morning some university students brought a donkey into the lecture room.
"Take your seats, gentlemen," said the professor. "I see there's one more of you this morning."

To Forget
"Have you forgotten that five spot I let you have last week?"
"Not yet; give me time!"

Johnny Was for Making Most of His Resources

Little Johnny's mother had just presented the family with twins, and the household was in a state of excitement. Father beamed with pride as he took Johnny on one side.

"If you'll tell your teacher about it, I'm sure she will give you a day's holiday," he said.

That afternoon Johnny came home radiant. "I don't have to go to school tomorrow," he announced proudly.

"Did you tell your teacher about the twins?" asked his father.

"No, I just told her I had a baby sister. I'm saving the other for next week."

Pvt. Edwin Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ivor Johnson of Thorby, Ala., has been graduated from the Infantry and Browning Automatic Rifle Section School at Training Center at Camp Elliott, San Diego, Calif.

Pvt. Johnson, born August 22, 1916 at Fairfield, Ala., attended Thorby High School. He was employed by Ford Motor Co., Detroit, Mich., before enlisting in the Marine Corps on December 27, 1943.

His wife, Mrs. Virginia Mae Johnson, and their four-year-old daughter, Linda Lee, reside at 93 West Grand Blvd., Detroit, Mich.

Sgt. James S. Rasco, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rasco, Rt. 1, Jewson, Ala., has been graduated from the Infantry and Browning Automatic Rifle Section School at Training Center at Camp Elliott, San Diego, Calif. The medal was presented by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds, Commanding officer of the hospital at which Sgt. Rasco is a patient. He was wounded in action against the enemy in the battle of Bismark Sea in March 1943.

A gunner in the Army Air Forces, Sgt. Rasco was previously awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross which was presented to him in another ceremony, held at the hospital in March of this year.

Pvt. Jimmy Langston, who is stationed at Maxwell Field, Ala., has been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wade and family.

William K. Jones, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Jones of Rt. 5 Clanton, is now enrolled as an aviation cadet in the pre-flight school at Maxwell Field, Ala., an installation of the Army Air Forces Training Command. Here the cadets are receiving nine weeks of intensive military physical and academic training.

A/C Jones was graduated from Gulf Coast Military Academy, Gulfport, Miss., in 1939, and attended Howard College, Birmingham, Ala., in 1939-1940.

First Lt. Jimmy Gilbert, grandson of Mrs. J. M. Curlee, arrived safely in England, according to a letter received by Mrs. Curlee.

Dr. S. A. Barson, eye specialist of Montgomery who visits Clanton each 2nd and 4th Monday will not be able to come on Monday, May 8, as he will be in Birmingham attending a convention. He will however, be here on the 30th of this month.

Pvt. Fayette J. Ellison who is stationed at Ft. Meade, Md., is home on a ten day furlough and is looking fine. Ft. George Meade is a replacement depot and is located about 18 miles from Baltimore and Washington, D. C.

Pvt. Ellison states that he has visited the nations capital and enjoyed looking over the huge city. He also had the pleasure of seeing a ball game between Washington and Baltimore which was a very tight game, the score being 1 to 0 in favor of Washington, however it wasn't as interesting as a good fox chase at home.

He states there are plenty of fox in and around the camp. There have been rumors throughout the state that there were mad fox there. One incident in particular is related by Pvt. Ellison that a man ran over a fox near Ft. Meade, crippling it so badly that it was unable to run. The driver stopped to see the fox and upon approaching it, the fox jumped at him frightening the man so that he got a pole and killed the fox and sent its head to the laboratory for a rabies test. They pronounced it had rabies, which the talk of fox rabies was circulated around Maryland. I suppose most any animal wouldn't like for a 1 1/2 ton truck to run over it without making it mad.

Pvt. Ellison urges all the fox hunters to keep up this good sport—chasing foxes—and asking that they remember him in every good chase. He wants his fox hunting friends to remember he is thinking of them these pretty spring nights. Hoping to soon be back to join his buddies in their fine chases.

He asks his friends to write to him especially his fox hunting friends and keep him informed of their activities. His address:

LOCAL MEMBERS WIN PRIZES IN FAT STOCK SHOW AND SALE

By M. R. Glascock County Agent

Fourteen Chilton County 4-H and F.F.A. boys and girls exhibited calves in the Birmingham Fat Stock Show and Sale.

E. J. Klinger, Chilton County Club member placed first in the medium Angus class and won reserve championship of the Angus breed.

Two 4-H Club girls, Helen Mitchell of Stanton, Rt. 1, and Nelda Ann Childers of Jemison, Rt. 1, exhibited and sold Angus calves in this show. These industrious young ladies were the first Chilton County 4-H club girls to ever attempt and complete a feeder beef calf project.

The following 4-H Club members completed their beef project this year and showed their animals in Birmingham or Montgomery shows:

Kenneth Conway, Jemison Rt. 2; Hoyt Thrash, Jemison, Rt. 2; Nelda Ann Childers, Jemison Rt. 1; Bobby Jo Mims, Clanton Rt. 2; Ben Mitchell, Stanton, Rt. 1; Helen Mitchell, Stanton, Rt. 1; Clyde Henderson, Clanton, Rt. 3; William C. Henderson, Clanton, Rt. 3; and E. J. Klinger, Maplesville, Rt. 2.

The nine club members listed above paid $764.60 for their animals, including transportation and insurance. (initial cost 12.35/100 lbs). These calves were fed from $32.00 to $53.00 worth of home grown corn, hay, and cotton seed meal. The cheapest calf sold for $17.50 per 100 pounds and the highest sold for $31.00 per 100 pounds. At this price 4-H Club members listed above netted $614.00 above total cost of calf and feed. In addition to the above, Chilton County Club members made approximately $100.00 in show premiums.

In addition to the animals entered in State sales, twenty-four other club calves were produced and marketed in private sales or through regular trade channels. Chilton County Club members have produced and marketed a total of approximately 27,000 pounds of top quality beef this year to help feed fighting Yanks.

The County Agent's Office is not recommending the buying and feeding of beef by adult farmers through this article, but in view of the fact that premium prices are paid to club members for their animals we do want to encourage all club members having more feed than is needed for home use to consider beef feeding as an opportunity to turn this feed and their time into cash.

Vegetables and cereals cooked in moderate amounts of water will keep the water-soluble minerals and vitamins B and C.

CITY YOUTHS WOULD SPEND SUMMER ON FARMS

To meet their 1944 production goals Chilton County farmers must make countless adjustments and full use of all available labor and machinery. According to County Agent M. R. Glascock, there are hundreds of town boys in Alabama who would like to help produce food by spending their summer vacations working on farms. Throughout the United States thousands of these boys helped to make the record production of 1943 possible.

Experience has proven that town boys do best when working for farmers they know. In peace time many town boys spend the summer working on farms for their uncles, cousins, or friends of their families. I. G. McGee, Emergency Farm Labor assistant urges that farmers who are short of help and have a relative or friend in town with a wide awake boy, see if they can get the boy to spend the summer farming. Many such boys will make good hands and be of great help during the long, hot days ahead.

FEDERAL LAND BANK TO EMPHASIZE TIMBERLAND

The growing importance of farm woodlands and the continuous production of timber in well-planned farming programs were given recognition this week when the Federal Land Bank of New Orleans announced a new loan policy in which added "consideration will be given to timberland" in making farm loans.

The new Land Bank policy announced here by J. L. Williamson, Secretary-Treasurer of the Bibb-Chilton National Farm Loan Association, will include farm woodlots and woodlands operated as a "forest farm."

"Loans will be made only on woodland tracts where there is at present a substantial amount of merchantable timber or where there is a good growth of young timber approaching merchantable size," Mr. Williamson said.

"In either case there must be sufficient young growth to insure a sustained yield for at least the life of the loan."

Protection of the young timber and management of the woodlands in a manner to maintain forest production sufficient to retire that part of the loan that is based on woodlands in an orderly manner is a further requirement. The owner, however, will not be required to make annual cuts if he has other sources of income from which to make the loan payments, and if the timber will not suffer depreciation from lack of harvesting.

The woodland property must be sufficiently desirable for production of forest products to be readily salable in normal times.

"Loans" Mr. Williamson said, "will be made in only those areas where representative operators have demonstrated their ability to take proper care of their woodlands and carry out practices that will maintain sustained production."

The added credit which will now be available to timberland coupled with loans already being made on the cultivated part of the farm will give farmers a complete long term credit service on the entire farm, Mr. Williamson concluded.

Spring Notes

'Tis the season for foods to don spring dress—to try on new colors, to keep Mrs. Time-maker cool while the sun becomes warmer and brighter, to perk up appetites that lag because "it's too warm to eat."

I'm not advocating any sulphur and molasses diet because you can do a better job in a much smarter way, that is, by serving foods keyed to the season and making the most of them.

The first rule to follow in pepping up menus is to take foods which are choice and fresh. In the vegetable group you'll find asparagus, peas, carrots, radishes, lettuce, spring onions, beans, string beans, spinach, endive, chicory, dandelion greens, escarole and wild greens.

In fruits, there is not as much variety, but the quality is lovely. You can have delicate pink and tender rhubarb, apples, pears, pineapple, cherries, strawberries and oranges.

Keeping Cool.

It's the smart homemaker who cooks her food quickly and stays out of the kitchen during the hot weather. Use the refrigerator as much as possible and plan meals that cook in an hour or less. If it's possible, make ready in the cool hours of the morning, and then just before dinner, pop foods into the oven, broiler or surface units to cut down preparation time. It's a good recipe for remaining cool and crisp.

Here is the first suggestion for today. The ham is cleverly extended with a dressing and may be baked with the garnish and dessert.

MENU I.

Baked Pear. Ham on Dressing. Green Salad. Rolls. Strawberry-Rhubarb Pie. Ham on Dressing. (Serves 6)

1 ham slice, 1 inch thick
1 cup chopped celery
2 cups soft bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon thyme or marjoram medicinal-sized onion, sliced
½ cup bacon or meat drippings
Toss together celery, bread crumbs, salt, pepper, thyme and onion. Add bacon drippings. Put into slightly greased baking dish. Top with ham slice. If desired, spread slice with thin layer of prepared mustard. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 1 hour.

Save Used Fats!

Pare, here and there, firm pieces. Place in baking dish and fill hollows with cranberry sauce. Cover bottom of pan with water and bake covered in a moderate oven about 30 minutes or until tender.

Strawberry-Rhubarb Pie
2 cups strawberries, washed and hulled
2 cups rhubarb, cut in ½-inch pieces
1½ tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca

Lynn Says

The Score Card: Egg supplies are at an all-time high, so scramble them, poach, fry, boil them. Use them in custards, puddings, or pies, but use them for economy's sake and eat health.

Cheese production is in for another cut, and there will be less cheese, except cottage cheese, of course. Use it wisely.

Fat supplies and oils for civilian use are getting smaller. Use them sparingly, and salvage what you can to turn in to your butcher for points and money. On the Also Save list are tin cans and waste paper. Salvage all that you possibly can.

SAVE VITAMINS!

When you're preparing vegetables for summer meals, observe these cautions for conserving vitamins:

As soon as food comes in from the garden or market, wash and refrigerate. Don't prepare vegetables ahead of time for cooking and let stand in water, as this destroys vitamins.

Prepare fruit cups and salads just before serving. Cut surfaces exposed to air destroy vitamin C.

1½ cups sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon melted butter
1 pastry recipe for 9-inch pie
Mix strawberries and rhubarb together. Blend tapioca, sugar and salt together. Mix with fruit. Add melted butter. Let stand about 10 minutes while the pastry is being made. Make pie crust and line pastry tin. Add filling, cover with top crust, cutting slits in top to permit steam to escape. Bake in a hot (450-degree) oven for 15 minutes; decrease heat to 350 degrees, and bake 30 minutes longer.

Save Used Fats!

Springtime is the best time to start getting plenty of those health-giving salads into your menus. It's true that during cooler weather, you usually use salad as a side course, but when warm weather comes along, try it as the main event of the meal. Here's a menu that's planned to keep the family as well as the cook delightfully cool:

MENU II.

Supper Salad Bowl. Rye Bread Sandwiches. Lemon Sherbet. Olives. Sponge Cake.

Supper Salad Bowl.

(Serves 6)
1 head lettuce
2 tomatoes, quartered
4 hard-cooked eggs, cut in halves
4 green onions, chopped
¼ pound sliced luncheon meat or leftover meat
¼ pound American cheese

Shred lettuce coarsely, place in salad bowl. Over it arrange tomatoes, eggs, chopped onion, luncheon meat and cheese, cut in squares or strips. Just before serving pour over french dressing enough to moisten.

French Dressing.

(Makes ¾ cup)
1 teaspoon sugar
1½ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoon dry mustard
1½ teaspoon paprika
Dash of cayenne
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons vinegar
¼ cup salad oil

Put all ingredients in a bottle; cover and shake well.

Save Used Fats!

Here is a grand recipe for making that best liked of all sherbets. It may be used as a dessert, or if you like combination salad plates, serve it with that. It's refreshing and delightfully cool!

Lemon Sherbet

(Serves 6)
¾ cup sugar
Few grains of salt
1 cup water
¼ cup rich milk
½ cup lemon juice
2 egg whites
¼ cup sugar

Combine ¾ cup sugar, salt and water; cook 5 minutes. Cool. Add milk, then lemon juice. Freeze firm in automatic refrigerator tray. Turn into chilled bowl; beat thoroughly. Beat egg whites, gradually add remaining sugar; continue beating until stiff and sugar is dissolved. Fold into frozen mixture. Return to tray; freeze firm.

The American Farm Family Is Now Enjoying the Conveniences and Benefits of Prepaid Hospital Care Through Blue Cross Hospital Service Plans

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THIS is the story of "the fastest growing movement in the country"—one that is adding to the health and peace of mind of millions of Americans. Seven years ago there were fewer than 600,000 of those Americans. Today there are more than 14,000,000—more than one-tenth of our whole population—and it's likely that by the end of the year that number will have risen to 18,000,000.

This movement is group hospital insurance which, under the stimulation of wartime conditions, has become a $100,000,000 a year business. And, as the result of the Blue Cross Hospital Service plan, sponsored by the American Hospital Association, Mr. John Q. Citizen, one of these 14,000,000, has the assurance that, should illness or accident make hospital care necessary for him or some member of his family, his pocketbook will not be suddenly and devastatingly depleted. And the peace of mind which comes from the assurance of that fact has been purchased by John Q. at an average cost of less than five cents a day!

However, the significant fact about this story for readers of this newspaper is that the group hospital service plan has spread to the rural areas of the nation and is rapidly becoming as common as it has been in metropolitan centers. Of course, it has always been true that farmers and members of their families get sick or have accidents just as do factory workers in the big cities. So there was quite as much reason for their having the benefit of low-cost planned and "prepaid" hospital care as for their city cousins having it. The principal reason why they didn't get it sooner lay in certain factors which are the very heart of the planned hospital care idea. Of those factors the word "group" is the key.

First of all, enrollment of members in such a plan has to be through groups and these groups have to be large enough so that, as in any insurance of this one type, their membership is "good risks" and the population so scattered in rural areas, it seemed that it would be almost impossible either to enroll people or to make collections from them. It seemed also that groups would be so small and so few that each subscriber would be in effect an "individual" subscriber, hence a hazardous risk. Then, too, it was believed that the people of rural America, especially the farmers, were individualists and independent thinkers that they could not be enrolled in hospitalization groups large enough to be self-sustaining.

Comes the 'Blue Cross.'

For these, and other, reasons the earliest plans for hospital care were concentrated in the big cities where large industries, whose employees were numbered by the thousands, offered the best opportunity for handling such insurance on a group basis. Through the organization of the Hospital Service Commission of the American Hospital Association to sponsor the "Blue Cross" movement, "Blue Cross" is a general term which identifies the 77 group plans in the country which meet the standards of community service, professional sponsorship, non-profit organization and financial solvency and which have been approved by the American Hospital Association.

Not only did the Blue Cross movement expand the planned hospital care idea in the cities but it was chiefly responsible for its "moving out into the country." It spread to the smaller cities and towns first, then out to the farms. It's true that farmers are "independent thinkers" but, as one of the pioneer workers in the rural field has stated, they are also "shrewd buyers and are quick to take to something once its value has been proved." So now farmers are being enrolled through banks, with which they do business and which are willing to cooperate, through their farm bureaus, their granges, their farmers' unions, co-operatives, creameries, and other well-organized farmer-business associations.

In the cities, workers who are buying hospital protection pay for it by payroll deduction. Farmers, who enroll through banks, authorize those institutions to make periodic deductions from their checking or savings accounts to pay the required fees. When they enroll through creameries or co-operatives, periodic deductions are made from their cream or grain checks and those who enroll through the grange, farm bureau or farmers' union pay their fees on a quarterly, semiannual or annual basis, mostly the latter two.

How the Plan Works.

Although there are 77 different group plans for hospital care and they differ from each other in some minor details, here is the essential method of their operation: The hospitals in a certain region—city, county or state—guarantee hospital service to Blue Cross subscribers, whether they are members of groups in factories, city offices, educational institutions, clubs, union organizations, farm groups, who have agreed to pay a certain amount for this service at regular intervals. This amount varies somewhat according to the group plan. Membership costs from $7.50 to $10.20 a year for one person and from $15 to $24 a year for the member and his family, including his wife and all unmarried children under the age of 18. In Minnesota, where the pioneering work in farm enrollment was done, there is a plan which offers a man complete coverage for himself and 50 per cent discounts for his wife and children at $12 a year, plus $3 for each adult dependent.

In return for these payments the insured, or member of his family, who has to go to a hospital gets a semi-private room, his meals, general nursing, anesthetics, special diets, dressings, laboratory tests, X-rays and operating room charges. (This does not include, however, the physician's or surgeon's fees.) He can enter any one of the country's approved, registered hospitals, that is those hospitals recognized as meeting the standards of the American Medical Association or state and local agencies.

If for any reason one of these hospitals can't take him in because of a full hospital, one of the plans pay back double the year's premium, but many of them provide cash payments for home care equivalent to the amount that the hospital care would have been. However, there have been very few instances where a Blue Cross member couldn't get into a hospital because the number of these institutions which participate in the plan is 2,500 with 80 per cent of the bed capacity of all the hospitals in the United States open to the public.

Reference has been made to the pioneering work done in Minnesota in rural enrollment in hospital plans. It began in 1938 under the auspices of the farm bureau in Hennepin county with 42 family contracts for a total service coverage of 90 persons. Since then farm bureau memberships in that state have increased to 1,200 farm bureaus with 22,400 persons covered for hospital care. These, in 325 local units in 61 counties, have found the plan highly successful and satisfactory. There are 87 counties in the state and 107 units of the farm bureau units so that three-fourths of all the counties in Minnesota now have units enrolled in the Blue Cross and more than one-fourth of the units are already providing hospital care against standard hospitalization costs.

From Minnesota farm bureau sponsorship of prepaid hospital care has spread to other states notably Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and Oklahoma, until now there are 15 in which farm bureau federation members may take advantage of Blue Cross plans through their unit groups. In December, 1942, the American Farm Bureau at its annual meeting in Chicago wrote into its nationwide program of work a strong indorsement of the non-profit group hospital care plans and other rural health developments that lend themselves to farm family unit action.

However, the farm bureau is not the only agency through which the hospital plan is being carried to the farms of the nation. In Hillsdale county, Mich., the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance company, a co-operative, was used as the already established group through which to put the hospital plan into operation.

In northern Illinois, the Northern Illinois Hospital Service, serving 11 counties and their small towns, ranging in population from 300 to 1,500, have worked in co-operation with Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions clubs, with women's clubs, PTAs, Veterans of Foreign Wars posts and churches, farm bureaus, home bureaus and granges. As a result in these 11 counties more than 4,500 farm families, representing 18,500 individuals are Blue Cross members.

In North Carolina a great many of the small groups in the small towns are enrolled as combined business groups. This type of enrollment means combining many small businesses into a group, getting 75 per cent or more of the employees in these various small concerns to become members of the Blue Cross. In some of these combined groups, as many as 800 persons join. These groups consist of drug stores, grocery stores, warehouses etc. The FSA has also been active in cooperating with the Blue Cross plans in North Carolina and other states in bringing prepaid hospital care to low income families.

Indicative of the way in which small town and rural America is enlisting under the Blue Cross banner are these facts taken at random from many examples. In one Iowa town of 325 population, 450 75 per cent have enrolled in a hospital care plan and in another town of 4,405, a total of 2,214 or 50 per cent have joined. In one Wisconsin community the local power company acts as collector and remitting agent and the people of the community who have enrolled pay for this insurance along with their monthly electric bills. This town has a population of 1,000 and out of a possible 450 persons employed in the town, 155 have enrolled, there being 105 family contracts and 41 individual contracts.

Such instances could be multiplied indefinitely. From all of which it is evident that rural America is indeed "shrewd buyers and quick to take to something once its value has been proved." As for proving its value, ask the Blue Cross member in New York City who was recently hospitalized for 53 days. His contract covered him for 23 days of one contract year and 28 days of the new year, a total of 51 days. His local hospital bill was $300.55. When he was ready to be discharged from the hospital, he was handed a hospital service credit of $288.30. That meant he had to pay in cash to the hospital only $12.25.

"It's a thrill that comes once in a lifetime," he said. And then, quite naturally, he added, "I think hospital service is a great idea."

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

A REHEARSAL of Frank Sinatra's Wednesday night air show is something to see. Outside the CBS theater the bobby sock brigade waits; even when he's in California they wait; otherwise they'll lose their places in line. Inside, the Voice, be-spectacled, chewing gum, has a swell time clowning with Jerry Lester. But when he rehearses his songs Sinatra settles down to business, working like the conscientious professional that he is. Seeing him then, you get a new slant on this likable young man who has shot to the top in the entertainment field so rapidly. He ought to stay there—if the ardent admirers who lie in wait for him don't kill him first; one girl almost choked him a while ago!

Adolphe Menjou, debonair as ever, has been dashing about New York, just back from bond-selling in Canada. Meeting friends, he talks about that trip, and goes on to discuss, not the RKO picture he's just finished with Sinatra, but the fact that he's going to the South Pacific in November. Like other visiting stars, he was booked knee-deep for radio appearances; there's a shortage of "names" in New York.

C. S. Forester, the famous author who wrote "Captain Horatio Hornblower" and "The Ship," will write the story which Greta Garbo will return to the screen. Producer Lester Cowan engaged him to do a story about fighting sailors, men and women, in the Norwegian merchant marine. Miss Garbo, who hasn't liked other ideas submitted to her, most is in favor of this one.

Don't believe that Penny Singleton is as wacky in real life as she sounds in the title role of the air's "Blondie." She was an established Broadway musical comedy star when she was brought to Hollywood for dramatic and singing roles; before that, she studied journalism at Columbia university. She turns out a children's story occasionally.

Anita Colby returned from a nation-wide chore on behalf of the local power company for getting a room in an overcrowded hotel. "When they'd say they were all sold out," said she, "I'd ask if they didn't have one room that just wasn't made up yet. They always had. And I can honestly say now that I've made beds in some of America's best hotels!"

Barton Yarbrough finally did it. Playing "Doc Leary" in "I Love a Mystery," by Carlton Morse, he did 260 performances without a slip of the tongue. Then, instead of saying "I never believe in sockin' a sockin' man," he said "I never believe in sleepin' a sockin' man."

Bob Burns, radio's "Arkansas Traveler," had to go on a diet for his new picture, "Belle of the Yukon," with Dinah Shore and Gypsy Rose Lee. "Times have changed," remarked Bob. "Twelve years ago I had to diet because I wasn't makin' a picture."

March of Time director Len Lyne and cameraman Bob Navarro were in Ireland just before Great Britain imposed restriction of travel between the two countries. They got in today, in the thousands of feet of film they were being shooting. The result is an up-to-the-minute picture, "The Irish Question," that shows Ireland and the Irish as they are today. It's informative and good entertainment.

Stuart Buchanan, who now heads the Blue Network's script department, was one of the first to see "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" when it reached Broadway for a return engagement. He'd already seen it at least 1,500 times; he was dialogue director when it was made!

ODDS AND ENDS—Don't be fooled by that carnivorous plant you'll see in "Rainbow Island"; reproduced from a photograph, it operates by electricity. The parka worn by Bob Hope in "Road to Utopia" was presented to him by that ex-serviceman who toured Alaska... That ex-serviceman released 100,000 birds by playing the drums on Milton Berle's "Let Yourself Go" program has had two auditions dates, and may land an engagement with a major orchestra soon... The bottom fell out of poultry for Don Ameche the other day when an abandoned wild turkey and his chicken sordidly plunked his prize hens into the bottom of a twelve-foot hole.

Unique Setting for Your Bric-a-Brac

NO MATTER how often you have to move or whether you change from a spacious house to a single room there are certain treasures that will mean home to you. A few books, a piece of china and some perfectly useless but cheering bits of bric-a-brac. By all means take them with you and make an attractive setting for them.

A shadow-box cupboard will do the trick. The one shown here is light and substantial; will lend glamour even to dime store odds and ends, and may be placed on top of a table, a chest of drawers or a desk.

If you do not have a saw to cut the scalloped frame, mark it on plywood and take it to the nearest woodworking shop to have it cut. You may have the straight boards cut where you buy them. Then all you will have to do is to screw them together; tack on the front frame and paint or stain to suit your room color scheme.

NOTE—An actual size pattern for this shadow-box cupboard, list and sizes of all materials; and illustrated directions for making and finishing will be sent for 15 cents. Ask for Pattern 264 and write direct to:

Membership Grows From 500,000 to 14 Million in Seven Years

Protection of Americans and their families against the costs of hospital care was extended to more than 15,000,000 persons in 1943, when 2,600,000 additional participants in the United States and Canada elected to enroll in Blue Cross Plans. This figure is exclusive of 750,000 suspended contracts held by subscribers in the armed forces, who may renew protection upon their return to civilian life.

These facts are revealed by

C. Rufus Rorem, director of the Hospital Service Plan Commission, which co-ordinated the activities and approves the policies of 78 Blue Cross plans located in 25 states and seven Canadian provinces.

The proportion of family dependents enrolled has steadily increased, from 37 per cent in 1937 to the present 64 per cent, thus indicating a growing desire by commercial, agricultural and industrial employers and employees to protect their wives

ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

K. A. Hardy is making boxes. Thousands and thousands of boxes. Not big boxes and little boxes but all the same size. He has orders to just keep on making them until he is told to stop. Something over a thousand a day are being turned out at his place south of town on the Montgomery highway. He has been asked for 12¢ per week, that would be two car loads. But he hasn't reached his peak in production yet. Mr. Hardy says that anyone who says women don't make good employees in his line just don't know what they are talking about. He works nine at present and they are doing the job just as good as a man could do it. Three men because himself complete the staff at present but plans are for an addition to the plant and a large increase in production within the next few days. However, he hasn't forgotten the home trade. He is preparing a side room for his wood working shop and will have a competent assistant there to take care of various and sundry small jobs that need to be done for the town people. Go by and see the efficiency with which these boxes are being turned out. You'll be surprised.

Word comes that our good friend John VanDerwever is on his way home on Thursday. He is stationed now at Camp Carson, Colo.

One of Clanton's widest awake young business men is Leo Thompson. In the past, like the rest of us, he has had a hard time keeping labor at the Clanton Laundry & Dry Cleaning company to maintain 100 per cent premium service, but he has done a good job. Leo has contributed of his time and money to the many causes, and to the various and sundry drives connected with the winning of a war. He is public minded, honest and sincere in all his dealings. We do not as a rule throw roses around carelessly but we think that Leo Thompson is one of Clanton's No. 1 citizens, and is an asset to his town and his county.

Doesn't seem that the picture show is exactly the proper place for all this getting that we see going on there each night. To look at some of the pictures you would think that they were the only people on earth. There are places for everything and we regret that the picture show is not on it—again because it takes our mind off the picture.

After all our English don't always make sense. If you have a fat chance of accomplishing a thing, your chances are slim.

TO THE VOTERS OF CHILTON COUNTY

Dear Editor:

Please allow me a little space to thank the voters of the County who voted for me and I want to say that I really appreciate your support.

Although defeated I made my campaign on clean government and I am proud of one thing. I did not make any promises to get any votes nor did I buy any, so I will have something to say later on.

Yours sincerely,
G. D. Rutherford

A WORD OF THANKS TO THE VOTERS

To the people and voters of Chilton County I take this means to express my greatest thanks and appreciation for the courtesy that was shown me during my campaign for County Commissioner. The people as a whole was sure nice to me for which I am very thankful and I wish to thank again those that voted for me. I am sure if I had been better known I could have made a better race but the election is over and let us all forget the past and put our shoulder to the wheel and put the nominees over and uphold the principles of the Democratic party for I assure you that I hold no ill will toward any one. The people speak and I bow.

Yours for better luck next time.
HARLEY CALLOWAY

MR. W. M. POLK
THANKS VOTERS

To my many friends who voted for me in the primary of last week I wish to say "thank you neighbor." I am very grateful to you and I will, with your assistance, try to continue to conduct myself above criticism that I may be elected, in the November general election, by a splendid majority.

To those of my friends who were obligated to cast their ballot for my opponents I wish to assure you that there is no ill feeling on my part. You were merely exercising the rights given you by our American form of government.

To the many voters who came into our primary for the first time I welcome you and ask that you do all in your power to elect the nominee's.

Sincerely yours,
W. M. Polk

"HE COULDN'T MARRY FIVE"
SAID TO PRODUCE LAUGHS

"A good laugh is good for the soul" And there are at least a hundred good laughs in the three-act comedy, "He Couldn't Marry Five," which is to be given by the Senior Class in the Jemison school auditorium on the evening of May 12 at 8 o'clock. The title of this clever play alone is enough to make one chuckle because it brings to mind all sorts of complications. Well, "He Couldn't Marry Five" more than lives up to its title. It is at the same time laughable and charming, crazy and enjoyable. This is because it is so gay and well-written. Its characters so true to life. It is the type play that appeals to men, women and children alike, so bring the whole family—they'll be grateful to you for having given them one of the most enjoyable evenings of the year when they see, "He Couldn't Marry Five."

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens, affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an Abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

WHY telephones are hard to get

The telephone business is deep in the war and getting deeper all the time.

The farther American forces advance, the more switchboards, wire and telephones they need. And folks at home seem to want more, too.

Since the National Defense program started in 1940, we have supplied the needs of Army, Navy, war producers and most others. In all, Southern Bell has increased the number of telephones in service by over half a million.

The equipment to do this came from reserves that are about used up. No more can be made for civilian use. That's why we can't fill orders as fast as we'd like.

But we're doing all we can to serve as many as possible as soon as possible by—

- Reconditioning and using every facility that will give good service.
- Recovering facilities quickly when service is discontinued.
- Converting one-party lines to serve two or more families wherever possible and necessary.
- Operating central offices beyond their normal capacity.
- Taking extra-good care of equipment that can't be replaced.

If you are one of those who are waiting, we'd like you to know we want your patronage and will take care of your needs at the earliest possible moment.

YEAR AROUND LAYERS PAY BIG PROFITS

By M. R. Glascock
County Agent

Year around layers are profitable to the farm. Spring layers usually fail to pay for the feed they consume.

Poultry feed prices are high, egg prices are low; a large percentage of the layers have gone to the market and others are being sold. Yet, laying hens are now paying a larger profit above feed cost than they were during the same period two years ago.

Egg production this fall and winter will be low—no doubt egg prices will be as high or higher throughout the fall and winter of 1944 than they were in 1943. A good flock of well developed pullets will be profitable this fall and winter.

Green feed, clean grounds, and plenty of fresh water and sunshine are important in the development of strong, high-producing pullets. Plan now to get pullets on open range when they are 7 to 8 weeks old. A good clover range will reduce the feed cost 20 to 35 per cent. Vaccinate birds against fowl pox and treat them for internal parasites before putting them on the range.

Careful management, including a balanced feeding program utilizing green feeds and home produced grains, and following a strict sanitation program are the major factors in determining whether or not good birds will produce a profit. Small flocks not fed and managed for year around production are usually laying

U. S.-British Heavy Bombers Continue Blasting of Nazi Defenses, Railroads; Task Force Hits Jap Base at Truk; 'Riot' Sales Reflect Need for Goods

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Where opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Bougainville—Yanks from 37th division, formerly the Ohio National Guard, go into action behind U. S. tank against Japs infiltrating into their lines on Bougainville in Solomons.

MEATS:

Supply Plentiful

Because of a halt in lend-lease buying, reduced military demands and bulging warehouses, the OPA removed all meats except beef steaks and roasts from rationing.

Even as the OPA acted, packers were being deluged with heavy receipts of hogs, reflecting the tight feed situation recently aggravated by the government's embargo on all private corn sales in 125 midwest counties in an effort to divert 80,000,000 bushels of the grain to industrial processors for war uses. In one day, 20 leading markets received 200,000 hogs compared with 146,000 the previous week and 140,000 a year ago.

After one week of extensive solicitation by county AAA officials, it was announced farmers offered more than 27,000,000 bushels of corn for sale to the government for the sorely pressed processing industry.

OPA's action removed from rationing all cuts of pork, veal and mutton; all beef except the steaks and roasts; beef hamburger and steaks; all kinds of variety meats; sausage; ready-to-eat meats; canned meats and canned fish.

EUROPE:

Invasion Bombardment

Thundering over western Europe, thousands of U. S. and British planes continued their round-the-clock bombardment of Nazi coastal defenses and rail lines feeding them, as Berlin anxiously eyed the heavy concentration of shipping in invasion waters.

As the west rumbled under the crushing bombardments, quiet settled over the long active Russian front, but here, too, the storm reportedly brewed, with the Reds massing forces for an all-out blow at the Germans to coincide with the U. S. and British Nazies.

About 1,100,000 German war arms along the heralded German "Atlantic Wall" under supreme leadership of Marshal Erwin Rommel, but leaving no stone unturned, they were reported by the Netherlands by blasting the dikes and dams holding back the rumbling sea water.

CIVILIAN GOODS:

Scarcity Rule

Reflecting the demand for civilian goods, crowds rushing to buy 1,500 war model alarm clocks in a Chicago department store, smashed display cases and created a mild riot before police were finally summoned to restore order.

Although such riots are not expected to become the rule during the rest of 1944, scarcity of many items is. For instance, a few war model alarm clocks are expected to be produced in the second quarter of this year, and some electric clocks with plastic cases will be available in July.

Baby carriages of prewar construction containing nine pounds of metal will continue to be marketed in limited numbers. Despite increased use of metal in upholstery, the shortage of lumber is expected to hold down production. Electric flatirons should reappear in stock later in the year. No refrigerators but ice-boxes of plasticized wood pulp will remain available.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

BASEBALL: Attendance at major league baseball games is 13 per cent higher than last year, club secretaries report.

ASCAP: Two new members have been admitted to ASCAP (American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers). They are Leopold Stokowski, symphony orchestra director, and Al Trace, band leader, who introduced "Mairzy Doots."

MACARTHUR:

Out of Race

With a return to the Philippines his only ambition, Gen. Douglas MacArthur once and for all put an end to efforts to forward his candidacy for the Republican nomination for president.

Returning to his New Guinea headquarters after the successful assault on Hollandia, General MacArthur declared: "... I request that no action be taken that would link my name in any way with the nomination. . . . I do not covet it, nor would I accept it."

General MacArthur's blunt disapproval quieted the fury caused by the publication of his correspondence with Representative Miller (Neb.) in which the latter urged him to become a silent candidate and he himself commented on domestic conditions.

Typical was Sen. Tom Connally's reaction. Said he: "... I have never believed he would halt in his war services to pursue politics."

PACIFIC:

Truk Lambasted

On their way back from Hollandia where they assisted Gen. Douglas MacArthur's invasion forces, a fleet of U. S. aircraft carriers launched a sustained attack on the big Jap base of Truk and outlying atolls, hammering formidable ground installations.

In India, the British massed strong defensive forces as the Japs continued to press on key junctions dominating the roads to the Assam-Bengal rail line supplying Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's troops, fighting to clear a new overland route to China through mountainous North Burma.

The navy's attacks on Truk and outlying islands which reportedly cost the Japanese 126 planes besides damaging their ground defenses, was a continuation of the heavy assaults on these enemy outposts, standing athwart the overseas route to the Philippines and Asiatic mainland, where stands the bulk of Tojo's armies.

MOSCOW VISIT:

Mission Assailed

One of the strangest and most startling incidents of the war was the sudden appearance of the Rev. Stanislaus Orlemanski, bishop of the Holy Rosary Catholic church of Springfield, Mass., in Moscow, by the side of Marshall Joseph Stalin and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov.

Long a champion of closer Polish relations with Russia, despite the latter's claim to eastern Polish territory, U. S. born Reverend Orlemanski left his diocese without ecclesiastical authority.

While the official Russian press played up Rev. Orlemanski's visit, the reported aim of the priest to sell the idea of collaboration with Moscow to U. S. Poles drew hot fire from some of their prominent leaders. Said John Olejczak, president of the Polish Roman Catholic union: "... Father Orlemanski does not represent any one at all. . . ."

LABOR:

Union Security

Perked by Montgomery Ward and company's persistent opposition to the maintenance of membership clause compelling employees to remain within a union for the life of its contract with a firm, the industry representatives on the War Labor board opened up a fight on the provision.

Asking that the WLB agree to test its power to impose the maintenance of membership clause on employers by taking the case to court, the industry representatives declared:

1. Maintenance of membership restricts a worker's freedom to decide his own union affiliations;
2. Maintenance of membership has yet to be proved a device for stimulating production, and;
3. Maintenance of membership might disturb harmonious relations between labor and capital.

Foremen Strike

Opposed by industry generally on the grounds that foremen properly are a part of management, the question of unionization of foremen came to the front in Detroit's automobile plants.

In the five plants of the Briggs Manufacturing company, 6,000 members of the United Auto Workers staged a two-hour sit-down in support of the (Auto) of 1,000 foremen over demands for recognition of the Foremen's Association of America.

At the Hudson Motor company, an undetermined number of foremen struck in protest against the alleged discharge of a supervisor without a hearing, but the firm continued production despite their absence.

OLD WARRIOR:

Comes Back

As 90-year-old Jacob S. Coxey stood on the steps of the nation's capitol in Washington, D. C., in a faded blue suit and high old-fashioned collar with a black string (i.e., there were no memories of his 1892 celebrated march to the same site at the head of 1,000 unemployed in 1894).

Then, Coxey had intended to petition congress to issue interest-free government money for erection of public works, but police landed him and his followers to the outskirts of the capitol.

Fifty years had not changed Coxey's views. As he appeared in Washington, D. C., this time in connection with his attendance at the 36th annual convention of the Hoboes of America, he again shouted for government issuance of interest-free money instead of dependence upon the private banking system for currency, provided through its purchase of U. S. Bonds.

NEUTRALS:

Curb Axis Business

Responding to U. S. and British pressure to curb shipments of tungsten to Germany, Spain agreed to limit deliveries of this vital metal, hardening ore to the Nazis to 20 tons monthly during May and June and 40 tons monthly thereafter.

As a result of the agreement which also included the custer of all German agents in the Gibraltar region, the U. S. and Britain pledged to resume shipments of 48,000 tons of bulk oil and 15,000 tons of packaged petroleum products monthly to Spain.

U. S. and British pressure on Turkey to stop increased chrome shipments to Germany resulted in a temporary suspension of deliveries pending review of the request, but Sweden has held out against Allied demands for termination of its lucrative ball-bearing trade with the Nazis.

SUPREME COURT:

Can't Tax U. S.

In a 7 to 2 decision read by Justice Jackson, the U. S. Supreme court ruled that government-owned property is not taxable, regardless of whether assessments are made directly against the government or its lessees.

The court's opinion was handed down in a case where Allegheny county, Pa., had placed a higher valuation upon a gunmaker's real estate because of the factory on which it housed and contained government equipment used in manufacturing operations.

Declaring the county's procedure amounted to placing a general property tax on government-owned equipment with resulting higher costs to the government for defraying the gunmaker's increased tax payments, the court said that actually the assessment was made against the machinery and not against the real estate.

AUTOS

There are only about 47,000 new passenger automobiles on hand, the Office of Price Administration reports. At the beginning of rationing, there were 532,000, most of which have been sold to purchasers in war essential activities.

Explaining the policy of holding tightly to the small number still remaining an OPA representative said, "It is essential that some new cars be made available as long as possible to take care of highly important services."

PAUL IN THESSALONICA

LESSON TEXT: Acts 17:1-4; 1 Thessalonians 2:1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT: Rejoice always; pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks. — 1 Thessalonians 5:16-18.

Strong, active, missionary-minded churches do not just "happen." They are the result of the preaching of a true and powerful message by a faithful and sacrificial messenger. Other factors enter in, but these are the fundamentals.

Paul's ministry at Thessalonica, which is described in Acts 17 and explained in 1 Thessalonians 2, reveals what should be preached and what kind of a preacher is needed. Perhaps some dead or unsuccessful church may learn the secret today and come to new life for Christ.

1. The Message—Christ the Saviour (Acts 17:1-4).

Paul had already met the varying lot of both persecution and acceptance, and had now come to Thessalonica, a large and important city in Macedonia, where he had a lengthy ministry and established a strong church.

What was the message which so signally succeeded in this great strategic center? Well, it was not (as some modern preachers in large cities would seem to think) a series of social, political, or literary discourses. Paul preached Christ. He reasoned with them and presented the Saviour (v. 3) as One who was—

1. Dead for our sin. These people were like us in that they needed a solution for their sin problem. There were doubtless other questions which Paul might have discussed, but he wisely went to the root of their difficulty and showed them "that Christ must needs have suffered."

Without the death of Christ there is no salvation for any man. Although the shedding of blood can there be remission of sin (Heb. 9: 22). Paul had no part in the folly of a "bloodless gospel"—as though there were any such gospel.

It was not enough that Jesus died, marvelous as that is in our sight. For many a man has died for his convictions, but none has been held of the grave. He rose the victorious Redeemer.

3. Declared to be the Christ. He is more than a man, more than a great and noble thinking system of ideas. He is God's anointed One, Himself divine—and our Lord.

Thus Paul presented to the Jews their Messiah, "the Man of Sorrows" (Isa. 53), whose resurrection declared Him to be the Son of God with power (Rom. 1:4), their Redeemer and Lord. Blessed results followed such preaching (v. 4).

2. Christ the Lord—Approved of God (1 Thess. 2:1-12).

Sometimes a man with a true message largely nullifies its value by the manner in which he presents it.

1. He was faithful (vv. 1-6). One of the great temptations facing the one who is a preacher or teacher of God's Word is the fear of men, cause him to adjust his message, to use a bit of flattery, to please men.

Paul was "bold in our God" (v. 2), not trying to deceive or mislead anyone. "Be 'dear' to the Lord's approval" (v. 4), not trying to make money for himself or gain standing with men by smooth words (v. 5), and not claiming a high position or authority over men (v. 6).

2. He was affectionate (vv. 7-12). How often those who are faithful and bold in preaching the truth ruin the effect of their work by being harsh and unkind. Here is a lesson many of us need to learn.

To be gentle (v. 7) a man must be strong. The cardinal quality of a strong Christian should be that he is a gentleman, or she a gentlewoman. If not, there is not real strength in the life.

Paul gave not only a message, he gave himself—his very soul (v. 8). The people to whom he ministered were "dear" to him. The pastor who looks down at his congregation with hardness, and perhaps hatred for some individual, needs to read this passage and find Paul's secret of success.

He labored with his hands to support himself (v. 9), lest anyone think he was a burden to them. Let no one think that this means that a preacher not worthy of support. Paul himself declares that the laborer is worthy of his hire (Luke 10:7). But it does show Paul's fine spirit of devotion and sacrifice.

3. He was unblamable (vv. 10-12). Holy in his life before God, Paul was ready to live righteously before men, and thus to stand unblamable before them and before his Lord. This integrity is a life worthy in the sight of God (v. 12).

In other words, the preacher was able to say to his listeners, "My life shows you what I mean by my preaching." The true preacher of the gospel will be satisfied to be a signpost, pointing a way in which he does not walk.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Christopher Columbus is credited with bringing first reports of rubber to the civilized world, but rubber rollers found among Mayan ruins lead some scientists to believe that rubber items were in use in the eleventh century. Rubber, both wild and plantation, grows best in areas 10 degrees either side of the equator.

The production of one complete large bomber tire takes as much time as does the making of several truck tires, or up to 60 passenger car tires of the most popular size. The demand for large tires is severely straining the production facilities of the industry.

Just a few easy-to-crochet medallions joined together make this cool-as-a-breeze eol and bag set. Use any color straw yarn to highlight any costume.

Household Hints

To avoid needle marks when shortening a raincoat, use adhesive tape as a hem binder instead of sewing. To lengthen it later, just remove the adhesive tape.

A piece of velvet or corduroy placed in the heel of your shoe will make your stockings wear longer.

Dip your measuring cup or spoon in scalding hot water just before measuring molasses. You'll find the molasses will run out easily.

The clothesline can be cleaned by wrapping it around the washboard and scrubbing it with a brush and soapsuds.

If you have any made-up starch left after washing, use it on the linoleum. It lends a gloss and the floor stays clean longer.

Keep a small box near your laundry tubs. You'll find it convenient to hold the buttons, snaps and other pieces that may come off clothes during the washing process.

When mending woollens, a thread drawn from the hem or side will make a neat and inconspicuous darn. Otherwise, use a mercerized thread in a matching shade. Darn on the right side. Do not use a knot as there is no strain on the material.

Why don't you make a vestee with three jabots that button on for quick change?

MISSISSIPPI SUPERINTENDENTS STUDY LOCAL SCHOOL
TRANSPORTATION

Last Monday morning at 7:30 o'- clock a group of five school superintendents from various counties in Mississippi arrived in Clanton for the purpose of making a study of school bus operation in Chilton County. Local school officials had not been notified of the visit presumably for the purpose of seeing Chilton County school buses in daily operation without preparation for visitors.

The Mississippi superintendents were interested in studying county-owned fleets and they had been directed to Chilton County by the Alabama State Department of Education.
After observing Chilton County buses on the roads, at school, and at service centers, the group of visiting superintendents expressed the following conclusions about the local system:

1 Bus transportation in Chilton County is much more efficient than any found in Mississippi.

2 Chilton County is hauling students much cheaper than the state of Mississippi.

3 The behavior of Chilton County students while on buses and while getting on and off buses is much better than that of children in Mississippi counties.

4 Chilton County buses have had better care than any fleet observed by the visiting group.

5 The organization of the Chilton County transportation system is very effective.

The group of superintendents who visited the county Monday have planned to send their transportation employees to the county later in the summer to make a detailed study of school bus operation with the idea of using many of the methods employed by local school officials.

Sun suits, luncheon sets, aprons, quilt linings and pillow cases are among uses for bleached feed and sugar sacks.

METRO's going to do big things the week of June 22nd, in celebration of the organization's twentieth birthday. Their first big picture was "The Big Parade"; their thousandth, now being shown, is "The White Cliffs," starring lovely Irene Dunne. During anniversary week practically every movie theater in the nation will show some Metro picture—a short, a newsreel or a feature. At the studio there'll be a ceremony honoring those who have served the company for 20 years. And a coast-to-coast broadcast will feature every star under contract to the studio. King Vidor's "America" and "Dragon Seed," with Katharine Hepburn, will feature in the celebration.

Chili Williams, model now under contract to RKO, is too popular for the good of her bank account. One photograph in a weekly magazine brought her 40,000 requests from servicemen for pin-up pictures. Think what'll happen after they see her in "Having Wonderful Crime"!

When the temporary chairman of the Republican national convention calls the party delegates to order, the National Broadcasting company will have completed six months of preparation; for six years they'll handle both the big political conventions.

A program of real importance will originate over about 500 radio stations this month; it's "The Life of Premier and Field Marshal Jan C. Smuts of South Africa." The South African Broadcasting corporation at Johannesburg made a dramatization in 13 episodes, and the discs were flown to New York and there reprocessed into master recordings. The series begins with the discovery of diamonds and gold in South Africa, tells the legendary exploits of the famous field marshal, ends with the Union of South Africa as one of the United Nations.

Relatives and friends in Wadsworth, N. C., of Pvt. Rowland S. Pruett had heard nothing of him since he was reported critically ill in an Italian hospital—until they heard his voice when he spoke from Algiers on the Allie Joe-Franklin-Carle show. His wife and mother were called out of prayer meeting by friends in time to hear his last few words on the broadcast, which later was done over for them by the local station.

Maybe it was because he was kidnapped at the age of three months, or perhaps it's because of his appearance in a mystery play when he was three; Frank Readick doesn't know, but he's been living a profitable life of crime for some time. He played the title role in "The Shadow" for eight years; he's the villain in "The Crime Doctor," "Gangbusters," "Mr. District Attorney," and other air shows, including "Portia Faces Life."

Gen. H. H. Arnold, commanding the army air forces, recently wrote the president of Paramount expressing his appreciation of the company's wide distribution of the "Memphis Belle." There's a picture that no one can afford to miss. It's a four-reel Technicolor documentary film dealing with an American bomber's mission over Germany, and "superb" and "thrilling" are much too tame a description of it.

"Double or Nothing," radio's oldest quiz show, is working hand in hand with the movie. Frank Foreman, John Reed King and Frank Foreman went to Colorado Springs for the first showing of "Buffalo Bill"; right after that, the quiz show went to Philadelphia for the grand opening of "Mark Twain." Now all they need is some more bigger and better movies, with celebrities to appear on their show.

ODDS AND ENDS—"Girl of the Limberlost," made once by RKO, once by Monogram, will be remade by Columbia, starring Jeff Donnell. ... W. C. Fields has been chosen to play the villain in "The Crime Doctor," now in action against the enemy; seems when everything goes wrong they gaze at his picture and break out in laughter. ... Hollywood camera of trained shepherds dogs have been taking them to RKO for tests—once will play the second most important role in "The Pumpkin Shell." ... Don Ameche has been used to serve on President Roosevelt's Committee for Italian Relief. ... Constance Moore's baby can call Mrs. Cary Grant godmother.

PAUL IN CORINTH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 18:1-4; 1 Corinthians 15:1-4.
GOLDEN TEXT—But now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love.—1 Corinthians 13:13.

Who is a Christian? One might answer in a number of ways. He is one who has been saved by the redeeming grace of Jesus Christ. He is one who seeks to live a life in accord with the will of God. He is a witness for God, and so on. But the answer that the whole world understands is a life in which the redeeming love of Christ begets a true love for one's fellow man.

1. An Example of Christian Love (Acts 18:1-4).

Teaching and preaching are God's ordained way for presenting the truth. They are effective, but only when done by one whose life exemplifies the truth. In his letter to the Corinthians Paul gives the greatest discussion of love known to the world, but before he wrote it he had lived that truth before them. The Holy Spirit spoke through him of love, because He had already lived the truth out in the preacher.

Two things appear here: Paul was:

1. Working (vv. 1-3). The world's most distinguished missionary and preacher had arrived in Corinth. Where was the welcoming committee of local dignitaries? There was none. Whose comfortable home would receive him? None was offered. Paul was the lot of the pioneer for Christ. He had to hunt up a Jewish fellow craftsman and go to work to earn his bread.

Paul, like every other Jewish boy, had learned a trade, something he could do with his hands. He was a tent and sail maker, and was not ashamed to work at his trade. A more recent follower of Christ put it thus: "My business is to preach the gospel, but I pack meat to pay the expenses."

But notice that Paul did not let this work become the chief thing. As the Lord prospered him he did not decide to "go back into business." No, for his real business was:

2. Witnessing (vv. 4). He began, as was his custom, in the synagogue, presenting Christ to Jews and Greeks. The Jews opposed him (see v. 6), and then Paul addressed himself to the Gentiles.

God prospered that ministry and encouraged Paul by a vision, assuring him that the Lord had "much people" (v. 10) in that wicked city. The love of Christ in Paul thus shone forth as a light in the darkness of sin and superstition.

II. An Explanation of Christian Love (1 Cor. 13).

This is one of the outstanding chapters of all Scripture. Its magnificent discussion of the greatest of all themes has drawn forth many choice expositions.

The thought centers around the emptiness of the loveless life, the glory of the life of love, and the eternal unchangeable power of love. We gather it up in three words:

1. Indispensable (vv. 1-3). Without love man's attainments are empty. He may become an orator with a "heavenly" gift of speech, but unless he truly loves, his elegant and persuasive talk is just a meaningless noise. How true!

One may also have marvelous gifts of prophetic insight and a wonder-working faith, and find that it is all a vain and empty experience without love. Our world leaders could well study that verse just now.

Sacrificial interest in the needs of mankind is a fine trait in man, but must have the love of Christ in it or it is too selfish. As we think of feeding the hungry nations of the earth, let us not forget to make it worth while by doing it in Christian love.

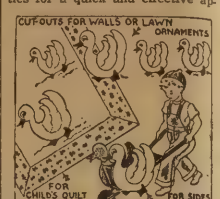

2. Incomparable (vv. 4-7). The standard for the life of a Christian is a very high one; in fact, it is impossible of attainment apart from the grace and power of Christ. Naturally, we are prone to be impatient, proud, suspicious, resentful, etc. The new nature in Christ is just the opposite, for love loves.

Note that phrase "endureth all things." It is hard in these days when it is so hard to keep going, or as someone said, "to keep on keeping on." Love endures all things.

Happy, the Duck, and Her Pretty Ducklings

HAPPY is a most versatile bird. She is a little over 13 inches high and her ducklings are about eight and nine inches high. They may cut her and the babies out of scraps of wood for toys, weather vanes or to add an amusing touch to your lawn or garden. Happy and the ducklings also make a jolly wall decoration for a kitchen, bathroom or children's room.

Anyone who likes needlework will immediately see the possibilities for a quick and effective applique design for a child's quilt with white or yellow ducks splashing on a blue background, bright orange bills and feet and a flowered border all around the pond.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared an actual-size pattern of this gay duck and her ducklings with full directions and color guide for cutting, painting, stenciling, for applique work. Complete directions for making the wheelbarrow shown in this sketch are also included with pattern. The number is 236 and price is 15 cents. Address:

Porch Suppers Furnish Tonic For Appetites

Serve the family quickly prepared cool drinks made with flavored powders. They're economical and can be made in a flash by any member of the family.

Save Used Fat!

Wise homemakers will plan porch suppers for warm evenings. Not only will the family of colorful vegetables enjoy the gay informality of the porch but the changing of mealtime locale just naturally will pep up lagging appetites that warm weather brings.

Checked cloths in bright colors will carry out the simplicity of theme that is customary when you "rough it" on the porch, or if you have them, fringed cloths or bric-a-brac edged ones will do fine.

Centerpieces of fruit from the orchard or big bowls of colorful vegetables will dress up the table. Fat candles in squat glasses will add a homey touch to supper, and the family will love to linger over the table just chatting until the last candle burns low. All this promotes a nice social atmosphere which we call home, and that you'll agree is important!

Keep to the simple and sensible with food as you try to have foods combined on one platter so there aren't too many trips to the kitchen. Meat and vegetables can go on one platter, salad in a bowl, rolls in a basket and dessert on one plate, everyone dishing out for himself in "help yourself" style.

Barbecued chicken is an appetite

 - 1/2 teaspoon pepper
 - Dash of cayenne
 - Pinch of thyme
 - Chicken, cut in pieces

Combine ingredients in order given, stirring until salt is dissolved.
Let stand several hours or overnight.
Brush over chicken just before broil-ing. Broil in a hot oven 20 to 30 minutes, turning frequently, and basting again with sauce, until chicken is cooked thoroughly. If sauce is kept for more than overnight, remove garlic clove.

To retain the red color of beets, boiling.

GROUND GRIP TIRES

The Tire That Pulls Better Longer

FIRESTONE traction bars are built into the tread of a farm tractor tire to serve just one purpose. That purpose is to give traction.

Because the traction bar is the source of pulling power of tractor tires, it is obvious that greater traction bar length gives greater traction. By the same token, a shortened traction bar design, such as the broken center, gives less traction.

Firestone Ground Grip Tractor Tires provide up to 215 extra inches of traction bar length per tractor at no extra cost.
And the bars are joined in the center to form a powerful, triplebraced, leakproof traction unit.

That's why farmers prefer tires built by Firestone, the pioneer and pacemaker in putting the farm on rubber.

FOLK & THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

We hope that C. Reese Mullins was not hitting at us this week when he came out with his letter about the dishonest election. You know, we handled the absentee ballots, and of course we do know they were handled absolutely honest. If the smallest amount of crookedness had gone on in the absentee box we would have immediately let it be known and refused to handle them. We do not believe in crooked elections. We have no respect whatsoever for anyone who would sell his vote. The sooner the citizens of this or any other county learn that a vote is not something to go out on election day and bargain and sell, the quicker we will have the choice of the people in our public offices. Money enough has not been made to buy our vote. It is only one, but it's ours, and we are going to cast it as we see fit and not how some politician wants us to cast it. Honestly we do believe that the election held May 2nd here was as without corruption as an election can be held. Everyone of course cannot win. Before a candidate starts a race he should ask himself, whether or not he can take a loss. If he is a poor loser and it would hurt his pride too much to be defeated, then politics is no place for him. He should stay out of it. At any rate the people have spoken and the least that the defeated candidates can do is to help elect the winning candidate as is their sworn promise and duty.

James (Gabby) Tiffin left Tuesday night for Memphis where he will join the Chattanooga Baseball team. They are playing a series with the Crackers. Gabby received a telegram Tuesday morning from Manager A. C. (Scrappy) Moore that his services were desired at once. Gabby tells us that catchers are hard to get and the ones that the Lookouts have are in the dugout from injuries. He played a while with the Barons you know, but was retired for a catcher with more experience. Gabby says it may be for the season and it may be just until the injured players get well—you can't tell about this baseball.

Down the street today we heard Spud Calloway say "hello, fat boy," to Joe Campbell. That's the height of something or other. Spud is no small man himself. This reminds us the reason fat people are always in such good humor—it takes them so long to get mad clear through.

Katherine Bryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bryan, has been appointed associate editor of the Alabama College publication, "The Alabamian." Our deepest sympathy goes out to Katherine in her misfortune. May all her troubles be typographical.

One of our best friends told us this and we can't call his name or he might beat the el out of us. He was sitting on his porch with his wife one night when a truck driven by a woman broke down in front of his house. The woman alighted from the cab, accompanied by another woman, and started cursing terribly. Said my friend to his wife, "Now if a man was driving that truck and cursed in front of you like that, I would go out and beat el out of him. What are you going to do?"

We had a good attendance Sunday for Sunday school although there is room for improvement. Some were absent on account of singings at other places. Rev. There will also be a working at the church Friday to fix the seats different and put some more windows in. Anybody interested please come and bring some tools to work with.

INTERESTING LETTER RECEIVED BY

MRS. S. R. WOOLLEY

(Editors Note: Since there is a concerted effort to enlist as many young girls into the WAVES as possible to replace men for active duty, we thought this letter would prove interesting and beneficial to mothers who have daughters already in the service of their country or are contemplating doing so. Thanks to Mrs. Woolley for its use.)

May 8, 1944

Mrs. S. R. Woolley
414 Highland Avenue
Montevallo, Alabama

Dear Mrs. Woolley:

May I take this opportunity to tell you that we are happy to have your daughter Janie about this Station. Her services to the WAVES are a definite asset to the Navy and to the Nation, and you should be proud of the contribution she is making to the whole war effort.

With your daughter away from home, you are naturally concerned about all the influences which affect her comfort, health and welfare. You naturally wonder what her new life is like. In order to acquaint you with the Naval Air Station and some of its history, I am taking the liberty of sending you the enclosed booklet.

Be assured that everything has been done that is possible to make living conditions wholesome and pleasant for all the WAVES serving under this Command. The barracks are clean and comfortable, and are kept up to the usual high Navy standards of cleanliness and good order. Menus are carefully planned to include all proper food values and both the men and women seem to thrive very well. Provisions for the care of the health of our personnel are better and more elaborate than usually available in civilian life. Our hospital, infirmary, and dental offices are completely equipped and are staffed with the best of doctors. Every case of illness no matter how slight, is given immediate attention.

Every effort is made to provide a full program of recreation and entertainment. In addition to free movies every night, there are, on the station, numerous recreation rooms and lounges, a music room, bowling alleys, swimming pools, tennis courts, archery ranges, gymnasiums, canteens and many other sources of amusement.

Religious services for Protestants, Catholics and Jews are conducted regularly by a capable staff of Navy Chaplains, and participation of all personnel is urged, though not made compulsory.

In short, we believe that we have provided ample facilities for the comfort and contentment of our crew, and that we actually have a happy crew, both of sailors and WAVES. You can help us maintain this spirit of contentment in several ways. First, write letters to your daughter in the service as often as possible, and make your letter cheerful, tell her all the pleasant things that happen to the family and her friends. If you are proud of the part she is playing, don't hesitate to tell her so. One thing you can do, and this is very important: Please do not be over-anxious about having your daughter home with you when minor problems develop within the family. If a serious emergency such as a grave illness should arise, ask your local Red Cross worker to request an emergency leave. It will be granted willingly if the need is genuine. But wait until the need is urgent before you make such a request, and do not pass on to your daughter any needless anxieties about the problems at home. Leave her mind free to concentrate on the job she has here. Just as her services are badly needed by her country. By helping her do her job efficiently and cheerfully, you will help win this war sooner.

Very truly yours,
H. B. Grow,
Captain, USNR
Commanding Officer.

Everyone come back to church next Sunday and Sunday night, and bring someone with you. Keep praying for our boys and girls in the service.

AN AMERICAN DECISION

The time certainly has not come for us to begin to evaluate how much this war has cost, and will cost us. We can not dare now attempt to translate in dollars and cents how much the loss of lives of hundreds of thousands of Americans will impair our national post-war economy. We must not try to prepare now an itemized statement of lend-lease. We need not think of balancing the value of the Russian offensives with the sweat it took to produce and ship to the U. S. S. R. nine and one-half million tons of supplies and 8,000 airplanes. These are all superficial things—to those who have any conception of what thousands of our men have gone through in this war, and what millions more must go through before we may read, emblazoned on each and every newspaper in the land, that immortal word, "PEACE."

But, submit, there are many men in high places who are already attempting to prepare an evaluation of what this war has cost us, and what we should demand at the end. There is no doubt that the rest of the world will owe us a tremendous debt, and that, in all fairness, our demands, based on considerations of security and position, should not be meek and secondary to the demands of Russia, Great Britain and China. But this attitude will not take only that form. It will be reflected in our attitude to win and then withdraw from every-thing that will require our energies in the rest of the world. The people, naturally will want to bring their soldiers, sailors, and Marines home. And the soldiers, sailors and Marines will want to come home as quickly as possible.

But therein can lie our gravest mistake. It can make us, the victor, become in a short space of time the defeated.

This is the attitude of some in high places, and of many who aspire to high places. I do not blame them. The blame rests on the mass of the people. Just as our general and our admiral were asleep at Pearl Harbor only because we were asleep at home, so can the men in authority mistake our attitude at home for a desire to quit international affairs. The ultimate failure of any peace proposal would rest squarely at the end of this war upon the shoulders of the American people, just as it rested solidly and unequivocally upon them at the end of the last war. Wilson was not defeated at the end of the last war. No small congressional bloc defeated the League of Nations in America. The desire of the American people to forget it all, to begin normal life here in the states again, was the cause of the defeat of Wilson and House and the one idea which may have preserved what Chamberlain fancied to call "Peace in our time"—as if our generation had some special sanction on the ultimate aim of society.

But the people must at the end of this war use their heads, not their hearts. They must use them now, too, while there is still time to curb the impending trend of half-hearted post-war effort.

I have a reason for saying this. I think it is potent. And I firmly believe it should be the foremost thought in the minds of all of us, whether soldier, civilian, politician, or the rarest of all beings—a statesman. My generation is the blood and tears of the men who have suffered for us in every corner of the earth. If we fail at the end of this war to finish the task they began, we shall have, deservedly so, the eternal damnation of all history.

There are many of us who may not ever go over seas to serve. There are many of us who may go overseas but will serve at airfields and posts behind the lines. There are many of us who will go to the front lines, but who will return uninjured. There are many who will be injured, but who will return. And there are hundreds of thousands of civilians who have deprived themselves of their personal privileges to work in war industry. All these people will have made sacrifices commensurate with the demands. But they were called upon to fulfill. But theirs will have been a small sacrifice, almost insignificant one, compared to those made by the men who died in New Guinea, in Italy, in New Britain, at Rabaul, on the Admiralty, over Germany, and in the other areas in which we fight.

This belief has recently been confirmed. I have had the privilege of hearing and of talking to men who have been fighting. These men don't have to tell you that they've seen action—you know it by their nervousness, their tenseness, their gratitude for being back home.

I have heard a Warrant Officer speak. He had been a gunner in the Philippines when the war broke out.

Since that time, he had served over 120 missions against the enemy—more than twice the number required now before an airman can return home. He assisted in the escape of General MacArthur from Mindanao. And he once had to pilot his plane home—because the pilot, the bombardier, the navigator, the radio man, and all the other gunners had been killed in the flight. No ghost ship of literature can compare with that plane—as the Warrant Officer only had to step through a shell hole to get off the wing.

I have talked to a ribbon-bedecked Master Sergeant who had been with the Flying Tigers in China. He had served for more than four years, and he, too, had over 100 missions. He didn't have to be wounded to have seen his crew members wounded or killed.

I once talked to a Technical Sergeant who had been in Great Britain, who had completed his necessary commission twice because he wanted to get back to the states. It was no fun for him to have a 20 millimeter shell go through his helmet.

And in my class at Loyd Field are Two Captains and a First Lieutenant. One had been in North Africa and Sicily, one had completed his 300 flying hours in the Southwest Pacific, and the other had finished his missions over Germany. These men do not talk freely, but when they do speak, the listener becomes again convinced that Sherman was understanding the possibilities of war.

The things that these men endured—and the things that they saw happen to other men—are not for little children's bed-time story books. But they are for us to ponder before we make any rash decisions in our relations with other nations. They should be the driving impetus to make us carry out our highest and noblest post-war plans, no matter how difficult and time they may require. Of course we want to return to normal, but we dare not before we return to our responsibility to those who fought and died to make the world receiving of our better energies.

This is our duty to our fighting men and to ourselves. It deserves our thoughtful consideration.

LETTER TO MRS.

J. M. BRYANT FROM HER SON AT CASSINO

Dear Mother and Dad:

The censor says it's okay to write about the battle of Cassino. Most of what I can write, the reporters have written.

Those correspondents had lots of material out of that, for Cassino was pretty tough.

As you know, the town itself sits on the side of a mountain and is across a valley with a river in front of it. The valley was nicknamed "Purple Heart Valley" for the Heines had built "zeroed" in. I sometimes wonder how the dough-fetters ever crossed the thing. (They did only at night.) Being in the artillery, I didn't cross the valley myself, but I could see it and did see it for plenty of days. So near and yet so far.

The going was tough there all the way, but it really was tough after they bombed the Abbey on Monastery Hill. The Germans were in there before the bombing, but our bombing was no good they had to send reinforcements up to hold it, and it made it even stronger. Cassino itself we fired lots of rounds into and made rubble out of the town, but the Heines learned from the Russians at Stalingrad to make a real fortress out of places like that. They did. Our troops fought thru, inch by inch, rock by rock, it was a real slug-fest, with the Germans determined to hold.

I couldn't really say why it wasn't taken, and I know you are wondering... After all, it's our first set-back since Kassarine Pass in North Africa in 1942. But it wasn't set-back. We do hold most of the town. It was just that it was pretty awful to see. I guess it wasn't really worth it right then. Any way it's over now, and Cassino, I know, will be one for the history books.

The thing I'm so proud of is the way we stuck it out there and gave them back a lot more than we had to take. There's an awful lot of dead Germans that won't bother us when we get in to Berlin again. Things are rocking along in the same old one-two-we go to see a show now and then, still get our P. X. and an occasional Coke. Irving Berlin's show, "This is the Army" is here and hope to get to see it.

Love Always

TOMATO WORM CONTROL MEANS MORE TOMATOES

For best production, tomato growers should begin thinking now about tomato worm control.

The most effective and economical way to control these worms, says Lyle Brown, extension horticulturist, is to use a poison cornmeal made by mixing 10 pounds of cornmeal and one pound of either cryolite, calcium arsenate or lead arsenate. This should be thoroughly mixed and put on the plants dry at the rate of 50 pounds per acre about once a week after tomatoes begin blooming.

Moral Echoes

D W Haskew, D D

One dozen Boysen berry plants were delivered to my house. My instructions told me to set them out and build a trellis for the vines to run upon. This was done, and soon the vines put forth and started to running. They paid the trellis no mind and I had to go there at least twice a week and train those vines to climb the trellis wires. Should I fail to do this regularly, I would find my berry vines down on the ground running—hither and thither. This is a picture of child life in almost every home. The Christian ideals compose the trellis on which every child should be trained to climb. They will not climb these ideals without training. Leave a child to its own self and soon it will be down on the ground. It takes careful training to keep a child growing along the trellis of right living.

The world is composed mostly of only three kinds of people, the fits, the misfits, and the counterfits. Find God for those who are the fits. Thank them where you will and they drop into the scheme of things and make good. Misfits never fail to make trouble. They are made up of angles and dispositions that make them into round pegs that try to fit a square hole. They never measure up to a high standard of success. The counterfit class are those who are mentally cut on the bias, and who imagine that they can fool an entire world, just because they are able to fool themselves. Here is no need and no value in them on the market of life. Examine yourself and see if you are a fit, a misfit, or a counterfit.

It was pitiful to see the demented man lifting the hammer and letting it fall. Listen my friends, for a man to knock, it takes no brains at all. My neighbor had a dog and that dog did nothing but howl. What about the real character and the standard of that man who does nothing but growl? We tried to use a mule that did nothing but kick. Do not be deceived, we have to deal with folks who are wise at this same trick. So when the knocker, the growler and the kicker—the fault-finder, large and small, go into action, they need no brains, no sense—just gall. This world has no more useless people in it than those who knock, those who growl and those who kick. It does not take religion, sense or character to pull this trick.

I heard a young married woman say that she wanted to get into society. That was rather ambitious on her part, but after looking her over I decided that she had what it would take. Two years later I saw this young matron sitting in a drug store with a cigarette between her painted lips, a bottle of beer in one hand; while she held the chain of a poodle dog in the other hand. From what I can learn through observation, there are many who think that this is society. I had a pastor who referred to a "better social order" twenty-seven times in one sermon. If what I saw in the woman who sat in the drug store is society, then that preacher is right in clamoring for a better social order. Let me tell you who are the people today that we are to be found in real society: That woman who has a cooking vessel in one hand, a Bible in the other, and a sweet babe nestling close, that woman is in society. It is the counterfit society that is damning the world today.

One beautiful Spring morning I stepped out of my back door, and I saw a ragged little boy standing at the garbage can, with some of the waste in his hands. Just a short distance away there was a pear tree in full bloom, and on its limbs sat two Red birds with their feathers glistening in the sunlight. The ragged child, pinched with hunger, pointed his finger toward the pear tree and the birds and said, "Doctor, look; Aren't those Red birds in that pear tree beautiful?" I looked as if I was ordered to do so by the hungry child, and there was real beauty in that direction, but my heart went out to that child clad in rags and yet who admired the beautiful. He was from the lower strata of society, and yet he was moved by the beautiful. There is always hope for anyone who will respond to the pretty things of life.

I was standing by the railroad track and a big double header came rolling by loaded with soldiers for the battle front. The engine in front was shocking out its steam, ringing its bell and blowing its whistle. It seemed to make the most of the noise and got all the attention. Just behind that engine was another that was steamed up and pulling with power, but it was not making so much noise and not many saw it when it went by. This engine was just as necessary to the speed of that train as the front engine, but it made little noise and received but little attention. Quietly it performed its task. We have seen people going down the road of life, making a great noise and gaining much attention, and then we have seen them going along quietly. Often have we felt that we were not appreciated because we had but little attention. Blessed is that one who can be the second engine in a double header and do his work without making so much noise. After all, there is no special merit to be found in attention. Let the other fellow blow his whistle and shoot his steam, but you be that soul that goes along in a quiet way.

We were out fishing in deep water and discovered that our boat was drifting with the incoming tide. The anchor was thrown out and the iron grates went down almost to the bottom, but it did not hold. The marksman is shooting at the bullseye and he almost hits it, but he fails in doing so. How much merit is there in appearing when it is almost the likeness of the one designed in the painting, and yet it is not like him. What is there to that one who reaches so high in morality and yet he is short in spirituality? Many are almost Christians. The incomplete character is tragic. There will be some at the judgment who will be almost saved, but they will be lost. Better have your character line long enough to anchor your soul in the ideals of Jesus Christ. It is not morality, but spirituality that counts.

One afternoon we were crossing St. Andrews bay in a small launch. Some two miles away a summer squall appeared on the water and the bay was beaten into white caps. The arm of that squall seemed to be reaching out for us and I became very much afraid. With great anxiety I inquired of the pilot, "Do you think that this little boat can go through that storm?" The man at the wheel was not frightened in the least and replied, "Why sir, that squall will never touch us. It is headed in the opposite direction." Sure enough, it spent its force on the shore far away. Often do we become frightened at things that are playing all around us. Seemingly the storms are reaching out cruel hands to engulf us and we wonder if our little craft can go through the storm. About ninety storms out of every hundred, are going from us and not toward us. Even if the storm should come to us, the Man of Galilee is in the storm, the same as He is in our calm. Hear Him say, "It is I, be not afraid."

SERICEA SHOWS RAPID GROWTH LAST TEN DAYS

Sericea, held back by late frosts has grown rapidly the last ten days, and most of it will be right for cutting within the next ten days. Some of the older stands on the better sites should be cut by the end of this week to obtain best quality of hay.

Farmers, like Charlie Childress of Pleasant Grove Community and Leon Mims near Cedar Grove, find that it handled sericea successfully, find that it should be cut when "the plants are about 12 inches high. At this stage of growth the proportion of leaf to stem is high, the stems are more edible and retain the leaves well under proper handling."

Sericea has a lower water content than the annual plants usually grown for hay and so requires faster handling. In clear weather it should remain in the swath only long enough to wilt. Usually it should be windrowed not more than an hour after cutting. Cut and windrowed in the morning it may be placed in the barn loose late in the afternoon of the same day, and should be if it is not to be baled. It may be baled from windrow in afternoon of next day after cutting, or in morning of second day after dew is off. Bales should be not too tightly compressed and stood on end, separated, to permit airing for 24 to 48 hours before storing.

Thus rapidly handled sericea will produce a hay equivalent to alfalfa in feed value.

EUROPE:

Decision Inland

With the invasion already underway in the air with the thunderous non-stop bombardment of the western perimeter of Hitler's quaking Fortress Europe, experts agreed that the big decision would be reached beyond the coastal defenses and farther inland, where German panzers will attempt to fight off an Allied breakthrough.

As U. S. and British planes continued their round-the-clock bombardment, the two sides readied their lines on other parts of the continent where attacks were expected to occur simultaneously with an invasion from the west. In central Italy, the Nazis shortened their lines by pulling in a big bludge in the Allied defenses, and in Russia, the Reds were reported massing troops near eastern Poland for another powerful offensive.

Rail yards, rail lines, bridges, airfields, coastal defenses and Axis industries all came under the bombardings of thousands of Allied planes blasting out the invasion path in the west.

COOPERATIVES:

Big Business

Steady growth of the cooperative system in the U. S. was reflected in the Cooperative league's report that various organizations' total sales for 1943 reached the record high of $750,000, and savings of $50,000,000 were effected for consumers.

Feed, fertilizer, equipment, seeds and other farm supplies accounted for about two-thirds of the total sales, the Cooperative league reported, with oil products and petroleum next in line.

Declaring that local, regional and national cooperatives now control about 113 manufacturing plants, 2,000 farm supply establishments, 2,500 gas and petroleum products outlets, and 1,100 grocery stores, the Cooperative league said that the various organizations looked forward to balancing the movement by increasing gas and petrol operations in the East and grocery stores in the Midwest.

Another objective, according to the Cooperative league, is extension of trade to Europe, where the cooperative system had a strong hold prior to World War II.

AGRICULTURE:

Plans Changed

Excessive rainfall in the south-west and middle-west delays planting in oats and barley, may result in increased production of corn and soybeans.

With corn stocks throughout the country as of April 1 at 1,162,000,000 bushels — 380,000,000 bushels below last year—figures showed that at 42,000,000 head exclusive of pigs farrowed since January 1, there were 4,000,000 less hogs on hand than in May, 1943. Since the first of the year, 42,000,000 hogs were reportedly butchered, a 55 per cent increase over the same period in 1943, reports showed.

Because heavy rainfall has kept the sowing out of the fields, this year's expected seed only 41,000,000 acres of oats, compared to the 46,000,000 planned, and plant about 1,500,000 acres less of barley than the 15,000,000 acres originally intended. On the other hand, about 100,000,000 acres of corn and 15,000,000 acres of soybeans probably will be seeded.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

SAVINGS: National savings accumulated last year according to economists. By the end of the year the total invested in war bonds, deposited in banks or put into insurance may reach 125 billion dollars, the institute predicts, adding that this huge sum is a danger to the national economy if inflationary tendencies get out of hand.

GUTENBERG BIBLE: Harvard University has been presented a copy of the Gutenberg Bible, one of the 10 perfect copies known to be in the United States. It is the gift of George Widener of Philadelphia and it is valued at more than $100,000. There are only 40 copies of this edition in existence. They were printed in 1455 in Mainz, Germany.

LEND-LEASE:

Extension Favored

With extension of lend-lease for another year assured in congress, President Roosevelt asked for a $7,188,893,000 fund for the period to continue the program, which has cost $30,962,852 to date.

Although congress put off enactment until senate and house could agree on terms for limiting the President's power to formulate policies of preliminary or final settlement of accounts with recipient nations, only Sen. William Langer (N. D.) registered opposition to the bill in the senate.

Said he: "According to the report, we got so-called strategic supplies from nations that are beneficiaries of lend-lease. Yet when we obtain metals and other strategic war materials from these same countries, we pay cash on the barrel-head, instead of crediting the lend-lease account."

WAR PRISONERS:

Aid Farmers

Of the 133,618 prisoners of war the U. S. is holding in 203 camps in 41 states, good use is being made of many in critical labor shortage areas, the War department revealed.

Between June of 1943 and the end of March, prisoners' work approximated 19,300,321 man-days. Prisoners have been particularly helpful in relieving the farm labor pinch. In the south, 3,500 prisoners were used for an emergency harvest of sugar cane after a freeze, and they assisted with the cotton, rice and peanuts crops. In the east and midwest, prisoners have helped in picking and canning fruit and other foods.

FRIENDLY RIVALS

For awhile, it looked as though New Mexico's gubernatorial race would be a one family affair, what with Robert E. Peterson (left) the candidate for the Republican nomination, and his wife, Edna, vying for the Democratic nomination. But Mr. Peterson's petition of candidacy was rejected.

Although Mrs. Peterson can keep Mr. Peterson in hand in the kitchen as the picture shows, Mr. Peterson has a mind of his own politically. Said Mrs. Peterson: "I tried to keep him in line, but I failed. He is a former Democrat. He would be harder to lead, though."

NEUTRALS:

Blacklist Threat

Applying pressure in its efforts to curb neutral trade with the Axis, the U. S. and Britain announced that its black-listing of companies for continuing business relations with the Allies' enemies would be extended into the postwar world.

Meanwhile, it was reported, a special U. S. representative arrived in Stockholm, Sweden, to seek a cancellation of that neutral's prosperous ball-bearing trade with the Germans.

Of 15,000 firms on the U. S. and British blacklist, 10,000 are in South America and the remainder in neutral European countries. The Allies' threat to carry-over the blacklist into the postwar world, implied that more friendly businesses would receive the jump on trade.

ARMS:

U. S. Output

No less than 13½ billion rounds of .30 and .50 caliber bullets—enough munitions to kill off six times the population of the world—were shipped to fighting men in 70 war theaters during 1943 by the U. S. Ordnance field service.

Besides this tremendous volume of ammunition, other deliveries included 9,500 light and medium tanks; 20,000 75-millimeter tank guns; 91,000 bazookas; 648,000 sub-machine guns; 15,000 hand grenades and 21,000,000 rifle grenades.

As the figures reflected, Vice-Chairman Donald Davis of the War Production board declared that U. S. production of military supplies, equipment and munitions nearly equals total war output of the rest of the world.

LOCKERS

Because of the demand for food lockers far exceeding the number available, the War Food administration has issued new regulations restricting the applications for lockers. Only two classes of users can be included in applications after June 1.

First class consists of farmers who are resident operators, producing the kind of food normally stored in lockers. The second class are people living in town, but who super-vise operation of a farm by a tenant on a share basis or by hired labor.

Let's Face Facts

Boom in Farm Values
Looms up as Menace
To Economical Farmer

By BARROW LYONS
WNU Staff Correspondent

Country America is headed directly into a land-boom spree, if something isn't done to stop it. Average farm land values rose nine per cent in 1942 over those of 1941. In 1943 the rise was 15 per cent—a boost of 25 per cent in two years—and values are still going up at a rate of at least 1 per cent a month.

In some areas the upward push has been even greater. In Kentucky, for instance, crop controls for tobacco before the war and the normal demand for Burley leaf during the war have brought about an increase in farm land values of 70 per cent over the 1935-39 average. Out on the Pacific coast, the quest of those years for Burley leaf during the war have brought about an increase in farm land values of 70 per cent over the 1935-39 average. Out on the Pacific coast, the quest of those years for Burley leaf during the war have brought about an increase in farm land values of 70 per cent over the 1935-39 average.

Barrow Lyons

Even the land brokers are worried about the situation, despite down payments of one-third the selling price. No one expects farming to continue to be as profitable as it is now for an indefinite number of years, even if farm produce prices remain on a high level. The day when it will be hard for many purchasers to continue payments at the rate contracted for is foreseen by conservative land dealers.

War Bonds Preferred

Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard has urged repeatedly farmers who are making money to pay off mortgages and invest in war bonds, rather than in more land, if by doing so they bid up the price to a point where it would be hard to pay off mortgages during periods of depression, especially if the buyer must give a heavy mortgage. It is clear that every farmer who so burdens himself with large indebtedness, payments will have to meet the competition of those who have paid off mortgages out of the $34 billion income farmers have received in the last two years.

During a trip I made through the Middle West and South last winter I discovered that the most progressive farmers were very well aware of this situation, which is happening in greater or lesser degree in nearly every part of the country. They were particularly resentful of the men who have had comparatively little experience in farming, but now see a chance to make a quick cleanup on high markets.

Not only do these newcomers pay too much for their land, but without the perspective of years of experience, pay much higher wages to their help. This makes it especially difficult for the experienced farmers to keep good farm hands, especially in the face of demands of selective service and the competition of munitions industries. The Farm Credit Administration is doing what it can to retard the present tendency. Throughout the country it has refused to make loans based on sales at exorbitant prices. The banks, in turn, are being greatly curtailed, and tenant farmers contemplating purchase are being advised to figure with great care what they can reasonably expect to earn on a farm over a period of years and to base their purchases on such calculations, rather than on present commodity prices.

It has even been suggested that down payment of half of the price should be a legal requirement for any farm purchase.

Refuse to Match Speculators

There is little the individual farmer can do to check this growing menace except to hold on to his farm and refuse to meet the competition for acreage of speculative farmers. But there is a good deal each can do, if he will inform himself of the situation in his own area and then let his congressman know about it.

He might also write directly to Senator Josiah W. Bailey of North Carolina, who has been named chairman of a subcommittee of the senate finance committee named to consider two bills introduced by Senator Guy M. Gillette of Iowa.

The other members of this group are Senators Robert M. La Follette Jr. of Wisconsin and Harry F. Byrd of Virginia. The Gillette bills would take the profits from the resale of farm land within two years of purchase of 90 per cent, with diminishing taxes on resales up to six years. Public hearings have not been held on these bills as yet and the subcommittee has made no report. A show of public interest in the matter undoubtedly would get some action.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Natural rubber is still something of a mystery, even after years of laboratory experiments. It has carbon and hydrogen, but there are other qualities which have not as yet been determined.

Before the war, 60 per cent of the tires and tubes made each year were used as replacement, and 80 per cent of the new motor vehicles sold replaced those annually scrapped.

Brazil rubber selling at $3.06 a pound in 1910 stimulated the development of the Middle East plantations to the extent that 3,000,000 acres were under cultivation in 1915, providing the bulk of the world's supplies.

The Farmer Buys War Bonds

by O. B. Jesness
Chief, Division of Agricultural Economics
University of Minnesota

FARMER Brown does not have to ask himself whether he ought to buy War Bonds. He knows that every citizen with an income should lend part of it to the government to help win this war. The real question which Mr. Brown and all his fellow farmers must decide is how large his investment should be. The simplest and best answer to this is "buy all you can."

But what are some of the points which a farmer needs to weigh in deciding what that amount is in his particular case? Farm income certainly is one. Most farmers are receiving considerably larger cash incomes because of the war. Some of the increase may be needed to pay pressing debt. Higher taxes will take some. But most of it ought to be saved away in War Bonds for future use.

Part of the current cash income represents wear and tear on machinery and equipment. War shortages prevent farmers from buying machinery or building freely. Less money can be spent for these purposes now, but more cash will be needed later on because of this. Each farmer ought to figure the amount which this involves. The best storage place for the money which prudent farmers will set aside for this use is War Bonds.

Farm homes will need new equipment as well. Electricity has recently been installed in many farm homes and more will get this service as soon as possible. Funds saved up now can be used later to buy things to add to the comforts of the home and to ease the drudgery of farm work.

War prices will not last forever. The future will bring years of low prices or bad crops as well as good years. Some of the present income will come in mighty hands in times of low return. Farmers also are saving for educating their children for old age and for the proverbial rainy day. Each family should think about all of these needs and set aside money to meet them. There is no safer place for such savings than War Bonds.

Should debts be paid before Bonds are bought? Each farmer must answer for himself. Due and pressing debt should be paid. If necessary, long-term debt should be reduced to a point where it can be carried. After that, available income better go into Bonds. Your own conscience will tell you when you are using debt merely as an excuse for neglecting to do your share in buying Bonds.

What about buying land? Can you handle more land profitably? Is it worth the price asked? Can you pay for it out of earnings when prices drop? A speculative boom in land may get out of hand. Better buy Bonds than speculate in land.

What about the farmer who says "I prefer to keep my funds in cash"? Stop a minute, brother, how smart is that? Do you believe it good business to have idle dollars lying around? If they are hid away somewhere, they may get lost, stolen or destroyed. Put them to work and make them produce a return for you. War Bonds are the safest investment available. They are backed by the same government as the dollar. One is as safe as the other. While farmers buy Bonds intending to hold them, the E, and G Bonds ordinarily bought by individual investors can be redeemed for cash if need arises. Unlike the liberty bonds of the last war, these cannot be sold on the open market, and hence, will never sell for fewer dollars than they cost.

Farmers who have done a good job in buying War Bonds, they can make an even better showing if each one will buy all he can. Remember, you help yourself as well as your country.

FEDERAL LAND BANK LOAN BENEFITS TOLD

The advantages of long-term federal land bank loans available to farmers through local national farm loan associations were emphasized this week by R. L. Thompson, president of the Federal Land Bank of New Orleans, who declared that "there are thousands of farmers who still do not know about the benefits of membership in these farmer-controlled associations."

The primary purpose of federal land bank and land bank Commissioner loans with their long term, low interest rate and amortized repayment plan is to help farmers get out of debt and to reach the coveted goal of farm and home ownership.

During the past 27 years thousands of farmers have obtained land bank loans through their national farm loan association to buy and pay for farms.

"Nothing will do more to stabilize agriculture and to improve rural life than to have more of our farm people buy and own their own farms and homes," the Land Bank president said.

Land bank and Commissioner loans are made for agricultural purposes such as the purchase of farms, equipment, fertilizers and livestock; the construction and repair of farm buildings and the improvement of farm lands; the refinancing of existing mortgages and other indebtedness and the provision of funds for general agricultural uses.

Farmers who may be interested in obtaining land bank or Commissioner loans should contact the secretary-treasurer of their national farm loan association at Clanton on Thursdays, or write the association office at Marion, Ala.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

More than a quarter of a century has passed since now dead Kaiser Wilhelm declared that a treaty was "only a scrap of paper." His declaration is still well remembered, however, largely because the greater part of the civilized world was startled and shocked that a solemn pact between nations should be classed as something so little valuable as a scrap of paper. At the beginning of the first World War, a scrap of paper was merely waste, often troublesome since its disposal, more than likely, of time and money. That same hold true in the years as the world (most of it unknowingly) was coming closer and closer to another great war, one indeed that would be global. But when the war burst in its red fury, a scrap of paper took on value. From waste it changed to something that might save the life of an American soldier—perhaps your son—and so our government asks us to save as many scraps of paper as possible.

A scrap of paper save a soldier's life? Certainly. Blood plasma that is giving new life to thousands of our wounded men finds its way to them all over the world in fiber shipping containers made from paper. X-ray films and sulfu drugs must be guarded by layers of laminated paper so that they will be received in the combat zone in perfect condition, for unless they, like machine parts (also shipped in paper), arrive in perfect shape they might better never have been manufactured. Bandages, surgical sponges, gauzes, cottons, first aid dressings must also arrive at the hospital or advanced medical station in perfect condition and so they are protected by asphalted, laminated paper. Sulfadiazene tablets, which soldiers carry into battle for self use if wounded, are packaged in paper. The "K-rations" for emergency feeding are packaged in "Victory Boxes" made of waterproof, laminated paper.

In modern warfare, paper has become one of the most important supplies. It takes 81 tons of supplies each month to maintain a fighting man overseas. Just about all those supplies are wrapped in paper. Every soldier's carrier carries in his pack 45 tons of paper products. Blueprints, used in building a battleship, weigh 25 tons—and the blueprints for the new monster Missouri require a lot more than that. Each 500-pound bomb takes 12 pounds of paper for wings, fins, tops and bottoms. Cores used in manufacturing self-sealing fuel tanks—indispensable equipment for fighting planes—are made from paper.

Paper has always been plentiful in the past, hence the worthlessness of a mere scrap. The question may be asked as to why we not conserve more paper just as we have stepped up production of airplanes, automotive vehicles, guns. The answer is simple—there just isn't enough pulpwood in the world. The forests have become depleted but supply is limited because we are making more planes, tanks and guns and because of the millions of men needed to run the planes, tanks, the tanks into battle and fire the guns. Many a lumberjack is now in a fox-hole or a munitions factory. Lack of lumberjacks to cut the pulpwood has brought about a decrease of 3,500,000 cords of logs needed for paper last year. Each 1,500 pounds of waste paper—"a scrap of paper" about which there has been so much talk—corresponds to a cord of wood.

For the duration of the war, the only possible substitute for all those millions of cords of lost pulpwood, is waste paper. To meet the requirements of our military forces and the most essential civilian demands, the American people must contribute 33 per cent more waste paper than they did last year, the goal of 8,000,000 tons in 1944 being based on minimum needs set by the War Production board. That means of course that a scrap of paper has become of vital importance, of such vital importance indeed that there can be no complete agreement with the declaration of Edwin S. Friendly, chairman of the U. S. victory waste paper campaign, "It is little less than sabotage at this time to say, 'I think, only a scrap of paper.'"

Carmen Cavallaro tells this wartime story, so stop him if you have heard it. Two Englishmen were passing time by playing chess during an air raid. A kibitzer joined them. For a solid hour, not one of the trio moved. Finally the kibitzer relaxed by winking his right eye. One of the Britishers stood up and glared at the fellow. "I will not resume play," he cried, "unless you stop fidgeting around."

Rust and fruit stains will disappear if the stained blades of kitchen knives are rubbed with a cork stopper that has been dipped in water first then in a fine scouring powder.

A place for children to put their toys and playthings does three things—saves time and work for the mother, gives the children invaluable training, and eliminates home accidents.

Storage space adjusted to the size of a child is valuable in training the child to be neat and orderly.
Hanging rods in the closet within easy reach of the child makes it possible to reach the child to hang clothing with ease.
Boxes, shelves, and dresser drawers provided for children's playthings help to make children care for things and make more orderly housekeeping.

STATES GOAL $102,000,000 IN FIFTH WAR LOAN DRIVE

Alabama's quota for the Fifth War Loan will be $102,000,000 of which $33,000,000 must be sold in E Bonds, it was announced today by Ed Leigh McMillan, of Brewton, chairman of the War Finance committee for Alabama. County quotas have not yet been received from the Treasury Department in Washington, Mr. McMillan added.

"This Fifth War Loan total quota represents an increase of $9,000,000 over our Fourth War Loan quota," Mr. McMillan said. "And it gives an indication of the extent to which our efforts must be increased if we are to reach it. Our E bond quota is $1,000,000 less than it was during the Fourth War Loan, but that does not mean that we will have an easy time reaching that quota."

Mr. McMillan and other leaders in the War Finance program are now holding district meetings throughout Alabama to make plans for meeting the Fifth War Loan quotas and to help county chairmen with their problems.

"I have been extremely gratified by the spirit of determination evidenced by the county and local leaders at these meetings," Mr. McMillan said. "They realize that just ahead of us lie the most decisive days in the history of the world, and they are determined that here on the home front we shall not fail in our task of financing the equipment our fighting men will need. 'It's a great challenge we have, but I am confident that we will meet it. Because of the magnitude of the undertaking which faces us, we have chosen as our state slogan, 'Meet the Challenge, Alabama.' Alabama has never failed to meet a challenge. We will not fail to meet this one."

ALABAMA CORPORAL SERVES AS CHAPLAIN ASSISTANT

By Private Lyn Walton

"Fifth Army Field Correspondent WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, ITALY—Corporal Curtis M. Bean, a chaplain's assistant and whose home is in Clanton, Alabama, conduct church services in rear areas of the Fifth Army front in Italy. For an hour or more before church time he drives a jeep among the units picking up soldiers and delivering them at the place of worship.

Many units of the infantry regiment of which Corporal Bean is a member are represented at the services when they are back from the front for a rest. Services are conducted on a large porch of an Italian building estimated to be more than 200 years old. A series of services was inaugurated in the rear area when the chaplain to whom Corporal Bean is assistant, went to the front with part of the unit. There were no facilities for the chaplain's office at the front and Corporal Bean was left to conduct services in the rear area.

MUSIC is provided by a field organ, part of the army chaplain's equipment. Corporal Joseph Soifer, 22 Seams st., Hartford, Conn., is the organist. Before entering the army he taught music at the Burr Junior high school in Hartford and is well known in Connecticut music circles.

Pfc. John Heeb, 767 Forrest Ave., Bronx, New York, and Pfc. Edgar Stillway, 1882 North Fair Oaks st., Pasadena, Calif., aid the corporal with services and often lead the congregation in prayer.

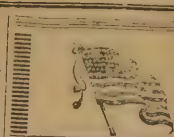

Corporal Bean's wife is Mrs. Lorine Bean of Clanton, Ala.

ARRESTS BEING MADE BY OPA FOR PRICE CEILING VIOLATORS

Word comes from the local OPA board that roundups are being made in several of the counties of the state of violators of price ceilings. Last week arrests were made in Jefferson and several north Alabama counties against black market operators. The personnel of the local board does not want anything like this, to happen here and are doing all in their power to get cooperation from the merchants in Chilton county.

A man in Calhoun county was turned in for selling gasoline books good for 80 gallons of gasoline. Another in the northern part of the state was caught charging too much for onions and grapes. In Jefferson six persons were arrested for buying gasoline with loose coupons from a 17-year-old attendant.

Things like that could happen here. The OPA Hearing Commissioner, Travis Williams stated that there would be no use of rationing if the laws were not enforced. This they expect to do. Aid your local officials by cooperating with them in keeping down prices and preventing inflation.

Formal action to reduce the ceiling price of live hogs weighing over 240 pounds by 75 cents per hundredweight has been taken by the Office of Price Administration, Dr. A. H. Collins, District Director at Montgomery, has announced. The action was taken to discourage the feeding of grain, especially corn, to heavyweight hogs and to encourage the marketing of hogs before they reach 240 pounds.

Manufacturers of household furniture whose over-all operations are unprofitable and who have been told to grant wage increases by the War Labor Board, may apply to the Office of Price Administration for price relief.

Sufficient relief will be granted to eliminate the loss on furniture operations, but in no case will such relief be more than the amount necessary to cover the increase in costs resulting from the wage adjustment.

Recent action by the Office of Price Administration in amending the rationing sugar program to include two dates on which consumers may apply for canning sugar was explained by Dr. A. H. Collins, district director of OPA at Montgomery.

Dr. Collins stated that though there is plenty of sugar for canning purposes the inordinately heavy pre-season demand had placed a heavy demand on transportation facilities and threatened a late summer crop spoilage. In order to avoid this, he said, the OPA will ration only 10 pounds of canning sugar to applicants in the first period and will make up the difference between 10 pounds and the normal ration of 20 pounds in the second period to applicants who are able to show that the sugar was actually used for canning purposes.

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

RKO Radio Pictures inaugurates a new daily coast-to-coast radio show on May 29, "Hollywood Star Time," featuring their film favorites of the year; it will originate in the studio dining room. Going out over 177 stations of the Blue network, it will be broadcast daily from Monday through Friday, at 12:15 to 12:30 Pacific Coast time, an hour later in each successive time zone. And Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, equally radio-minded, launches "M-G-M Screen Tests" on June 12, over the full basic Mutual Network, five days a week at 9:15 Eastern war time; it will consist of actual screen tests, the aspiring actor being required to play opposite a Metro star.

In "Going My Way" Bing Crosby proves that he doesn't have to sing; in fact, he sings comparatively little in the picture, yet has probably the best role of his screen career. He and that very talented actor, Barry Fitzgerald, share honors in this sweet, human story — and anybody who can share acting honors with Fitzgerald has to be good. This is one of the pictures that people will remember.

Jane Withers, young Republic star, had two birthday cakes on her 18th birthday, one with a party of soldiers near her own age, the second with an 18-year-old elephant belonging to Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey circus. Both soldiers and elephant let Jane blow out her own candles and make a wish. The elephant also gulped the cake and then devoured Jane's birthday orchids.

Producer C. P. MacGregor, of the Hollywood Radio Theater, is directly responsible for the successful careers of many leading movie actors and actresses. When talking pictures came in, parts were awarded on the strength of voice transcriptions—made by him!

Frank Sinatra won about 1,500 new friends at a luncheon given in New York for the American Newspaper Publishers' association; he sang a parody on "Sunday, Monday and Always," the refrain being that people are telling him to look out for Dick Haymes, Dick Todd and Perry Como are crowding him too comfortably for his own good. He wound up by gallantly concluding "There's just one Crosby."

A new puppy belonging to Ronnie, son of George Burns and Gracie Allen, chewed a hole in an expensive rug at the Burns' home. Gracie was upset, but Ronnie said he was "Maybe if I train him," said he, "I can get him so he'll lie over the hole most of the time."

Around CBS a pleasant glow is still noticeable, due to the fact that six of their network and regional programs were cited as winners in the 1943 George Foster Peabody Awards, gaining CBS top honors in five of the seven classifications.

Bettejane Greer (Mrs. Rudy Vallee) whose first national prominence came when she was chosen two years ago as official model for the first WAC uniform, will be groomed for top starring roles by RKO. For the past year she's been under contract to Howard Hughes, doing dramatic work with dramatic cohesiveness. As soon as her release from that contract was negotiated she signed with RKO.

British Farm Leaders
Give Sense of Nearness
To Vicissitudes of War
By BARROW LYONS
WNU Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.

One gets a little closer to the war when one talks with a British farmer, who has been cultivating fields under the wings of Nazi planes, who can't light a lamp without being sure that no gleam shows through the window shades, and who must use all the ingenuity known to science to get the most from his acres to feed the workers and fighting men of Britain.

Such a farmer is Robert Rae, the new agricultural attaché to the British embassy in Washington, who just arrived from the University of Reading in England, where he was professor of agriculture. He also managed an experimental farm which has pointed the way toward larger crops in Britain.

"I've only just arrived—still in a stage of schoolboy wonder at being able to turn on the lights without pulling down the blinds," he told a group of Washington correspondents at a joint interview with James A. Scott Watson, who has been recalled to England and whom Mr. Rae is replacing.

The talk with these men reminded the American writer that farmers of England are allies of our own farmers in supporting the greatest military effort man has ever made—the defense of the democratic world against forces which would destroy it. Mr. Scott Watson has been here two years, chiefly to help get for British farmers American farm machinery and adopt the best of our farming methods.

Likes TVA Superphosphate

Incidentally, Mr. Scott Watson had strong praise for the Tennessee Valley authority's concentrated superphosphate, which has been shipped to England in considerable quantities. The TVA superphosphate has been available to our own farmers in limited quantities, because of our large supply of lower concentration phosphate, and the necessity for conserving ocean shipping space.

Mr. Rae said that in spite of England's usually damp climate, this winter has been abnormally dry, foreboding an inadequate water supply this summer. One result, however, was that spring plowing and planting was much ahead of schedule.

Before the war, he said, England produced only 34 per cent of its food supply, but now produces 70 per cent. Reduction of food consumption by about 10 per cent has contributed to this increase, but actual food production has been almost doubled.

There has been no slackening in the food program, and the ministry of agriculture plans to maintain present operating schedules for another four years—through 1947. England recognizes that if victory comes this year, the need for food on the continent will be tremendous for a year-and-a-half to two years after the fighting stops.

Mr. Rae thought that the need for American agricultural machinery would be very much less from now on. Some forms of tractors will still be needed for replacement, but virtually all of the arable acreage is now under mechanical cultivation, he said.

During the last two years England has used a considerable amount of soldier labor, particularly for harvesting crops; but with invasion under way this labor will not be available. He said:

"We expect our biggest headache this year will be in getting harvest labor. If we can't get a little more combine equipment, there will be a waste of grain."

Large Stockpile of Food

There is a considerable food stockpile in England, he said, but this is considered minimum insurance. If the invasion of the continent is successful, some of this will be used for feeding destitute populations.

"We can't sit back as long as there is an acute shortage of food on the continent," he added. Mr. Scott Watson put in a word at this point: "All of our friends from England who come over here seem to have a craving for your citrus fruits. They apparently have felt the lack of oranges, grapefruit and lemons more than meat. Of course, there will be a tremendous pent-up demand for citrus fruit as soon as we can get to it. It is a military secret that all of the ships that can be spared are now being held in readiness for invasion."

Both Britons cited examples of exchange of technical information, which was enabling English and American farmers to raise larger and better crops. The visitors also thought that American agricultural economists were getting from England some good points regarding farm tenancy. English laws provide a far greater sense of security for tenant farmers, and assure to them full benefit of improvements they make in building up the soil and facilities of owners. Eventually this will be reflected in American tenant-owner relations.

ABOUT

Milk, or latex, flows from the rubber tree best in early morning. Therefore, rubber tappers start their day's work long before dawn.

An overload which might reduce the life of a crude rubber tire only 25 per cent or even be carried through until the tread was worn smooth, may reduce the life of a synthetic rubber tire 50 per cent or more and result in a blowout while there is still wear in the tread.

Rubber belting, which now plays such an important part in mining and industrial operations, was first manufactured in this country in 1836.

After the wife had pleaded with her husband that she wanted soft water to wash her hair, he said he would go and get it that evening.

As he had not arrived home at 12:30 a. m. his wife became worried. At 1:15 the back gate slammed, there was a dull thud and the perspiring man groaned, "I've had a job with this tub! Gee whiz, you didn't tell me it was full o' water!"

PAUL ENCOURAGES THE CORINTHIANS

LESSON TEXT—II Corinthians 4:8, 10-13; 5:1, 5:8, 10-13.

GOLDEN TEXT—Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might become rich.—II Corinthians 8:9.

"Nothing is certain but uncertainty," so says the modern philosopher. But man cannot be satisfied with constant change and confusion. That is why, in our day of unheeded disruption of ordinary life patterns, men and women especially need the message of the gospel, for in Christ we find the answer to our quest for certainty and stability.

Paul writing to encourage the church at Corinth assured them that life may be steady, useful and true because they are Christians. He presents:

The Christian—A Servant of Men for Christ's Sake (II Cor. 4:5). Having—

I. A Vision Which Lightens Affliction (II Cor. 4:16-18).

Any honest person knows that in the temporal world round about him everything speaks of death. All things tend to run down, to wear out, to decay, including the body of man. He sees his mental as well as his physical powers coming to a certain maturity only to go into decline.

At the same time he is conscious of the deep burden of affliction and sorrow which seems to press down on all the world like an almost unbearable and crushing weight. What can he do about it? Shall he try to dissipate the clouds by artificial cheerfulness? It will not work.

Our text gives us the answer. "For this cause we faint not," says Paul. The things which press us down are only temporal—yet they are only temporal. God's world is eternal. The weakness of the physical body only makes the strength of the spiritual life more evident. The affliction which seems so heavy is only a "light affliction" when one remembers the "eternal weight of glory."

Is this just a bit of "escapism"? No, indeed. Have not men learned anew in the war that the only possessions you can keep are those which cannot be bombed to pieces or stolen?

Obviously, that is true in the highest degree of the one who knows Christ, and whose riches are those of eternity. How triumphantly he can meet decay and sorrow! He is of the other world, and nothing here can be more than a light affliction, which seems negligible in the light of the glory of eternal things. Ah, but it's great to be a Christian in such days as these!

II. An Assurance Which Removes Fear (II Cor. 5:1, 5:8).

Of all the fears which afflict mortal man the greatest and the ultimate one is the fear of death. He knows that it is so absolute and final that it terminates everything and separates him from all that he has known and held dear in this world. That is just the point, death does end everything (except the awful fear of judgment for a wicked wicked life) for those who live only for this world. Man, however, was never intended for just this present life. He is a being who has eternity written in his very personality.

What if this "earthly tabernacle"—my body—does give up, says Paul. I have a "building of God," something which man did not make with his hands, an eternal home in glory. That gives a man confidence. While he is here in the body, he lives and walks by faith, but when absent from this body, he is "present with the Lord." How altogether delightful and marvelous is the future, even beyond the grave, for the believer. Hence, we "sorrow not as others which have no hope" (read I Thess. 4:13-18).

III. Hope Which Makes Him a Living Testimony (II Cor. 5:14-19).

Worldly people sometimes wonder what tremendous and tireless motive power keeps Christians working for the Lord in the face of impossible difficulties. We have that motive named in verse 14—"the love of Christ constraineth us."

There is no compulsion about real Christian testimony and service. There is no feeling that one must do this or that in order to please God. No, the compelling force here is the love of a dying Saviour. It is the supremely powerful and all-persuasive influence of love. Christ died for all, and those who realize that, know that they cannot "henceforth live unto themselves" (v. 15). The social standing, or family connections of our fellow men, no longer matter. Christ died for them and we must bring them the word of life.

Notice in verse 17 that it is the born-again-one who has this hope. Many church members whose lives are godly and whose lives are so because they have never been born again. "Except a man be born again" (John 3:3) is not a Christian. That is the place to begin. Take Christ by faith.

Invite the Children to Cranberry Punch!

(See Recipe Below.)

Children's Parties

Do the children want to give a party? Now that schools are letting out and the youngsters find themselves with time on their hands, a celebration of their own may be just the thing to fill in their odd moments.

Even if the children are younger, they can get a lot of satisfaction maneuvering their own party. Let them do it for it helps them develop imagination, encourages thinking for themselves and teaches them sociability while they are still young.

Make it as easy as possible for them; in other words, keep them free of worries about table cloth, plates and napkins. Furnish paper ones if the occasion warrants. Older children, of course, can take care of even the better dishes.

Mother can take care of the main food and supervise the serving if necessary. Sandwiches, cooling drinks, appetite-tempting dessert are popular with the younger set.

Molded salads make the table pretty and are a big hit with youngsters:

Spring Tonic: Cool foods should be served cool. Chill plates for salad and other cool foods before serving. Dish them out. In making salads, chill not only the bowl or plates, but all ingredients and utensils required in the assembling of the salad.

The three "C's" in salad making are that ingredients should be clean, cold and crisp.

When buying lettuce, make sure it's crisp, tender and free from decay.

In tossed salads, mix ingredients so that each is coated with dressing before serving. In salting the salad, salt each layer of vegetables so that you get an even distribution of seasoning.

PERSONAL MESSAGES TO MARINES OVERSEAS BY RADIO NOW POSSIBLE

Families of U. S. Marines overseas now may include births or even urgent business matters in messages which Marine Corps headquarters will transmit abroad by radio, it has been announced here.

In making public the more generous policy of handling personal messages for Marines overseas from their families in the States, it was pointed out that the messages must be concerned with the welfare of the immediate family.

The overseas service may be obtained by filing messages at any Red Cross chapter, or by sending them direct to Marine Corps headquarters, Washington. It was stressed, however, that messages must be confined to matter of a definite emergency nature.

For example, should the mother or sister of a Marine who is overseas become dangerously ill, the family might advise the Marine of her state by filing a message to him with the Red Cross or with Marine Headquarters at Washington. The message should be addressed the same as his letters are addressed.

GRANDMOTHER'S BOND WITH THE FUTURE WAR BONDS

EMBLEM OF THE GRANDMOTHERS LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, D. C.: "Grandmother's Bond with the Future—War Bonds" is the slogan of the Treasury's new campaign urging grandparents to buy Bonds and stamps for their grandchildren. The official emblem is the old-fashioned sampler reproduced above.

The Grandmothers League was founded by Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of the Army Chief-of-Staff, who bought Bonds from Secretary Morgenthau for her three grandchildren. Mrs. Marshall suggests that grandparents insure their grandchildren's future by buying Bonds or starting stamp albums for them.

PRODUCE GOOD-QUALITY MILK AND AVOID WASTE

POINT 7 in the 1944 8 POINT NATIONAL MILK PRODUCTION PROGRAM

Good quality milk makes good quality food —Neither the farmer nor the Nation can afford to waste time, feed, and labor producing milk that cannot be used... Herds must be kept free from disease; sanitary methods of production and proper cooling are essential.

The 8 Point Program

1. Grow more legume hay, pasture, and grain.
2. Fertilize to increase quantity and quality of feed.
3. Feed to avoid summer milk slump.
4. Feed cows liberally during their dry period.
5. Keep as many cows as feed and labor permit.
6. Market more whole milk whenever possible.
7. Produce good-quality milk and avoid waste.
8. Breed for better herd replacements.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allies Continue Gain in Italy; Farm Help Shows 4% Decrease; Japs Strengthen Hold in China

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

CONSUMERS' GOODS:

Clothing Pinch

Unless a sudden change in the war occurs, supplies of men's and boy's fall and winter apparel will continue to be tight.

So discovered merchants gathering in Chicago's Merchandise Mart for the annual clothing show, with their allotments for pajamas, sport and dress suits, sweaters and suits ranging from 50 to 75 per cent of last year.

Any increase in production, it was learned, would be entirely dependent upon the availability of labor and goods and the extent of reflecting the swiftly changing conditions was the War Production board's recent order reserving the spinning of worsted yarn solely for the government.

With a fairly early possible return to civilian production, merchants sought standard items which would immediately come into demand instead of substitutes.

Electric Irons

Despite delays principally occasioned by manufacturers' pleas for higher ceiling prices, the War Production board's decision on a program came closer to its announced goal of 2,000,000 units for 1944 with authorization so far for an output of 769,338.

Although surplus materials are being released to manufacturers whose operations will not complicate the tight labor situation, deliveries of irons in volume cannot be expected until the fall, it was said, since many of the requirements for materials had not been cleared.

In asking for higher prices, manufacturers reportedly pointed out that OPA ceilings were based on prewar conditions, which have since been considerably altered by increased wages and material costs amounting to 25 per cent.

CHINA:

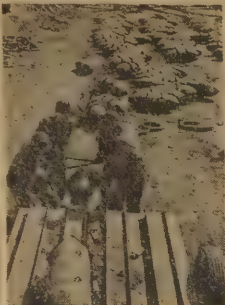

Ominous Rumblings

With Japanese troops strengthening their hold on eastern China, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek ordered an offensive in the southwestern part of the country in an effort to open up a new supply road from Burma.

As the Chinese position deteriorated with ominous rumblings that the country might not be able to continue war much longer without concrete assistance from the Allies, Vice President Henry Wallace prepared to fly to the Far East for conferences with Chinese leaders.

In attacking to the southwest, the Chinese aimed to hook up the Burma road, the Ledo road, which Lieutenant Gen. Joseph Stilwell's mixed forces were hacking out of the jungle.

Chinese communications from Allied India to China, partially offsetting the Japs' stranglehold on the country through their control of all Chinese seaports.

Italy—Air force service groups load bombs for delivery to bombers on Samsing Italian front.

EUROPE:
Smash Ahead

As the Nazis' Gustav line shook and crumbled in southern Italy, a network of deep set steel machine gun nests anchored in concrete, and hinged on the towering Arunci mountains on the west. Banging through the Gustav line to the west, the British and French forces already were bearing down on the Hitler fortifications.

Beyond the enemy's tattered Gustav line in southern Italy lay his equally heralded Adolf Hitler line, a network of deep set steel machine gun nests anchored in concrete, and hinged on the towering Arunci mountains on the west. Banging through the Gustav line to the west, the British and French forces already were bearing down on the Hitler fortifications.

As the invasion approached, German bombers were sent over England in strength, with fleets of 300 attacking seaports and military installations on the southeast coast. As the zero hour neared, Britain was agog with reports that the Germans were preparing to drop paratroopers into the country to wreck vital communications and other strategic installations the moment the invasion fleet shoved off.

PACIFIC:

Widespread Action

Fighting sea-sawed in India, with the British regaining ground in the vital Assam-Bengal railroad line area to the north, and the Japs launching a new drive into the country to the southwest.

As the fighting raged in India, U. S. bombers ranged over the length of the Pacific, hammering Jap installations in northwestern New Guinea, guarding the approaches to the East Indies and Philippines; blasting isolated enemy strongholds on the Marshalls, and hitting the Kurile islands at the tip of the Japanese homeland. At the same time, U. S. bombers pounded Jap supply bases on eastern New Guinea and New Britain islands, where an estimated 150,000 enemy troops have been encircled by U. S. amphibious operations.

The Japs launched their new drive to the southwest in India after British and native troops fought off their steady advance toward the Assam-Bengal rail line, which would be an important link in any new supply road to China through northern Burma.

STRIKES:
60,000 Idle

Sixty-thousand workers were on strike in Detroit, Mich., many as a result of the walkout of 3,000 foremen seeking recognition of their association as a bargaining agent, contrary to industry's position that they are a part of the management.

Because the navy's bureau of aeronautics refused to accept any more of its output because of a lack of foremen's supervision and inspection, the Briggs Manufacturing company closed its Mack avenue plant, and later the Hudson Motor Car company announced it shut down some of its assembly lines for the same reason.

More than 4,000 workers were idle as a result of the CIO opposition to delivery of soft drinks into the Highland Park plant by an AFL driver as the two unions fought each other in organizing chauffeurs for beverage concerns. Other squabbles concerned production rates at Buick's aluminum foundry at Flint, Mich., and a protest against a War Labor board ruling at Graham-Paige's Detroit plant.

YANKS ABROAD:

Beer

One of the worst complaints of U. S. seamen, according to vice-admiral H. K. Hewitt, is that they can't get ashore often enough for a drink of beer, and he added, beer would be available to men on all naval vessels if he could have his way. All alcoholic beverages are forbidden on ships of the U. S. navy since World War I. The British navy, by contrast, issues the daily ration.

FOOD:

Large Holdings

Despite the removal of meat from rationing, storage holdings totaled 1,215,501,000 pounds on May 1, the highest for that date since 1920. Of the meat holdings, 781,392,000 pounds were in pork; 222,231,000 pounds in beef, and 16,671,000 in lamb and mutton. Poultry stocks totaled 129,988,000 pounds. On hand were 123,364,000 pounds of cheese and 6,533 pounds of butter. At 12,802,000 cases, holdings of eggs on May 1 were the highest for that date. Other large stocks included 130,855,000 pounds of fruit and 105,417,000 pounds of vegetables.

Meat Rationing

Despite the record meat holdings, OPA Administrator Chester Bowles told the house banking committee that rationing may be resumed in "30, 60 or 90 days or maybe it will be January and February."

Resumption of rationing depends upon the flow of hogs and cattle to market once warehouses have been partly cleared of bulging holdings. Bowles said. Much of the shipment will depend upon the feed available, he declared.

Concerning feed, midwestern senators meeting with War Food Administrator Marvin Jones pressed for an early relief of the government's prohibition of private sales of corn in 125 counties in the mid-west, claiming that industrial processors already have sufficient supplies to carry them into the fall, whereas farmers are short on animal feed.

MOSCOW MISSION:

Jig-Saw

Back in Springfield, Mass., after a whirlwind visit to Moscow where he conferred with Josef Stalin about plans for the reconstruction of a democratic postwar Poland and communist cooperation with the Roman Catholic church, Rev. Stanislaus Orlemanski had an unsettled homecoming.

Boisterously greeted by several hundred of his parishioners including exuberant youngsters, Father Orlemanski later was served with a notice of the suspension of all of his priestly privileges by his superior.

Parishioners greet Rev. Orlemanski.

Bishop Thomas M. O'Leary, for leaving his pastorate without permission. The suspension was lifted when Father Orlemanski, near a nervous breakdown, promised to conduct himself according to the rules and policy of the church.

Observers who remembered the recent assertion of Russia's late Orthodox Church Metropolitan Sergei that the bible did not support the Pope's position as vicar of Christ, tried to reconcile the statement with Father Orlemanski's presentation of a paper purportedly signed by Stalin professing a belief that it was possible for Red Russia to work with the Pontiff on questions of religious freedom.

BALL BEARINGS:

Diplomatic Incident

With their armies locked on bloody battlefields, diplomats of the great powers crossed their own kinds of swords in an intense, dramatic fight over possession of the ball-bearing output of Sweden's great SKF manufacturing company.

U. S. money's the only object, the Allies have a good chance to win the fight, since the U. S. dispatched a special representative to Stockholm with a blank check to bid for Germany's share of SKF's ball-bearing production.

The U. S. representative went overseas to dicker directly with SKF officials after the Swedish government turned down demands that it renounce its ball bearing trade agreement with the Germans. The U. S. purchase of SKF's entire output would, in effect, leave the Swedish government without any ball bearings to deliver.

To help the Swedes make up their minds, U. S. agencies reportedly were considering taking over SKF's plant in Philadelphia, Pa., as representatives of the Treasury and Foreign Economic administration investigated the company's books.

President of SKF's U. S. business is William L. Batt, vice chairman of the War Production board.

Surgery

Amputations may be reduced by half in this present war because of a new way of splicing arteries which has been devised by three New York scientists. The War department has approved the method for battlefield use, although special equipment will be necessary to preserve segments of blood vessels.

The method briefly, is to bridge gaps in arteries with sections of veins.

Londoner Risks Life

For 6 Razor Blades

LONDON.—When his house caught fire during an air raid, B. E. Bull ran into his bathroom and emerged later, his face blackened by smoke and his hair singed, but triumphantly carrying six razor blades and a razor.

Watchers asked him why he had risked his life and Bull replied: "Razor blades are valuable."

Bride Loses Suit

For Boy Husband

Sad Story of Romance of Marine Sweetheart.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—Romance had a bad day in a Probate court recently when an 18-year-old bride of a month—once vowed the sweetest heart of the marine corps—lost a legal fight to get her 16-year-old husband out of the custody of his parents.

She is the former Mary Ann Brydges, whose "sweetheart" of the marines' title was bestowed in a contest in 1942 and followed by the girl's appearance in New York on a radio program. On February 26 she was married at Town Gates, N. Y., to Joseph Patrick Mulligan Jr., a high school junior and former schoolmate, who neglected to consult Joseph Patrick Mulligan Sr. concerning his plunge into matrimony.

A sad story of an interrupted honeymoon was related by the bride before Judge John W. Monahan while the Mulligans, stern-faced senior and red-faced junior, listened with varied emotions.

Mary Ann said she had the blessings of her own family on the marriage and had financed the venture with $30 she had earned.

As they stepped from the train on their return, she testified, her husband's parents rudely separated them and whisked him away from her. Since then, she said, they had kept him a prisoner. To support her demand that her husband be freed, she said she is pregnant.

Judge Monahan was unmoved by the story, commenting, "No matter how you try to classify them, they are still children." He denied her petition and set a date for a hearing on the elder Mulligan's request for an annulment.

Two Britons in Uniform

Escape Through Germany

LONDON.—Two audacious British naval officers have succeeded in escaping from a German prisoner of war camp with no other aid than nerve and a six-week course in German. They didn't even bother to disguise themselves, wearing for their 22-day trek through enemy country their royal navy uniforms.

Lieutenants Dennis Kelleher, 25, and Tewart Campbell, 22, when back in England said they simply walked out of the prison camp one evening.

They set out along the 30-mile road to Bremen, posing as merchant marine officers and completed their trip to the city by morning. Lieutenant Kelleher said it was there the two met what was to prove their greatest snag during the entire trip—inability to get food. Ration points were needed.

But train tickets could be had, and soon the two were speeding to their next destination. From there they followed an underground route to the coast and freedom, allaying suspicion several times by claiming to be Netherlands naval officers.

Helicopter Saves Boy;

Called First in History

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The distinction of possibly being history's first person to be rescued by a helicopter is held by Harry E. Lundmark, 15. The third naval district public relations office said the rescue of the youth from a windswept sand bar in Jamaica bay was believed to be the first ever effected by a helicopter.

Lundmark and another boy had rented a rowboat. The companion left Lundmark on the bar and departed to fish for a while. Later he was unable to row back to Lundmark.

Coast Guard Lieut. (jg) W. C. Bolton of Milford, Mass., flying by, spotted the youth after he had been marooned a half mile from shore for three hours. The officer landed, placed the boy in the second seat and took him to Floyd Bennett field.

Flying Suit Cord Mends

Cable, Helps Save Plane

A UNITED STATES BOMBER BASED IN BRITAIN.—A Fortress piloted by Lieut. Clarence A. Strawn of Pueblo, Col., returned safely from an attack on southern Germany, thanks to the resourcefulness of the engineer, Sgt. Howard Carey of Ocean View, Del., who patched shredded rudder control cables with bits of antenna wire and cord from an electrically heated flying suit.

Sergeant Carey came to the rescue when the Fortress was pitching wildly after a battle with German fighters. One engine was knocked out and the rudder cables were cut.

"I think Carey could build a Fortress out of match sticks and rubber bands," Lieutenant Strawn declared.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haakew, D. D.

science that attracts the mind of God, but it is their absolute want and need.

A ship was bringing the king of Greece over to our country. One of his attendants brought along his dog. The dog fell overboard and his master rushed to the captain and requested that he stop the ship and rescue his dog, but the captain said that he could only stop his ship to rescue a man, and not a dog. On hearing this the master of the dog leaped over into the water with his dog. The ship was stopped and the man and his dog were saved. That sounds like foolish devotion, but it brings to us a picture that Jesus had for us. We were hopelessly lost and Jesus left His place with His Father, and came to our rescue. His love saved us.

My hobby has always been to use tools in the production of things useful and worth while. One day I completed a desk that I thought to be perfect. I admired it and thought it to be my best production. To be sure, I could not improve on that. With pride I left it in the garage to be painted. That night when I came in with my car I smashed into the desk and left it in splinters under my car. What I thought to be my best production was no more. Disappointed but not discouraged, I started another desk the next day that proved to be a much better production than the one I had crushed. You may be doing your best every day, but try hard to do something still better the next day.

Over in India the master said to his servant, "Stay away from that cave at the base of the hill and be sure that no one goes near." Immediately the servant had suspicion that his master had buried great treasures in the cave and resolved to get his gold. Taking a fellow servant with him, together they rolled back the big stone from the mouth of the cave. While doing this a hungry tiger that had been caged there, leaped upon them and fed himself full upon human flesh. When we are ordered not to do a thing, then it is that we want to do that very thing. It was curiosity that killed the cat. If you do not believe that God had a reason for saying, "Thou Shalt Not," just try disobeying and you will be disillusioned.

I have heard of churches starving because of their stinginess and saving spirit, but I have never heard of one dying because of its benevolences. Should I hear of one such church, I would make a pilgrimage to it, and I would sit by it in the shining of the moon and I would put my hands upon its moss-clad ruins and while gazing at its venerable resting place, I would say, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." It is not service that kills a church. You can beat the best of churches over the head with the club of idleness and stinginess and kill them dead.

After preaching a missionary sermon, and taking up a great sacrificial offering from the church, the service was dismissed and we gathered in groups in front of the building. A disgruntled, stingy, wetly, spirit, came to me saying, "Parson, you preachers are bleeding the church to death with offerings for missions." I happened to have the figures of that church for missions, and they showed that the church was giving on an average of twelve cents per member for missions, and quickly I replied to him, "Brother, if the blood count of this church for saving the world is down to twelve points, it must be a very anemic congregation." Ah, my friends, no church is being led to death when it gives to missions. It is liberality that pumps life blood into any soul, into any church.

OVER 60,000 ALABAMA FARMS ELECTRIFIED

Over 60,000 Alabama farms—25 per cent of all farms in the state—are electrified. About one-half of these is served by lines financed by federal loans while the other one-half is financed by private companies.

As the Rural Electrification Administration entered its tenth year of operations on May 11, headquarters at St. Louis announced that lines financed by federal loans now bring electric power to more than 33,000 rural consumers in Alabama.

On April 1, 1944, REA had advanced $7,887,728 as loans to 20 borrowers in Alabama. The borrowers had repaid $1,326,704 in principal and interest. Of this amount, $365,779 was paid on the principal in advance of the loan amortization schedules of the borrowers, most of which were originally set up for 25 years. Total delinquencies of the Alabama borrowers in payments due on their REA loans, representing accounts more than 30 days overdue, amounted to only $4,417 on April 1.

COTTON FARMERS PRODUCE TWENTY-SEVEN BILLION POUNDS OF WAR MATERIAL

Twenty-seven billion pounds of produced war materials have been produced by the nation's cotton farmers since Pearl Harbor, from the crops of cotton and cottonseed that they raised in 1942 and 1943.

Whether measured in importance to the armed forces and civilians, or in its huge volume of production and its economic value to the nation, the cotton crop stands unequalled as the nation's "No. 1 War Crop," as well as the No. 1 economic asset of the Cotton Belt.

Essential materials for the armed services and civilians, which caused the Army to call cotton and cottonseed, "the most versatile war material," that have been produced from the 1942 and 1943 crops of cotton include:

2,490,983,000 pounds of cottonseed oil for food.
7,238,672,000 pounds cottonseed meal and cake for feed.
3,806,542,000 pounds cottonseed hulls for feed and war planes.
1,441,471,000 pounds cotton linters for munitions.
12,120,034,000 pounds lint cotton for 11,000 products used by the armed forces.

The Alabama Agricultural Committee is urging that Alabama farm families purchase as many war bonds and stamps as possible during the 5th war loan drive June 12 to July 8. The Alabama quota is 102 million dollars.

ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

What a wonderful feeling it must have been to Jimmie Wyatt when he discovered that the physician who was going to perform an operation on him in England was a Clanton resident and at the same time a close neighbor. It came about like this: Jimmie had been wounded by lack that day and was carried to the hospital. The doctor asked him where he was from and was told Birmingham. Then the doctor mentioned that he was a country doctor from Clanton, Alabama. After that of course, we can well imagine that words flew thick and fast, and surely no boy in the AEF could have been happier than Jimmie when he found himself under the care of a friend and a home town doctor. The doctor was Maj. Samuel Upchurch, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Upchurch. Jimmie is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Wyatt of Montevallo. Incidentally Jimmie got one on a half Jerries that day before Hak got him.

Alex Hayes and wife Reba Payton Hayes were up for a visit with relatives and friends the past week. Both are doing fine and Alex is really enjoying his work. He is Flight Officer at Arcadia, Fla., and says that flying will be his work from now on. Alex helped train one of the flyers who landed Tokyo—by the way.

Dearest, we were sabotaged. We had the most paragraph all figured out about a lady in town happening to be an accident, and now she says if we won't she will shoot us. She's such a nice friend we hate to be shot by her especially. And too, anybody is liable to such an accident if the horse goes wild. But anyway, we are going to say a word about it to you.

The New Woman is getting a mighty good picture now. Two of the week especially received good written or reviews in the daily press. "Salute To The Marines" is one of them and the other is "True to Love."

It was customary in a certain church for the congregation to repeat the Twenty-third Psalm in unison. One devout lady's notion of joining in was to sing about a dozen words ahead of the rest, rough, and to speak in a voice which was sure to be heard.

A chance happened in one Sunday after the service he inquired of an elderly woman sitting next to him: "Who was that lady who was always by the side of the altar while the rest of us were by the side of the green pastures?"

What was carried by Associated Press the other day about Sunshine Chism and the Mrs. wasn't altogether accurate. It was about, you remember, the young man going by his Drug Store to pick up a package on the way to the hospital with his wife to meet the stork. When he went into the store he frightened a would-be burglar away from the safe. He had already taken the combination off the safe the next morning the police, and Sunshine found a stick of dynamite in the hole where the combination was. But, in the meantime his wife had given birth to a fine boy at a prima hospital. Sunshine said it was a good thing he didn't run into that burglar when he went into the store or they would have had twins—he would have had one too.

THORSBY INSTITUTE NEWS

A music recital of the more advanced pupils of Mrs. H. S. Petersen, music teacher of Thorsby Institute, took place on Friday, May 19. The girls glee club and the boys chorus sang very well. The whole program showed excellent training on the part of the teacher. One interesting number was played by four pupils at the same time.

Next Friday night the Seniors will have their class night and play. It is hoped that a large number will be present. Admission will be 25 cents for all over 12 years of age and 15c for those under 12. It will begin at 7:45. Next Saturday night the Alumni will entertain the Seniors at the home of the president, Miss Lillian McKee. It is a good time for graduates of the school to get together and talk over old times. There will be a business meeting of the alumni in Room 2 of the Helen Jenkins hall on Monday morning after the graduating exercises which will probably be over about 12 o'clock. By this time the Senior Class will be graduated and will be alumni too.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock in the Thorsby Institute auditorium will be the Baccalaureate service. The Institute choir will sing. Peggy Franklin will sing a solo. Rev. W. A. Redfield, Dean of Southern Union College, of Wadley, Ala., will preach. A collection will be taken for student aid, this has been the custom for several years.

Monday morning, May 29th at 10:30 there will be the closing Commencement exercises. The two seniors who have stood highest for three years will read their essays, Margaret Lang and Margaret Mims are the ones who will read their essays. The Girls Glee Club and the Boys Chorus will sing. There will be a duo-piano number by Charlene Williams and Eloise Piper. Rev. R. E. Owens, pastor of the Clanton Baptist church will give the Commencement address. There will be a community dinner on the grounds. Every family who is interested in Thorsby Institute, is asked to bring food to contribute toward the dinner. The diplomas will be awarded by the principal, Miss Helen Jenkins.

The library will be open during the summer. The hours to be announced later. They will be posted on the Bulletin board of the post office, and also on the bulletin board of the school.

Commissioner of Agriculture Joe Poole announces that up to May 1 this year fertilizer tag sales in Alabama amounted to 679,600 tons compared with 583,250 tons during the same period last year, a 17 per cent

To Applicants for Electric Service

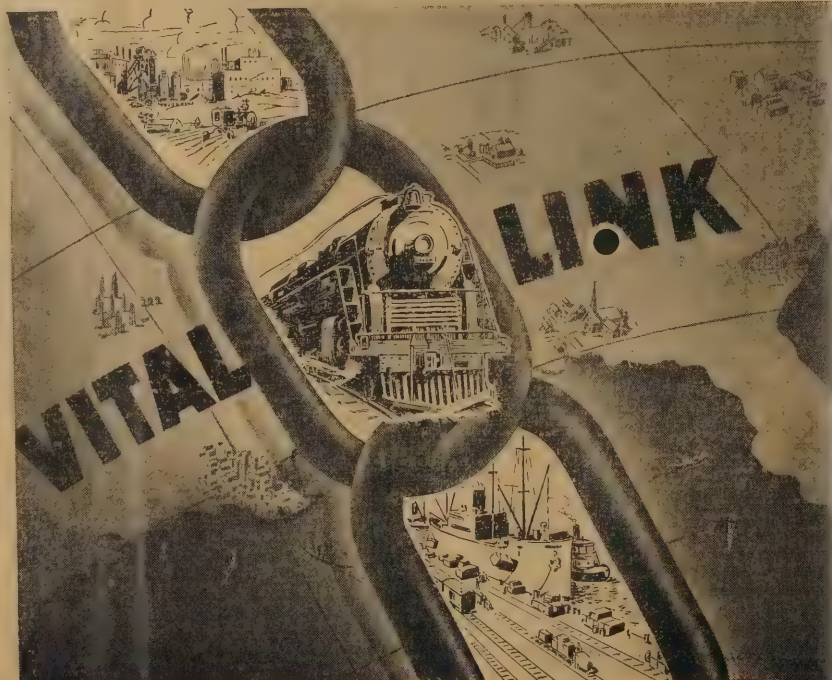

THERE are still unavoidable delays in supplying electric service to new customers. We would like to be in a position to supply service to new applicants promptly but materials and equipment required to serve them promptly are not available. Such materials are being manufactured in only limited quantities; manufacturing facilities of plants making them are still being utilized largely for war production, and rigid WPB restrictions on construction are still in effect.

We are accepting applications for service and are listing them for completion as quickly as materials and equipment are being received, and within the limits of the manpower available to do the work. We hope to reduce the waiting list within the next few months.

Your patience is appreciated in this unusual circumstance in which we cannot extend service as promptly as we would like to.

Accelerated by war demands, export and import traffic handled by "The Old Reliable" has more than doubled since 1939, reaching a total tonnage of over a million net tons in 1943... the equivalent of a mountain of food and war materials one-half mile in circumference and four hundred feet high!

That the L&N is handling this record wartime

Bus Station At Thorsby Burns

The Greyhound Bus Station at Thorsby, burned last Thursday afternoon, following an explosion of a Buane gas tank.

According to M. A. Wright, proprietor, loss was estimated at close to $40,000 and was not covered by insurance.

Franklin Morris, Jr., colored, of Montgomery received burns in the explosion which cost him his life. Eleven mules were also reported burned to death. It is said the mule truck in parking smashed an under-grown butane gas tank causing the damage. The Bus Stop was immediately moved to the Station here.

Army Camps Will Lend Aid To Fifth War Loan Drive

Bands, equipment shows, chemical warfare displays, speakers, paratroopers, baseball teams, entertainment units, jeeps, exhibition gofers, and even hill-billy bands have been made available for use of the War Finance Committee of Alabama by military installations in the state as the men in khaki join with the civilians to make the Fifth War Loan Campaign a success.

Paratroopers will drop from the sky and descend amidst crowds at War Bond rallies at several Alabama towns during the campaign. Once they have landed, these soldiers of the sky will explain their equipment and assist in the selling of Bonds to equip other such units. This attraction is made possible through the cooperation of the Parachute School at Fort Benning, Ga.

From Camp Sibert will go out a chemical warfare unit complete with flame throwers, smoke generators, decontamination units, and colored smoke bombs. Citizens in the towns where this show appears will see exactly how these pieces of chemical warfare equipment are used in combat.

Fort McClellan will send out pieces of heavy artillery equipment together with gun crews to show exactly how it is operated and answer questions which the Bond - buyers ask. They will also have trained speakers, men who have returned from combat, to tell their listeners how War Bond dollars work on the fighting fronts.

Brookley Field will provide a touring equipment show, band, plances, and speakers for rallies in the southwest Alabama area.

The Army air fields in the state, Maxwell, Gunter, Craig, Napier, and Courtland, will make their bands available for use at War Bond gatherings, will aid in providing combat heroes as speakers, and will demonstrate flight formations wherever possible.

Napier Field will also make available a championship baseball team to play local nines, a hill-billy band, an orchestra, a show made up of enlisted personnel, golf exhibitionists, and talented entertainers.

Towns in the vicinity of Camp Rucker will have exhibits of equipment used in training men there.

Tommy Dix, singing star of stage, screen, and radio and who is now retraining his Army training at Fort McClellan, will make numerous appearances at Bond gatherings during the campaign.

Are You Ready, ALABAMA?

FOR YOUR BIGGEST WAR JOB

5th WAR LOAN
JUNE 12th
JULY 8th

BUY MORE THAN BEFORE

STATE GETS CHALLENGE—Alabama was given a new war challenge Wednesday to put the Fifth War Loan over the top quickly and conclusively. The challenge was issued by State War Finance Chairman Ed Leigh McMillan, of Brewton, shown at the left above, and State War Vice-Chairman Frank Samford, of Birmingham, shown at the right above.

Alabama 5th War Loan Workers Given Slogan

State Chairman McMillan Issues New War Loan Challenge

"Meet the Challenge, Alabama!"

This was the slogan given the state's thousands of war bond workers and buyers Wednesday as the Alabama War Finance Committee swung into action for the Fifth War Loan.

Breasting the national slogan, "Back the Attack—Buy More Than Before," but adopting a slogan for the state's own special effort for the coming campaign, State War Finance Chairman Ed Leigh McMillan, of Brewton, and State War

Finance Vice-Chairman Frank Samford, of Birmingham, told the state that it faced its biggest war job.

"Are you ready, Alabama?" was their question as they urged every district and county organization to be ready to open solicitation June 12, the opening day of the drive.

"Alabama has the money to do its part in this biggest of all war bond campaigns," Mr. McMillan said.

"A factual survey of the nation has shown that in other war loans that a great percent of those who were asked to buy bonds, bought them.

"Our job is to have every belt in every county so well organized that every Alabamian, man, woman and child, will be asked to invest their funds in the Fifth War Loan, asked not once, but twice and even three times.

"If we tell them the story of our country's need and the safe value of the nation's war bonds we will 'Meet the Challenge' and we will have done our home front best for the men who are on the fighting fronts of the world.

"Let each of us equal in effort and sacrifice, the effort and sacrifice of those who are advancing to victory under the enemy's brutal fire."

County organizations are being asked to be ready to "Hit the Beach" Monday, June 12 by tuning in to a statewide broadcast and then taking the field to begin active solicitation.

"It is our biggest war job," Mr. Samford pointed out. "It is a job as serious and important as the job that is being done 'over there' by those whom we love and those whom we want to come home as quickly as they can win the victory and insure the peace.

"Get ready now to 'Meet the Challenge, Alabama!'"

Perfect Attendance Certificates Issued

The following children have been present at school and on time every day during the past year. This list is not complete, in that it does not include all the schools of the county. They will appear in the paper next week. Perfect attendance certificates have been given or mailed these children. If any child's name has been omitted who has been perfect in attendance at their schools, the Attendance Supervisor will appreciate having her attention called to it so that corrections may be made.

Chilton County Quota In Bond Drive $474,000

The quota for Chilton County for the Fifth War Loan campaign will be $474,000 of which $226,000 must be sold in E Bonds, it was announced today by J. C. Patillo, chairman of the county War Finance Committee.

Calling attention to the state slogan, "Meet the Challenge, Alabama," the county chairman declared, "These quotas are our challenge. They are large, certainly, but the seem pitifully small when we remember what boys from this county are sacrificing and the perils they are facing. Not one boy from our county has failed to meet the challenge of the battle front bravely when the time came, and we cannot afford to fail in meeting our home front challenge."

Organizational meetings preparatory to the opening of the drive, June 12, have already been held, the county chairman said, and canvassers are being trained to make personal solicitations during the period of the campaign.

SACRED HARP AND CHRISTIAN HARMONY SINGING AT MT. ZION

There will be an all day singing in both the Sacred Harp and Christian Harmony song books at Mt. Zion Baptist Church, the first Sunday in June, this church in the eastern part of the county, out near the river.

Singers who possibly can go, make your plans to "attend" this singing. These people always give the singers a hearty welcome at Mt. Zion, and do they have plenty of nice dinners to feed us.—Mrs Myrtle Jackson.

CANE CREEK

Our annual all day singing and home coming will be held here the 2nd Sunday in June which will be the 11th. We invite all singers to come and help us sing. Bring your song books and let's enjoy the day together. We want to make this a great day so come.

The cemetery is in bad shape. With our boys almost all in the service and help so hard to get, the few of us that tries to keep it clean can't do it like we did when we had help. All who are off and can't come to work please send some money to help have your loved ones graves cleaned. See Mr. Lee Yates at the AAA office in Clanton or send the money to Mr. R. E. Jones, Clanton, Ala., Route 5, at once. The graves need attention now. We need help and the graves need fixing.—Reporter.

IMPORTANCE OF INFANTRY RECOGNIZED IN PROCLAMATION

Recognition of the vital role of the foot soldier in modern warfare was accorded, in proclamation recently issued by Gov. Sparks designating June 15th as "Infantry Day" and calling on people of the State to take this opportunity of honoring the infantryman. Gov. Sparks' proclamation described the infantry as the branch of the service "that has the final heroic job to do in every battle, requiring the highest degree of personal courage in the face of constant danger." June 15 has been selected as "Infantry Day" by the United States Infantry Association.

We had a large crowd out for Sunday School Sunday. Rev Durbin from Friendship preached for us Sunday at 11 o'clock and Rev Sam Connell delivered the message Sunday night. Both sermons were enjoyed by everyone. Rev Baker will preach for us next Sunday and Sunday night. We had visitors with us Sunday night from Dogwood and some from other places. We invite them back again. Let's not forget Sunday School at 10 and preaching at 11.

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

SMILEY BURNETTE, Republic's robust Western comedian, is celebrating his tenth year in films with his current "Border Town Trails." He's had quite a career. After barnstorming the Midwest for years he became the operator of a one-man radio station in central Illinois; he did everything, including writing songs for his programs. One night Gene Autry heard him; next day Smiley joined Autry in Chicago, and shortly afterward they went to Hollywood and into pictures together. Smiley has written more than 200 songs for himself, Autry, Roy Rogers and others in Republic films, and has made almost 100 pictures—and an enviable name for himself.

Nice spot Allan Jones landed in, with Universal Pictures demanding that he return to Hollywood to star in a new picture, while he, starring in his own radio show on Wednesdays and on "Broadway Matinee" Thursdays, could afford to refuse.

ALLAN JONES

He thought they could have used him before he signed his radio contracts, that it was his radio work that made them want him back—and he still shudders when recalling that he was assigned to a picture called "Paradise Isle," in which he was to play a singing newspaperman.

Cantinflas, Mexico's spectacular comedian, said to combine Will Rogers' acting gifts and Charles Chaplin's pantomime, is to make a picture under the auspices of RKO and Posa Films of Mexico. It will be his last appearance in an English-speaking production, and Mexican and American talent will be combined for the picture, which will get under way within the next three or four months.

Dennis Morgan's fan mail has been steadily increasing since the release of his first starring picture, "The Hard Way"; now it's reported that he has more than any other Warner Bros. star during April. He's starred in two pictures now in general release, "The Desert Song" and "Shine On Harvest Moon," and will play the lead in "Christmas in Connecticut," opposite Barbara Stanwyck.

Keenan Wynn says that, on that trip to China, Burma, and practically everywhere, the GIs, sitting in the rain, insisted that he and Bill Gar- gan work out in the rain. Andy Ar- carci could stay under the canvas covering, to keep his instrument dry. And as for Paulette Goddard, she could work under the cover; in fact, the soldiers made every effort to do everything they could for her.

If anyone thinks that Ginger Rogers is afraid of competition, the line-up for "Tender Comrade" is the answer. Three top-flight women stars who've made their mark on Broadway as well as in films are in the case: Ruth Hussey, Patricia Collinge and Mady Christians.

Dix Davis, who plays "Judy," brother on NBC's "Date with Judy," has just turned 16, and is a freshman at the University of Southern California, but he seems to have a touch of superman in his makeup. He keeps near the head of his class, and maintains a schedule of eight radio shows a week; he's heard on six other radio shows besides "Date with Judy."

Arthur Lake, "Dagwood" of the "Blondie" series, has spent most of his life as an actor bringing comic strip characters to life. He first came to prominence with his portrayal of "Harold Teen," then was chosen as a natural for "Dagwood" on both air and screen.

ODDS AND ENDS—The slogan Sammy Kaye features on his "Sunday Serenade," "Let's all do more in '44," has received permanent status. "Nita Ross, 18, new singer on Xavier Cugat's program, made her radio debut on Major Bowes' amateur program during the "Our Hearts Were Young" Gay! Gail Russell suffered from tooth trouble; it seemed that the greater she, the more comic the scene. Burgess Meredith, now an actor, learned fans haven't forgotten him. They mobbed him for autographs after he appeared on the "Kate Smith Hour."

Let's Face Facts

Coming Big Expansion
Of Radio Broadcasting
Opens Exciting Vistas
By BARROW LYONS
WNU Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.

A new idea of what radio will mean after the war was given to me the other evening at supper by a man who I don't know. His ingenuity has played an important part in improving the quality of radio broadcasting during peace, and he is today playing an important part in winning the war by helping to keep our radio and radar development one jump ahead of the enemy.

The man was John V. L. Hogan, special assistant to the War Office of scientific research and development, and president of the New York radio station WQXR, which has presented exceptional programs. Commercial radio, he said, stands on the threshold of tremendous expansion and improvement. During the war great technical progress for military purposes has been made in radar and television, but also important advances have been effected in sound transmission by other waves.

When the war ends this technical progress will be transferred to commercial broadcasting by freeing our vastly expanded manufacturing facilities and releasing thousands of technicians.

Mr. Hogan believes this will mean not only improvement in the programs offered to owners of radio and television sets in and near the large cities, but that daylight broadcasting of better programs to the most remote sections of the country will become a reality.

It is not generally known that at present about one-eighth of the people who live in the country areas get no radio service whatever in daylight hours, even from the most powerful broadcasting stations. During the daytime only the "ground waves" can be transmitted by the ordinary radio station, and these have an effective sending radius of only 100 to 150 miles. When the "heavily layered" is formed in the upper atmosphere after darkness, radio impulses are reflected from the larger sending stations for about 750 miles.
